AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS

1939 Supplement to the 1938 Year Book

THE American College of Surgeons published a complete Year Book in January, 1938. The fore part of the supplement for 1939 includes information essential to bring up to date the activities of the College, and there follows the supplemental list of Fellows of the College for 1938. (Geographical list, with specialties indicated, pages 73 to 94. Alphabetical list, with degrees and appointments indicated, pages 95 to 115.)

This supplement is cut to fit the 1938 Year Book. The strip of cloth which is stitched onto the supplement is gummed on one side. Please attach the supplement between the front cover and the fly leaf of the 1938 Year Book.

PRESIDENT 1938-1939

FELLOWSHIP PLEDGE

RECOGNIZING that the American College of Surgeons seeks to develop, exemplify, and enforce the highest traditions of our calling, I hereby pledge myself, as a condition of Fellowship in the College, to live in strict accordance with all its principles, declarations, and regulations. * * In particular, I pledge myself to pursue the practice of surgery with thorough self-restraint and to place the welfare of my patients above all else; to advance constantly in knowledge by the study of surgical literature, the instruction of eminent teachers, interchange of opinion among associates, and attendance on the important societies and clinics; to regard scrupulously the interests of my professional brothers and seek their counsel when in doubt of my own judgment; to render willing help to my colleagues and to give freely my services to the needy. * * Moreover, I pledge myself, so far as I am able, to avoid the sins of selfishness; to shun unwarranted publicity, dishonest money-seeking, and commercialism as disgraceful to our profession; to refuse utterly all money trades with consultants, practitioners or others; to teach the patient his financial duty to the physician and to expect the practitioner to obtain his compensation directly from the patient; to make my fees commensurate with the service rendered and with the patient's rights; and to avoid discrediting my associates by taking unwarranted compensation. * * Finally, I pledge myself to co-operate in advancing and extending, by every lawful means within my power, the influence of the American College of Surgeons.

AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS—ORGANIZATION CHART

REQUIREMENTS FOR FELLOWSHIP

1. The applicant shall be a graduate in medicine, who is licensed to practice in his respective state, province, or country, or who is a medical officer of the federal service.

2. The applicant to be eligible for fellowship shall be a graduate of a medical school approved by the American College of Surgeons.

3. The applicant shall give evidence that he has served at least one year as interne in an acceptable hospital and two years as surgical assistant, or he shall give evidence of apprenticeship of equivalent value. Seven years after graduation in medicine, devoted to special training and to practice, is normally the time requirement for eligibility to fellowship. Due importance is attached to supplementary study and training for surgery.

4. The applicant's moral and ethical fitness shall be determined by reports of surgeons whose names are submitted by the applicant himself, and by such other reports and data as the credentials committees and the administrators of the College may obtain.

5. The applicant's professional activity shall be restricted to the study, diagnosis, and operative work in general surgery or in special fields of surgery. Each case shall be judged on its individual merits as to the professional ability, training and experience of the applicant in the particular field of surgery in which he is engaged. The College desires to admit to its fellowship only those who are primarily specialists in surgery, and the minimum proportion of specialization which is acceptable may vary according to the character and size of the community in which the applicant resides.

6. The applicant shall make formal application for fellowship. Blank forms for this purpose may be obtained from the central office of the College upon request.

7. The applicant in making application for fellowship shall sign a declaration which reads:

"Upon my honor as a gentleman, I hereby declare that I will not practice the division of fees, either directly or indirectly, in any manner whatsoever."

8. As evidence of his qualifications in the technique of surgery, the candidate is required to submit 100 case records of major work, 50 records in complete detail and 50 in abstract. The series of 50 detailed records must be of major work done by the candidate and for which he was the responsible surgeon. This series of records should be of comparatively recent work and should not date back further than two or three years from the time of the submission of the histories after recommendation for fellowship by the Credentials Committee. A variety of major procedures rather than a number of cases of one type should be included. The series of 50 abstracted records must be of work in which the candidate has acted as assistant, or which he performed himself independently or under supervision.

Candidates who have been certificated by the American Board of Ophthalmology, the American Board of Otolaryngology, the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, the American Board of Urology, or the American Board of Orthopedic Surgery, and who have been recommended for fellowship by their respective State, Provincial or other unit Credentials Committees will be required to submit only one-half of the number of case records; that is, 25 in complete detail and 25 in abstract. This does not imply that the College declines to admit to fellowship candidates practicing in these specialties who have not been certificated by one of the Boards.

A candidate who has had graduate training for surgery through a residency or fellowship in an acceptable institution or institutions, and who meets the requirements in all other respects, may submit 25 of the required detailed records from work done during his period of residency, the other 25 detailed records to be taken from his independent practice.

A candidate who has spent at least four years in special training for surgery in an acceptable institution or institutions, and who has not entered independent practice but has remained exclusively in institutional work, and in all other respects meets the requirements for fellowship, may submit the required case records from his institutional work.

9. Surgeons widely recognized by the profession as progressive leaders and exponents of finished technique, and teachers with full professorial status in the various departments of surgery and its specialties in approved medical schools may, by a unanimous vote of the Board of Regents, be admitted to fellowship without examination, on unanimous recommendation of the committees on credentials.

10. The fellowship fee shall be $100, payable upon notification of election to fellowship. The annual dues shall be $25, payable January 1.

11. The Regents of the College reserve the right to alter, as they may think proper, the regulations respecting admission of Fellows to the College.

NOTE: Applicants for fellowship whose qualifying medical degree shall have been obtained after the date of January 1, 1938, shall be required to present evidence of having completed three years of hospital service in one or more acceptable hospitals, of which two years shall have been spent in training in surgery in hospitals approved by the American College of Surgeons. In the case of graduates of medical schools which withhold the medical degree until after the fifth year of hospital internship, the date set will be January 1, 1939.

PROCEDURE IN CONSIDERING APPLICANTS FOR FELLOWSHIP

The by-laws provide that there shall be local Credentials Committees distributed geographically by states, provinces, countries, or other units, and a Central Credentials Committee.

Any legalized practitioner in medicine may apply for fellowship, or a request may be made by any Fellow of the College or other member of the medical profession, that application forms be sent to a surgeon who, in his opinion, is qualified and could meet the requirements for fellowship.

The formal application for fellowship, which is required of every applicant, includes the following information: Date and place of birth; preliminary education; medical schools attended as an undergraduate and as a graduate; hospitals in which internship or residency was served and dates of service; period of assistantship and with whom; states, provinces, or countries in which the applicant is licensed to practice; past and present hospital connections; medical teaching positions; postgraduate study; research conducted; specialty and period of specialization; percentage of professional activity devoted to surgery or one of the surgical specialties; medical society affiliations; and a list of personal contributions to medical literature. The applicant is also required to furnish three references, and to sign a pledge against the practice of the division of fees.

Upon receipt of the formal application, the College reviews the statements recorded therein. Each individual given as reference is communicated with and is asked to fill out a comprehensive questionnaire that will furnish definite statements about the applicant's surgical training, judgment, and ability, and information about his moral and ethical standing. A questionnaire is also sent to other Fellows of the College who live in the city or vicinity in which the applicant is practicing.

In such cities and states as have established Committees on Applicants, each applicant is given the opportunity of an interview with the Committee on Applicants for the purpose of presenting detailed information concerning his special training for surgical work, clinical experience, present surgical activity, and any further data which would have a bearing upon his application for fellowship.

After the interview and other investigation the Committee on Applicants makes a report upon the applicant's qualifications from the following aspects: academic qualifications, training, experience, evaluation of surgical judgment and surgical ability, ethical and professional qualifications, and such other criteria as may assist the Credentials Committees in arriving at a decision.

When all of the data received from this preliminary survey are complete, these data are summarized and the applicant's application is presented to the Credentials Committee of his state, province, country, or other unit for consideration and recommendation.

Each Credentials Committee holds one meeting a year. In advance of such meeting a list of the applicants to be considered, with summarized information regarding their respective qualifications, is sent to each member of the committee so that he may be in a position to evaluate the qualifications of the applicants. An official of the College is present at each meeting of a Credentials Committee, and this official has in his possession all information obtained by the central office that may have a bearing on the eligibility of the applicants to be considered. The Credentials Committee, acting as a preliminary court, makes its recommendation upon the information submitted by the applicant on his application blank, by the individual members of the Committee, the Committee on Applicants, and the representative from the central office.

The Committee is urged to consider carefully the surgical qualifications of the applicant, his standing in the community, his moral conduct, his general reliability, his ethical standing, including his attitude toward "fee splitting."

Each member of each committee assumes full responsibility; the action on each applicant is taken through a motion duly made, seconded, and carried, all members of the committee voting, and is recorded by the secretary.

Applicants recommended by their respective local Credentials Committees and the Central Credentials Committee are given opportunity to furnish to the College the required number of case records of major surgical work.

The case records submitted by candidates for fellowship are referred to the Committee on History Reviews, which Committee is composed of approximately twenty teachers of surgery and surgical specialties from approved medical schools in Chicago. The Committee meets regularly throughout the year for the review of the case histories submitted. A staff official of the College meets with the Committee.

After each set of records has been reviewed, a summary of the findings with the recommendation signed by the examiner is attached to the records for the guidance of the Central Committee on Credentials. Each case record is verified by the hospital in which the operations have been performed.

Finally, all accumulated evidence that has come into the executive offices is brought before the Central Committee on Credentials, which, as the higher court, peruses in detail the record of each candidate, sifts all of the evidence on file in regard to his qualifications, including the reports of the local Credentials Committee and the Committee on History Reviews, and makes its recommendation to the Board of Regents.

One of three recommendations is made by the Central Committee: acceptance, postponement, or non-acceptance. Action may be postponed to enable the executive office to secure further evidence of the candidate's fitness or unfitness for fellowship; to afford the candidate an opportunity to submit further essential data in connection with his records or to submit additional records; or to give him opportunity for further study, training, and experience to qualify for fellowship. The central office endeavors to give every candidate for fellowship such information as will aid him to complete his fellowship.

After the candidate has passed successfully all of the requirements under the careful surveillance of the College, he is notified of his acceptance and sent instructions regard to receiving his fellowship.

It is absolutely necessary that the uniform regulations for the admission of applicants to fellowship, formulated by the executive officers after years of experience should be disinterestedly observed. Even though the applicant may appear most worthy, short-cut methods cannot be employed without subjecting the committees to severe criticism and lessening the judicial standing of the College.

The central office for obvious reasons must decline to furnish information concerning an application for fellowship to other than the applicant himself.

Any applicant who is not accepted, or upon whose application action has been deferred, may appeal to the Board of Regents.

THE JUNIOR CANDIDATE GROUP

The purpose in establishing the Junior Candidate Group was to bring the younger medical graduates, who signify their intention of entering the surgical field, under the influence of the ethical and educational purposes for which the College stands, thereby rendering a real service to the younger surgeon at a time when he needs guidance on questions of education, training, affiliation, and other professional problems.

The time requirement for eligibility to make application to the Junior Candidate Group is from two to seven years after the receipt of the qualifying medical degree.

Any legalized practitioner of medicine who has been graduated from an approved medical school for a minimum period of two years, and not more than seven years, and who plans to specialize in surgery or some branch of surgery, may apply for membership in the Junior Candidate Group. He may personally request an application blank, or such request may be made in his behalf by a member of the medical profession who is in good standing.

An applicant for the Junior Candidate Group is required to give on his application blank the same information as is required from the applicant for fellowship, and he is also required to sign the declaration against the division of fees.

By means of a supplementary blank sent annually to the Junior Candidate, he makes a report of his progress in special training for surgery acquired from assistantships, residencies, postgraduate work, through formal courses under the auspices of recognized medical schools and clinics, observation at clinics, and research work. All of these data are placed on file and become a part of the credentials of the candidate.

A Junior Candidate is not required to submit any case records, but it is suggested that he keep a complete record of his surgical work, that this information may be readily available when it is asked for by the College. The applications for the Junior Candidate Group are submitted to the Credentials Committees of the respective states, provinces, and other units at their regularly called meetings.

Endorsement of an applicant for the Junior Candidate Group by the Credentials Committee is effective for one year only, the applications being reconsidered each year by the committees during the period of the candidate's eligibility to the Group.

An endorsed applicant for the Junior Candidate Group may remain a member of the Junior Candidate Group while he continues his training in surgery, and until he is eligible to make application for fellowship.

If a candidate fails to live up to the established ideals and principles of the College, enters medical practice, or for other sufficient reason is no longer eligible for membership in the Junior Candidate Group, the local Credentials Committee may recommend at any meeting that his name be dropped from the Junior Candidate Group.

Provision has been made for the appointment of a Fellow of the College to act as a counselor to each Junior Candidate during his period of membership in the Junior Candidate Group. The duties of the counselor are to advise the candidate regarding adequate training in surgery, to stimulate him to take advantage of opportunities for training in surgical work, and to inform him regarding ethical relations and all other subjects which have a bearing on his professional career as a surgeon.

There is also extended to the members of the Junior Candidate Group the privilege of attending the annual and sectional meetings of the College, and there are sent to them the BULLETINS and other publications of the College which are deemed to be of interest and value to them.

A Junior Candidate is eligible to make application for fellowship seven years after the receipt of the qualifying medical degree. When his application for fellowship is received, his name is presented to the respective Credentials Committee as an applicant for fellowship. After he is recommended for fellowship by the Credentials Committee, he is given an opportunity to submit the case histories and to fulfill all other requirements for fellowship.

STATE, PROVINCIAL AND UNIT CREDENTIALS COMMITTEES

Histories reviewed.....	611
Histories accepted.....	529
Histories not accepted.....	82
Histories not reviewed.....	10

Of the 529 applicants whose histories were approved, 433 were recommended in 1938, and 96 had been recommended previously.

The work of reviewing the records submitted, which was carried on by the Committee on History Reviews, required many hours of time in the evenings at meetings held at the headquarters of the College where all case records are reviewed.

The histories which were recognized as being of unusual merit were segregated and were the subject of a special review of the committee for the selection of the series which was considered from the standpoint of completeness, accuracy, and form of presentation to merit the annual prize, the award of a life membership. The name of the Fellow appears on page 61.

Much credit is due the Credentials Committees of the states, provinces, countries, and other units, for maintaining the high standard of the fellowship of the College through their untiring work, the judicious manner in which all applications for fellowship are considered, and the painstaking study of the histories submitted. The members of these committees give generously of their time without financial return.

GRADUATE TRAINING FOR SURGERY

(GENERAL SURGERY AND THE SURGICAL SPECIALTIES)

BY action of the Board of Regents of the American College of Surgeons during the Clinical Congress in 1937, a Committee on Graduate Training for Surgery was established to cover the fields of general surgery and the surgical specialties. The membership of the committee is as follows:

DALLAS B. PHEMISTER, Chicago, Chairman

DONALD C. BALFOUR, Rochester

EVARTS A. GRAHAM, St. Louis

JOHN R. FRASER, Montreal

ALBERT C. FURSTENBERG, Ann Arbor

HARRY S. GRADLE, Chicago

PHILIP D. WILSON, New York

The committee held an all day session in the home office of the College on November 28, 1937, and another on February 11, 1938. A survey was made of the general field and general criteria discussed for graduate training in surgery. Two problems obviously presented themselves. One was the more abstract problem of the establishment of facilities for ideal training in general surgery and the surgical specialties. The other was the concrete problem of establishing such facilities as are called for to meet the requirements for fellowship in the American College of Surgeons for graduates in medicine after the year 1938—namely, two years of supervised training beyond the internship.

The following recommendations concerning surgical residencies in hospitals were agreed upon:

1. General Principles. (a) The program of courses for surgical residents in hospitals should be kept as flexible as possible; (b) ample free time should be allowed the residents for non-clinical work; (c) the residents should be allowed to develop their previous experience and their natural bent in any special basic science.

2. Two-Year Residency. (a) Clinical service—in-patient and out-patient service should occupy the major part of the resident's time; (b) non-clinical service—a minimum of 4 months in pathology should be spent by the resident, and he should be given encouragement for systematic reading of surgical literature and attendance at staff conferences.

3. Three-Year or More Residency. This should be the same as for the two-year residency with (1) increasing surgical responsibility and training and with (2) greater emphasis on training in the basic sciences and more time allotted therefor with provision of opportunity for research for qualified men.

4. Adequate Organization and Functioning of the Attending Staff for the Program in Graduate Instruction. A well organized medical staff with department chiefs should be provided and they should be responsible for the organization and operation of the graduate training program. This is one of the most important requisites and may be the determining factor in the success or failure of a graduate training program in any given hospital. Staff organization must be very definite, and specific responsibilities must be assumed by designated individuals. This presupposes the ability of the medical staff and the administration to overcome local prejudices and jealousies in making appointments. Those responsible for graduate training for surgery must be chosen solely on the basis of ability, aptitude, and interest. Too often expediency is the major consideration in filling important and responsible positions on the hospital staff. Adequate organization of the medical staff presupposes the careful selection of the chief of staff and the various heads of departments. They should be exclusive specialists in their respective fields. They must be of high scholastic and professional standing and must possess the attributes of a teacher.

The professional staff of the College had already made a partial survey of the facilities of hospitals and medical schools for graduate training in surgery, following recommendations of a committee, of which Dr. Samuel C. Harvey, Professor of Surgery, Yale University School of Medicine, was chairman, appointed by the Board of Regents in October, 1934. Concurrently with the work of Dr. Harvey and his committee, an analysis was made by Associate Director, Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, of the reports accumulated through the surveys of hospitals. The resultant report was submitted to the Board of Regents in May, 1936, and approved in principle, with the request that the details be studied further as the program developed. The data accumulated at the beginning of 1937 warranted an actual survey of a group of approximately 140 selected hospitals to elicit further information and to confirm or disprove impressions already gained from observations and opinions. It was believed that a special study of a selected group of hospitals might give a fairly comprehensive cross section of the whole situation pertaining to opportunities and criteria for graduate training for surgery. It became obvious that three or more years of training was to be had, mainly in hospitals closely connected with medical schools, and that the number of places in such institutions was limited. Two years of training was available in many teaching and non-teaching hospitals but in many instances the opportunities offered were considered unsatisfactory.

In the January, 1938, issue of the BULLETIN were published, in addition to papers presented in the Symposium on Graduate Training for Surgery held at the 1937 Clinical Congress, criteria and a manual for graduate training in general surgery and the surgical specialties, developed by Dr. MacEachern following analysis of plans in effect and consideration of ways and means by which additional hospitals could provide acceptable training.

During the current year the College staff has continued the survey with great energy and at the present time that task is mainly complete. The summaries on the opposite page give an idea of the accomplishments.

In the course of the survey the field workers have found great interest manifested in the subject by hospital superintendents, attending staffs, and particularly resident staffs, who are desirous of seeing facilities improved and maintained at a level which insures adequate training and meets the standards set by the College. It is obvious that the activities of the College are hastening the creation of facilities for graduate training. The field workers have been called upon by the hospitals for help in the inauguration of the programs and several institutions have already either started afresh with a resident system or improved existing resident facilities.

But much time, expense, and work will be required to complete the program and institutions will be approved by the College for graduate training for surgery only as they bring their standards up to a point where the efficiency of the trainee is assured.

The data on which this report is based are from the findings of surveys of hospitals, from the viewpoint of facilities for graduate training in surgery, by Assistant Directors E. W. Williamson, M. N. Newquist, and Harold Earnheart.

There was presented at the Twenty-first Hospital Standardization Conference in October, 1938, a symposium on the content of courses for graduate training for general surgery and the surgical specialties. (For the program, see page 54.) The various papers of this symposium and other presentations bearing on the subject, together with a list of hospitals approved for graduate training for general surgery and the surgical specialties, so far as the survey will have been completed, will be published in the January, 1939, BULLETIN of the American College of Surgeons.

CLINICAL RESEARCH

REPORT OF THE DEPARTMENT OF CLINICAL RESEARCH

I HAVE the honor to present the report of the work of the Department of Clinical Research since the last annual meeting. This department correlates the work of the individual scientific committees as follows:

Registry of Bone Sarcoma
Treatment of Malignant Diseases
Fractures
Industrial Medicine and Traumatic Surgery
Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery.

The work of the individual committees will be presented by their respective chairmen. My report will consist of a summary, drawing attention to some of the most prominent work of the committees during the year.

The Registry of Bone Sarcoma has been, it appears to me, of increased educational value during the year. This is accounted for by the considerable number of individuals and groups who have used the material of the Registry for study purposes. An interesting sidelight on this is furnished by the fact that a number of candidates for examination by the specialty boards have asked for the privilege of reviewing some of our material in preparation for their examinations.

The committee met on October 20 for further consideration of possible changes in nomenclature of bone tumors, their discussion centering around an article on the subject which had been prepared by Dr. James Ewing at the request of the committee.

There have been some additions to the number of five-year cures which will appear in the committee report.

An interim report has been furnished to the Board of Regents concerning some phases of the work of the Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases. There has been submitted a list of 272 cancer clinics for approval, which is an increase of 32 during the year. This extension of the work has been extremely pleasing. There has been increased interest taken by a number of large institutions through the country whose names appear on the list of approved cancer clinics in 1938 for the first time. Many of these will eventually form centers for the training of men in cancer diagnosis and therapy.

An enlargement of our work in connection with cancer clinics is made possible through a grant-in-aid from the National Cancer Institute in Washington. We were fortunate in securing the services of a man well trained in cancer to conduct this work which is now in active progress. In addition, a regular employee of the United States Public Health Service has been assigned to work along these same lines with the College.

State and county medical societies and departments of health have fostered the formation of cancer clinics, and we are now making an appraisal of the value of the different programs that have been drawn up by these organizations.

The work of the College on cancer clinics received considerable recognition by a Legislative Cancer Survey Commission in the State of New York, and we are actively co-operating with this and other organizations.

The subject of cancer was featured at all of our sectional meetings during 1938 with the active co-operation of the Chairman of the Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases, Dr. Adair, and a good cancer program was prepared for the Clinical Congress.

The Committee on Fractures held its annual meeting in February at New York. The formation of Regional Fracture Committees has progressed until now they number 66, with a total membership of 1,054. Nine members of the Committee on Fractures attended the sectional meetings where they presented scientific papers on the subject of fractures and discussed with members of the Regional Fracture Committees methods of more effectively directing their energies for improvement in the care of fractures. Our co-operation with the American Red Cross has continued. Additional exhibits on fractures have been prepared for the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery.

The medical services in industry have been surveyed by our field representatives in the course of their itineraries, but the number of such industries surveyed this year is much less than in any previous year since we undertook the work, there having been only 74 surveys of which 21 were resurveys. The chairman of the committee, Dr. Besley, will report active co-operation with the Council on Industrial Health of the American Medical Association. Members of the committee, including the chairman, have appeared before a number of national organizations of industrialists where they have had an opportunity of informing their audiences concerning methods of caring for the ill and injured employees.

During the year the monograph entitled, Medical Services in Industry and Workmen's Compensation Laws, prepared by Dr. Newquist, was republished after being brought up to date, and this has had a wide distribution. There has been a large demand for this publication and it has received editorial and review notices in medical and in industrial journals to an extent that indicates its worth.

Certain additions to the exhibits in the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery have been made during the year, including another from the Chairman of the Board of Regents.

In conclusion may I say that this year has placed all of the activities comprised within the Department of Clinical Research on a sounder basis, and the facilities of the department have been utilized by the Fellows to a greater extent than before.

Respectfully submitted,

BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Director of Clinical Research.

During the year the room in which are the exhibits prepared for the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery has been completely renovated, and the exhibits rearranged in a manner better to display them. Certain additions to the exhibits have been made including another from the Chairman of your Board. Other Fellows of the College who work in general surgery and in ophthalmology have promised exhibits to us which will be received during the coming year. We are still awaiting funds to make possible the accomplishment of this phase of the College work.

Material from the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery has been placed on exhibit at the following places during the year: sectional meetings at Houston, Milwaukee, Toronto; Chicago Dental Society, Chicago, February 15-18; Provident Hospital, Chicago, May 12; Georgia Dental Association, Macon, May 16-18; Hall of Health, Springfield, May 16-20; American Association of Industrial Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, June 6-8; American Association of Railway Surgeons, Chicago, September 19-21.

It is a pleasure to be able to report increased activity on the part of the College with relation to the cancer problem during the past year.

Members of the Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases have attended sectional meetings where they have presented different phases of the scientific aspect of cancer and have discussed problems with relation to cancer clinics with the local groups which are conducting such clinics. In each place in which a sectional meeting was held a cancer clinic was one of the features of the program. These clinics are assuming a rôle of prime importance in the attack upon the cancer problem.

A definite co-operative relation between the College and the National Cancer Institute has been established and an opportunity afforded of free discussion of problems. With the help of a grant-in-aid from the National Cancer Institute the College is able to put into the field two men well trained in cancer work for extension of the cancer clinic program. This will enable us to have a closer check on the existing cancer clinics and to stimulate the formation of a considerable number of new cancer clinics. It is unnecessary to draw attention to the better opportunity that this will afford to the cancer patient in securing the benefits of modern methods of diagnosis and treatment.

I am making certain definite recommendations to the administrative staff of the College concerning additional activities along cancer lines that the College, in my opinion, may well pursue.

Respectfully submitted,
FRANK E. ADAIR, Chairman.

CANCER CLINICS

Total cancer clinics surveyed.....	332
Approved cancer clinics in general hospitals.....	177
Provisionally approved cancer clinics in general hospitals.....	44
Approved cancer diagnostic clinics.....	42
Hospitals with departments conducting approved cancer clinics ...	9
Total approved cancer clinics.....	272

The publication of the list of 272 approved cancer clinics in no way indicates that effective cancer treatment cannot be obtained elsewhere, but serves to show that these institutions have formally organized for this purpose as part of a countrywide campaign in behalf of the cancer patient.

In addition to the list of approved cancer clinics the College has information concerning 60 other cancer clinics which for one reason or another are not yet ready for a rating by the College, and still another 83 hospitals have definitely signified their contemplation of the formation of such clinics in the future.

The addition of 32 cancer clinics to the approved list during the year and the removal of 9 from the approved list indicates a very pleasing progress in this activity.

The list of the hospitals which are conducting cancer clinics which conform to the minimum standard of the College for cancer clinics was published in the October, 1938, BULLETIN of the College.

CHARLES L. CONNOR, San Francisco	CHANNING C. SIMMONS, Boston

There are at present 2,175 cases in the Registry, 77 of which have been registered since the last report. Thirty-five additional cases were submitted but for various reasons could not be registered.

During the past year 939 cases were circulated to 29 doctors for their study and opinions. Several groups of similar cases and groups of different tumors in one location have been intensively studied and analyzed by members of the Committee and by others and their studies are being embodied in monographs published by themselves.

A complete review of all of the material in the Registry is being made from a radiological standpoint by Dr. Albert B. Ferguson, Radiologist, which will be embodied in a monograph upon completion of the work. A considerable number of foreigners, as well as citizens of our own country, have spent from a week to a month reviewing the material of the Registry in Chicago.

The registered cases are classified as follows:

Osteogenic sarcoma... 1029	Benign Giant Cell	Xanthoma..... 1
Ewing's sarcoma.... 236	Tumor..... 359	Parosteal Fibrolipoma 2
Myeloma..... 84	Giant Cell Tumor,	Reticulum Cell
Lymphosarcoma.... 19	Malignant..... 19	Sarcoma..... 10
Inflammation..... 101	Benign Osteogenic	Adamantinoma..... 6
Periosteal	Tumor..... 72	Not Bone Tumors... 23
Fibrosarcoma..... 32	Parosteal Osteogenic	Unclassified and
Metastatic Tumor... 65	Sarcoma..... 6	Miscellaneous..... 70
Vessel Tumor..... 36	Liposarcoma..... 5	Total in Registry. 2,175

There are 760 cases of osteogenic and 164 cases of Ewing's sarcoma that were treated 5 years or more ago.

Since Dr. Codman's original report in 1926 of 13 registered cases of five-year cures of osteogenic sarcoma the number has risen this year to 101 cases of osteogenic sarcoma and 14 cases of Ewing's sarcoma. These patients have lived clinically free from the disease for a period of 5 years or more following treatment.

Five of the original 13 cases reported by Dr. Codman have died; B.S.R. No. 100 died 11 years after treatment with metastases in the spine, ribs, and lungs, after having been clinically free of the disease for 10 years or more; B.S.R. No. 50 died of paralysis 24 years and 9 months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 29 died from cancer of the breast 17 years and 5 months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 501 died of cardio-vascular disease 22 years after treatment; and B.S.R. No. 64 died from an acute septic sore throat 26 years and 10 months after treatment. The other 8 original "cures" are still alive and free from the disease at the time of the latest report.

Nine of the other cases here reported have died after the expiration of the five-year period; B.S.R. No. 1437 from cardiac and cerebral sclerosis; B.S.R. No. 176 following a prostatectomy; B.S.R. No. 970 with probable pulmonary metastases 8 years after treatment; B.S.R. No. 156, 9 years after treatment from heart disease without recurrence of the tumor; B.S.R. No. 1025 from metastases 12 years and 2 months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 1124 from metastases 8 years and 4 months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 955 from general visceral and subcutaneous 8 years and 6 months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 147 from acute pneumonia 13 years and 10 months after treatment; and B.S.R. No. 365 died from cancer of the breast 12 years and 5 months after treatment.

One case (B.S.R. No. 1254) of osteogenic sarcoma of the humerus has developed a pulmonary lesion 7 years following amputation, and is now under treatment.

At least two cases (B.S.R. No. 183 and 267) have had definite evidence of metastases which have disappeared after treatment.

Ninety-eight of the 101 five-year cures of osteogenic sarcoma were treated by surgical methods, and of these 51 had surgical methods only. In the other 50 cases surgery was supplemented by radium or x-ray treatment or Coley toxins or some combination of these agents. In 20 of the cases Coley toxins were administered.

The cases in which amputation was not performed are as follows:

- B.S.R. No. 668. Local excision of tumor of lower part of femur followed by radium.
- B.S.R. No. 183. Local excision of tumor of lower part of tibia followed by radium and Coley toxins.
- B.S.R. No. 523. Excision of tumor of ilium followed by radium.
- B.S.R. No. 585. Tumor of ilium treated by x-rays only.
- B.S.R. No. 1489. Tumor of ilium treated by x-rays and excision.
- B.S.R. No. 109. Tumor of rib treated by resection followed by radium.
- B.S.R. No. 373. Tumor of rib was explored and then treated by radium and Coley toxins.
- B.S.R. No. 759. Tumor of scapula treated by excision and x-rays.
- B.S.R. No. 867. Tumor of scapula treated by excision alone.
- B.S.R. No. 1523. Tumor of humerus treated by excision alone.
- B.S.R. No. 1625. Tumor of humerus treated by resection followed by transplantation.

It is interesting to note that 30 of the cases had some form of operative procedure on the tumor at periods of 1 day to 5 years prior to amputation. These operative procedures consisted of single or multiple biopsies, curettages, explorations, excisions or resections.

Ewing's Sarcoma. Fourteen of the registered cases of Ewing's sarcoma have lived from 5 to 21 years following treatment. These occurred in a group of 164 cases that were treated 5 years or more ago.

Thirteen of the cases were subjected to surgery. In 8 of them amputation was performed; in 3 there were excisions. B.S.R. No. 893, a tumor of the rib, was treated by resection followed by x-ray, B.S.R. No. 1932, a tumor of the right hip, was treated by resection followed by x-ray. One case B.S.R. No. 1756, a tumor of the upper half of the shaft of femur was treated by x-ray and Coley toxins alone without surgical procedure other than biopsy. Five of the 8 amputated cases also received Coley toxins and, of these, 6 had radiation in one form or another. Five of the 8 amputated cases had one or more surgical procedures at some period prior to the amputation.

One of the cases here reported, B.S.R. No. 515, died of an unknown cause 7½ years after treatment.

A meeting of the committee was held on October 20 for further discussion of the classification of bone tumors, the discussion having been based upon an article on the subject prepared by Dr. Ewing. It is probable that modification of the nomenclature which has been in use by the Registry since its inception will be adopted on account of the knowledge which has been acquired by the study of the Registry material and the collection of a number of cases of entities which were not recognized when the Registry started. The material which has been accumulated is being made use of by others than the members of the Committee to a greater extent than ever before. A number of candidates for examination by the specialty boards are now asking for the privilege of examining the Registry material.

Respectfully submitted,
BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Registrar.

The Committee on Fractures holds two meetings a year. At the annual meeting of the College, it sponsors the Fracture Oration and the Fracture Symposium, it conducts an informal meeting of the regional groups wherein discussions are held of the problems of the groups throughout the various sections of the country, and, finally, it stimulates the holding of fracture clinics throughout the meeting.

The second meeting is held in either January or February of each year. This meeting lasts for two days and, previous to 1938, the first day has been devoted to operative and dry clinics wherein new methods of treatment are stressed. At the last meeting an innovation was made in that the morning meeting of the first day was devoted to the usual clinics and the afternoon to two subjects of controversial nature wherein sufficient time was allotted for the speaker to present his subject adequately, and for complete discussion. The purpose of this meeting is to develop a controversial subject that can be completely presented and the discussion adequately reported. The chairman feels that the Committee on Fractures has not presented in the past a subject of such a nature that the benefit of the ideas of such a group of experts could be made public property.

The symposium this year was based on the metallurgy of plates and screws used in open reduction of fractures. Numerous complaints have come to the Committee on Fractures of the failure of plates and screws used in internal fixation. This is despite the fact that the committee a number of years ago persuaded the Bureau of Weights and Standards of the United States Government to regulate the chemical composition of plates and screws according to a formula introduced by Dr. Wm. O'Neill Sherman of Pittsburgh. Dr. Charles S. Venable presented the theory that many of the failures of fixation by plates and screws were not due to infection but to the electrolytic action of various metals in the tissues. Dr. Venable viewed this electrolytic action as being a controlling factor in osteosynthesis when metals were used. He stressed the fact that there has been a good deal of difficulty encountered in osteosynthesis by metallic fixation, with many serious complications and many inconsistencies in results. In his experiments he showed definitely that when two different metals were placed in bone and immersed in Ringer's solution metallic corrosion due to electrolytic action occurred. He felt that this action disturbed the bone cells and bone growth and resulted in the loosening of both plates and screws. Dr. Venable had found that vitallium was the only metal in his series which remained practically inert in its electrolytic reaction.

The symposium was then continued by Dr. Colin F. Fink, Professor of Electrometallurgy at Columbia University. He emphasized the fact that there is always some solubility when metals are in contact with body fluids over a period of time. He felt that Dr. Venable's demonstration of vitallium showed that there was not enough solution of vitallium in contact with tissue fluids to create an appreciable electrolytic potential.

Captain Daniel J. Martin of West Point, who had studied metals for this committee two years previously, stated that many of the errors in chromium-vanadium steel plates were not due to an adventitious electrolytic reaction but that, in the production of the steel, the heat treatment made them too hard and that sometimes they were cracked in the quenching operation, which allowed both corrosive activities and the breaking of plates and screws after insertion into the body.

Dr. Clay Ray Murray discussed in detail the dangers of continuous vibratory stress placed upon plates when the individual is actively using his muscles, without the application of external fixation. A bone in a living individual is to be considered as under constant vibratory stress due to alterations in muscle tone and to intermittent bending, torsional and shearing strains due to normal muscle efforts. He stated that a vanadium steel plate subject to continuous vibratory stress of very small amplitudes for a period of a week became so brittle that the steel could be snapped in the fingers. Dr. Murray also showed that where there was motion at the fracture line and where fixation had not been adequate an acidity was produced at the fracture site due to the mechanical inflammatory reaction and as long as the acid P_h existed at the fracture site no calcium deposition occurred. Dr. Murray and Dr. Hudak proposed a stainless steel of 18 per cent chromium—8 per cent nickel, and stressed that this alloy did not create adventitious electrolysis and was more capable of withstanding the stress and strain than any other combination.

In concluding, Dr. Wm. O'Neill Sherman of Pittsburgh stated that neither the vitallium metal suggested by Dr. Venable or the chromium-nickel alloy of Dr. Murray and Dr. Hudak had sufficient advantage over the vanadium steel plates advocated by him to warrant their substitution.

This entire symposium is being prepared by Dr. Murray and will be of great interest when properly edited and published.

The second day of the winter meeting is taken up with committee reports and I should like to enumerate briefly the activities of the committee so far as the various sub-committees are concerned.

1. Regional Groups. Dr. Charles L. Scudder is chairman of the sub-committee on regional groups. There are now 66 regional committees and very shortly this number will be increased to 68, as Virginia and the District of Columbia are being organized at the present time. The membership of these groups is devoted to improving and stimulating interest in fracture treatment. Each committee becomes in itself a vital factor in its community in public health and in medical education. I believe that this is one of the best methods of presenting postgraduate medical education in the United States to-day. The activities of the regional groups consist of contacting the hospitals and hospital staffs, in better education of the attendants, the nursing staffs and the internes, and in providing clinics for neighboring doctors. Each regional group has done a great deal to stimulate the state and county medical societies and local groups in presenting fracture papers. The activities with the Red Cross and the Boy Scouts in presenting methods of first aid and transportation of injured along the highways represent a project of these regional groups which will be discussed under the accomplishments of the sub-committee on transportation.

2. Transportation. This sub-committee under the able leadership of Dr. Robert H. Kennedy has become of itself a clearing house for information relative to transportation and immediate treatment of injuries in many organizations, as well as certain divisions of industry. As you know, the Committee on Fractures of the American College of Surgeons persuaded the late Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the American Red Cross, to equip emergency first aid stations with traction splints, the committee agreeing on its part to act as medical adviser to the various Red Cross units. In April of 1938, in addition to over 2200 emergency first aid stations along the highways, the American Red Cross had 59 agreements with organizations which furnished 1700 mobile units. The contact of the committee is cordial and close in all of their efforts for the care of the injured. A year ago we presented recommendations for transportation of back injuries. After these recommendations were passed upon by the Board of Regents and accepted, a detailed plan was sent to the Red Cross and to the Boy Scouts. The Director of First Aid and Life Saving of the American Red Cross replied almost by return mail that they were sending copies to their staff officials so they could begin to give instruction immediately and also that they were planning to have the instructions printed in the form of an insert to their recent new edition of the first-aid text book. The Director of Health and Safety of the Boy Scouts of America arranged for the publication of these instructions in their magazine, Health and Safety, in the April issue. This issue also included excellent drawings of the method, as made by their artist. Following this publication the article was brought out by them as a separate reprint which has been widely distributed. In 1937 out of 558 Boy Scout counsel camps 242 had traction splints, with personnel trained in their application. Their objective is two in each camp, so that approximately a million boys will be educated in first aid. This committee has contacted the Chief of Health and Safety of the Bureau of Mines, and Dr. A. M. Murray of Pittsburgh, who is at present revising their First Aid Manual, has stated that the revision will contain instructions in fixed traction and in other material which the Committee on Fractures advises. This latter accomplishment has been largely due to the personal influence and enthusiasm of Dr. William O'Neill Sherman, a member of the Committee on Fractures. The injured in the mines should have the advantage of fixed traction. When fixed traction appears in the manual of the Bureau of Mines it will become part of the regional, state, and national first-aid contests. These are held annually in many sections of the country and are attended by great numbers of people. They are also a means of educating many people through their attendance at first aid contests who would not be reached otherwise.

There is much yet to be undertaken by the sub-committee on transportation. The majority of ambulances in the United States and Canada are manned by undertakers. So far we have not been able to educate the morticians in the needs of first aid treatment. The State Police in certain states have been well trained but in many others they know very little of first aid treatment.

3. Plates and Screws. The accomplishments of this committee have been adequately presented in the discussion of the symposium held on the electrolysis of metals.

4. Railroad Surgeons. Dr. Roscoe C. Webb, chairman of this sub-committee, has worked most energetically and with good results in improving the treatment of fractures by railroad surgeons. It is difficult to impress upon the claim agents the necessity for expenditure of money for splints until they can see an actual cash return. There are, however, several railroads that have adopted fixed traction as one of their methods in first aid and we are convinced that before long this method will become the general rather than the exceptional equipment. The railroad companies are also doing a great deal to improve x-ray diagnosis of fractures in the small communities where railroads are not in contact with medical centers.

5. Fracture Manual. The Fracture Manual which was printed in 1933 has now become out of date, and a sub-committee of the Committee on Fractures is revising it. This Manual has been distributed in large numbers in the United States and Canada and applications have come in for it from many foreign countries.

6. Medical Education. This committee is making a renewed effort to stimulate faculties of medical schools throughout the country to devote more time in their curricula to the subject of fractures. Very few universities give sufficient time to this important subject. One is impressed, when examining internes, by how little practical knowledge they have acquired in medical schools. Every hospital must appoint a member of its attending staff to instruct its embryo internes in the application of fixed traction. It has become necessary also for hospitals to appoint men on the staff to instruct the internes in the rudiments of fracture treatment as very few have learned this at medical school. Finally, I wish to emphasize the importance and magnitude of the regional groups. This is a far-reaching plan of medical education and must be guarded and encouraged by the Board of Regents. As I have stressed in previous reports, there are times when a personal representative of the Committee on Fractures should be sent to certain groups to stimulate their activities. Such a visitor should be paid by the College. The expense would not be tremendous and the value of such services would be incalculable.

The Committee wishes to express its great loss in the death of Dr. Frederic J. Cotton, of Boston. Dr. Cotton was an active member of the committee since its beginning and worked tirelessly toward accomplishing its aims for aiding medical education.

Respectfully submitted,

During the past year the committee has made a favorable showing. The number of medical services in industry that were surveyed in that time is relatively small, but the addition of 53 medical services to the approved list is some indication of the increased interest and co-operation shown by industrialists in this work of the College. The industrial standards established by the College and the approval granted for compliance therewith have given employers a stimulus to improve their medical and surgical services which has been unequalled by any other organization, and many industrial organizations are reorganizing their services in order to comply with the College standards. An increasing number of requests for surveys are being received.

Cordial relations with the Committee on Industrial Health of the American Medical Association have been established during this year, and conferences held with the chairman and secretary of that committee. It would appear that co-operation between the two committees will be mutually helpful and should avoid duplication of work.

The subject of possible change in the name of this committee is under consideration, and the privilege of making an appropriate change with the consent of the Executive Committee is requested.

At the present time the number of industries that have been surveyed is 1710, and approval has been given to 880, or 51 per cent of these. A statement concerning the minimum standard for medical services in industry and the list of institutions whose medical services are approved by the College appears in the October, 1938, BULLETIN of the College.

HOSPITAL STANDARDIZATION

REPORT OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOSPITAL STANDARDIZATION

M. T. MACEachern, M.D., Associate Director, American College of Surgeons
Director of Hospital Activities

E. W. WILLIAMSON, M.D., Assistant Director of Hospital Activities

THE 1938 survey of hospitals by the American College of Surgeons includes the consideration of 3,596 general and special hospitals of 25 beds and over. Arising out of this survey is the twenty-first annual List of Approved Hospitals, published in the October, 1938, BULLETIN of the College.

The report which follows contains only pertinent comment on the actual findings of the survey. As a supplement to the report there will be published in the special Hospital Standardization number of the BULLETIN of the American College of Surgeons early in 1939 the results of an extensive statistical study arising out of the 1938 survey. This study will incorporate and classify factual data of value to each hospital.

The principles set forth in the Minimum Standard are quite readily applicable to institutions of varying types and of all sizes. It would be impossible to apply the same details of organization and procedures in all hospitals, but the practical application of general principles is possible through the consideration of each hospital individually. The experience of the College has, in fact, over many years, demonstrated that the Minimum Standard, now in its twenty-first year of application, embodies only principles which are so fundamental that no hospital can function well without conforming to them.

The spirit of Hospital Standardization must not be overlooked. While the scientific aspect of the present-day hospital is most important, it must not overshadow the humanitarian aspect. The patient is an individual and he cannot be standardized.

The American College of Surgeons, founded in 1913, originated Hospital Standardization. The principles set forth in the Minimum Standard are essentially the same today as when originally established in 1918; they are adaptable to all types of institutions caring for the sick and injured. The first group of hospitals surveyed were those of 100 beds and over. Commencing in 1918, twenty-one annual surveys have been made. In 1918, out of 692 hospitals in the United States and Canada surveyed, 89 or 12.9 per cent were approved. In 1938, out of 1,850 hospitals of 100 beds and over surveyed, 1,726 or 93.3 per cent, merited approval. The number of hospitals surveyed has increased more than five times, reaching a total of 3,596 in 1938, of which 74.1 per cent were approved. Hospitals having from 50 to 99 beds have been under survey since 1922, and those having from 25 to 49 beds since 1924. In 1938, 1,063 hospitals in the former classification, and 683 in the latter, were surveyed, and the percentages approved were 67.8 and 31.8 per cent respectively, comparing with 41.3 per cent of the former approved in the first survey made in 1922, and with 15.9 per cent of the latter approved in the first survey made in 1924.

In the table presented on the opposite page, the growth of Hospital Standardization from 1918 to 1938 inclusive is shown. This growth either in the aggregate or in the various groups has not been rapid, but it has been steady and substantial.

It will be noted that the 1938 survey reveals the highest percentage yet shown of hospitals having from 25 to 49 beds, as conforming to the Minimum Standard.

In 1925, at the request of the United States Veterans Administration, a survey was undertaken of all Veterans' hospitals in the United States. In the same year similar requests were received from the United States Public Health Service, the Army, and the Navy. The ready response to the requirements for approval is evidenced by the outcome.

In this report the history and development of Hospital Standardization and the details of the requirements have been omitted inasmuch as these are all incorporated in a comprehensive Manual of Hospital Standardization. Valuable addenda have been included which contain sample by-laws, rules and regulations for the various types of hospitals, organization charts, special forms, and other practical data.

Plans for the annual survey of hospitals in the United States and Canada are made at the beginning of each year, and all institutions eligible for survey are carefully considered. To accomplish this work the College maintains a group of competent field representatives, graduates of Class A medical schools, who possess a thorough knowledge of hospital administration in all its phases and who have had an extensive training in clinical work. They are selected on the basis of character, personality, tact, industry, honesty, and ability to meet the public.

Each hospital is considered for rating annually. An institution once approved will not necessarily always remain so. The ratings of all hospitals automatically cease on October 1 each year and they are immediately reconsidered for new ratings. At the annual Hospital Standardization Conference in October, public announcement is made of Fully Approved and Provisionally Approved hospitals in the United States, Canada and other countries.

The field representatives co-operate in every possible way in helping a hospital to overcome difficulties which prevent it from meeting the standard. Hospitals may also request assistance directly from the College, which maintains an efficient information service.

Administration. Hospital administration is a rapidly growing art and science. There is no place for the untrained or inexperienced superintendent in the modern hospital. Despite this fact, governing boards of hospitals sometimes appoint persons unskilled in the art of hospital administration. This may be the result of ignorance of present-day standards; frequently it is due to politics; and occasionally it follows the honest conviction that the person in question may do well. But none of these reasons suffices. The former two cases rarely work out; the latter may do so after a period of trial and error apprenticeship.

The hospital administrator's responsibility is well stated in the following statement taken from the Report of the Committee on Educational Policies of the American College of Hospital Administrators published some time ago:

"From a functional viewpoint there can be little doubt but that hospital administration must be regarded as a distinctive and highly complex area of endeavor. The hospital administrator must be cognizant not only of the intricacies of finance, the complexities of patient care, the public relations of the institutions, the relation of his hospital to other professional groups, certain aspects of sociology and psychology, of community organization and inter-relationships, but also of a literally vast number of technical procedures in four or five professions. These specialized procedures he must understand at least in their significance. He must be possessed not only of a wealth of knowledge, but what is even more important, of tact, diplomacy and sympathy to a degree that may make it possible for him to apply his knowledge prudently and effectively for human betterment. Nothing that may happen in the institution can or should be foreign to his interests, from housekeeping to the significance of post-mortem examinations."

In recent years there have been held Institutes for Hospital Administrators, under the auspices of the American Hospital Association and the American College of Hospital Administrators respectively. These are doing much to help administrators now engaged in hospital work. The beginner may acquire his or her knowledge of the art of hospital administration through three avenues: first, directed apprenticeship of sufficient duration under a highly qualified hospital administrator; second, university course on the graduate level with subsequent internship in hospital administration; third, undergraduate course in such universities as include hospital administration in their curricula, with subsequent internship in hospital administration for practical experience. A few hospitals have lost their rating this year or have been reduced in their rating because their administrators do not measure up to the requirements of adequate training and experience in hospital administration.

Physical Plants. During the past year there has been evidence of more new hospital construction and rehabilitation of physical plants than in the previous few years. Generally speaking, the physical condition of hospitals has kept pace with advance in conceptions of the requirements for efficient operation. There are, however, a number of institutions which are not adequate for hospital purposes or are dangerous from the standpoint of fire hazards. In several instances, approval has been withheld because the physical plant was not such as to afford the requisite protection against fire. In other cases, provisional approval has been given until the condition can be remedied.

Medical Staff Organization. Medical staff organization in hospitals has made distinct progress during the past year. It is recognized by the managements and medical staffs that good medical organization is necessary to maintain the hospital on a high level of efficiency and to give public service. Further, it is of value to the individual physician from the standpoints of increasing and applying his scientific knowledge.

In connection with medical staff organization, definite problems have had to be faced. First is the matter of extending hospital privileges. Every hospital is confronted with the question, "What doctors shall or shall not be permitted to work in the institution?" The medical staff and governing board, jointly, must in every instance observe the restrictions and qualifications in Clause II of the Minimum Standard.

A second problem has been the efforts of graduates from non-approved medical schools to secure appointment on the staffs of approved hospitals, and in addition internes and residents who were educated in such schools to seek training in hospitals now on the Approved List. Both of these conditions are incompatible with approval. Consequently, in many instances the rating of the hospital has been endangered or withheld until there is full compliance with Clause II of the Minimum Standard.

A third problem has been the sporadic attempts made by so-called "irregular" practitioners to obtain privileges in approved hospitals.

Frequently misunderstanding has arisen in hospitals which permit physicians to work therein who have not gone through the regular procedure of application, accrediting, and appointment to the medical staff. Sometimes you hear the statement, "Yes, Doctor — is working in our hospital, but he is not a member of the medical staff." It should be borne in mind that every physician who works in an approved hospital must have staff status, whether it be honorary, consulting, active, associate, courtesy or other.

The problem of fee-splitting still exists in many communities. The American College of Surgeons since its inception has fought fee-splitting unceasingly. Whenever fee-splitting is reported in connection with any approved hospital, the case is thoroughly investigated. When proof of it is available the College removes the name of the hospital from the Approved List. When there are persistent rumors, the hospital may be left unrated until such time as these are proved to be unfounded or the situation has been remedied in an acceptable manner.

Departmentalization of the medical staff is vitally important in the control and efficiency of the scientific work. Even the smaller hospital should have departments such as medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, and eye, ear, nose and throat. Medical staff organization must not exceed specialization in the community but should go as far as possible in this direction. Each department, of course, should have a capable head who is responsible for supervision and direction.

Medical Staff Conferences. The medical staff conference has become a permanent institution in every progressive hospital. While the Minimum Standard for Hospitals stipulates that there must be at least one conference each month, or a minimum of 12 such meetings each year, in many institutions they are much more frequent and this is a great advantage. Wrongly, however, some hospitals adjourn their medical staff conferences for the summer months and only show nine or ten in the aggregate. This is not indicative of the proper interpretation of the value of such meetings. If the advantages and benefits to be derived were fully appreciated, such a practice would not be permitted. The hospital that is symbolic of a scientific consciousness will have many study conferences during each month.

Medical Department. The medical department usually takes advantage of every new development in scientific procedure and technical equipment. Consequently, it presents one of the most favorable aspects of the hospital, usually being well organized, highly specialized, and satisfactorily correlated with other departments.

Surgical Department. The physical facilities and equipment of the surgical department continue to improve in approved hospitals. In a number of instances rehabilitation of old operating rooms has contributed materially to the efficiency of the service.

Emphasis should be placed on the value of more thorough and intensive preoperative study in many instances. It is important to have not only the information pertaining to the pathology for which the operation is indicated, but also to know exactly what the patient's normal condition or reserve is to withstand the strain and effect of the operation. No patient should go to the operating room, unless an urgent emergency, without recorded evidence of a careful preoperative study.

Graduate Training for Surgery. The primary object of the American College of Surgeons since it was founded has been the elevation of the practice of surgery. Every activity of the College is closely allied to this purpose. The major attempt in fulfilling such an objective has been the Hospital Standardization work of the College in which one of the objects is to improve the environment of the surgeon so that he may do more competent and efficient work.

In recent years the subject of graduate training for surgery has received much attention by the American College of Surgeons. For two years highly qualified representatives have been investigating hospitals which offer facilities for the furtherance of this work in the form of 3 to 5-year residencies.

During the 1938 Hospital Standardization survey special attention was directed to some 300 institutions for the study of opportunities for graduate training for surgery, this not only involving the teaching hospital but reaching out to the larger of the non-teaching institutions. A vast amount of valuable information has been assembled and is being reviewed for the purpose of giving to such hospitals as are worthy, recognition for what they offer in the way of graduate training for surgery.

The requirements for fellowship in the American College of Surgeons make it incumbent on all graduates of approved medical schools after January 1, 1938, who desire to apply for fellowship in the College, to have at least 3 years' training in an acceptable hospital or hospitals, 2 years of which must be in general surgery or the surgical specialty which they wish to follow. This constitutes basic training in the 7 years or more following graduation, prior to the time the applicant is eligible for candidacy.

With increasing frequency the College is consulted for information on graduate training for surgery, and in view of the universal demand for better preparation for the practice of surgery, the College must be in possession of such information as will be helpful to Fellows, prospective Fellows, Junior Candidates, and others who desire special training of this nature. To this end the College has laid down certain criteria which will be found in the January, 1938, BULLETIN, pages 21-26, with detailed explanation of how each of these can be put into effect.

Medical Records. Hospitals in general are aware of the need of securing complete medical records. Most of them have provided adequate physical facilities and the plans of all new hospitals include suitable space and equipment for a modern record department.

The personnel now employed are generally found to be experienced and doing excellent work. The establishment of schools for medical records librarians is doing much toward making competent individuals available for the record departments of hospitals. There remains need for more emphasis upon the quality and content of the medical records as well as their being kept up to date and completed promptly on discharge of the patient.

The quality of the medical records would be enhanced by the attending physician's personal attention. Many an interne's interest soon wanes on account of indifferent supervision by the physicians in charge, the head of the department, or the record committee of the medical staff. Hospitals which do not maintain an interne service should facilitate the preparation of complete records by furnishing the physician with necessary mechanical and secretarial assistance. The practice of some hospitals of assigning nurses to write histories, progress notes, and obstetrical records is not acceptable and should be discontinued.

The use of the subject matter in medical records for group studies and for staff conferences will do much to improve the quality of the scientific data.

The survey shows that more systematic supervision of the medical records is indicated. The medical records librarian may check the material in the charts to see that all component parts are included and properly assembled for the permanent file, but she should not be responsible for judging the contents of the chart to determine whether it is acceptable from a clinical or scientific standpoint. This must be done by qualified physicians. An active medical records committee is important in securing scientific records. One of its functions is review of the medical records at regular and frequent intervals for the purpose of appraising them and reporting to the medical staff at the monthly conference.

An extensive study of medical records during the survey revealed that some hospitals have adequate records of all public ward cases whereas those of private patients are incomplete. According to the requirements of Hospital Standardization there is no discrimination between the free or ward and the private patient as Clause IV of the Minimum Standard states that "accurate and complete medical records be written for patients and filed in an accessible manner in the hospital." This applies to all patients.

Clinical Laboratory. Many hospitals have developed their clinical laboratories to meet the demands for the newly adopted procedures in diagnosis, in addition to carrying on the established tests and routine examinations. This increase in the function of the laboratory demands a high standard of training for technicians, as well as the services of a competent pathologist who can give ample time to supervision of the department. In the selection of personnel the hospital is aided by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists which has set standards of training for pathologists and technicians.

In order to maintain in a community a good laboratory, with complete facilities and trained personnel, it is necessary to concentrate the patronage at the hospital laboratory. When each member of the medical staff gives his unqualified support, it is possible for the hospital to maintain the full diagnostic service which cannot be readily supplied by the average physician. Thus the unit cost is reduced through a large volume of work and every physician in the community has access to a complete laboratory service for the benefit of his patients.

There is still a tendency to omit the fundamental routine examinations which may reveal positive or negative findings of importance. The Manual of Hospital Standardization of the American College of Surgeons specifies the routine laboratory examinations which the hospital is expected to establish. These include (1) urinalysis, chemical and microscopic; (2) blood examination, red, white, and differential cell counts, and estimation of hemoglobin on all cases of a major nature which are expected to remain in the hospital for diagnosis or continued treatment; (3) blood clotting time on all tonsil and adenoid cases; (4) examination by a pathologist of all tissues removed at operation; (5) possibly a blood test for syphilis. These examinations give a clue to many common diseases and supply indispensable information to the clinician who is doing thorough work. Not only are the positive findings invaluable but the negative reports are also important.

In regard to the requirement that all tissues removed at operation be sent to a qualified pathologist for examination and report, it has been noted that some hospitals in which tissues are said to be examined routinely, send only some of the material from the operating room, which undoubtedly will be examined grossly and sectioned for microscopic examination by the pathologist. This practice should be changed to the extent that all tissues shall be sent to the laboratory.

The record system in the laboratory should consist of a classified report of the examinations made each month and consolidated at the end of each year as well as duplicate report of all examinations. The monthly report will not only show the volume and variety of examinations made but also may indicate the possibility of omitting certain tests in the light of information furnished by concurrent tests so that unnecessary work may be avoided.

The clinical laboratory is responsible for more than getting out an accurate report of an examination ordered. The head of the department is a consultant, who may plan a rational course of diagnostic examinations for an individual case with resultant economy and efficiency. Further, the pathologist has a great deal to contribute to the medical staff conferences.

X-ray Department. Most x-ray departments are keeping pace with the advances in equipment, diagnosis, and therapy. The larger institutions have competent radiologists in charge, while a great number of the smaller hospitals which do not have fully recognized radiologists in the vicinity have made satisfactory arrangements with nearby specialists in this field to act as consultants in any cases in question.

In the employment of technicians, hospitals are being guided more generally by the standards formulated by the American Registry of Radiological Technicians.

More hospitals have acquired therapeutic units to complete the service in their x-ray departments and more radium has been made available on account of a lower price or a reasonable rental basis. Emphasis is again placed upon the importance of entrusting the use of radium only to the experienced and competent radium therapist; otherwise the dosage may do irreparable damage or prove ineffective. In order to fulfill the requirements for approval by the American College of Surgeons, the head of the department should be a graduate of an acceptable medical school, licensed, ethical, and in good standing; competent and especially trained in radiology.

Obstetrical Department. The increasing attention given to the care of obstetrical patients in hospitals and particularly to the reduction of maternal and infant mortality warrants every institution caring for these types of patients to meet the recognized standards of organization, facilities, personnel, and control. The 1938 survey revealed that many problems of control of this work confront the management and obstetrical staff in hospitals with an open medical staff. Here privileges in the obstetrical department are usually extended to a large courtesy group but frequently supervision and control of the work done is not adequate. Laxity on the part of hospitals in admitting outside practitioners not qualified to do obstetrics and failure to supervise their work are, no doubt, responsible for many obstetrical morbidities and mortalities.

Outpatient Department. Attention has been directed to the Minimum Standard for Outpatient Departments in Hospitals. The survey revealed that the requirements are being observed in all well organized, smoothly functioning outpatient departments, and that they are working out successfully.

Anesthesia. The survey revealed that the institution which does not have a well organized anesthesia department complying with the requirements laid down by the American College of Surgeons is handicapped in rendering efficient service. There are still certain deficiencies in the service in many institutions. These may be summarized as follows: (a) absence of an adequately organized department of anesthesia under competent medical supervision; (b) failure to always provide proper anesthetic records, including preanesthetic physical examination, preoperative medication, kind and amount of anesthetic, condition of patient throughout operation, that is pulse, respiration and blood pressure particularly, post-anesthetic medication, immediate orders of surgeon and a statement of the patient's post-anesthetic condition; (c) inadequate follow-up to determine end-results from the administration of any particular anesthetic; (d) allowing the referring physician with little or no training in the administration of anesthesia, and whose experience is limited, to give the anesthetic without skilled supervision. It is recognized that the efficiency of the anesthesia service has much to do with the end-results in surgery.

Fracture Service. The Committee on Fractures of the American College of Surgeons, with a view to assuring that all patients shall receive the benefits of the newest practices in the care of fractures, developed after prolonged study the Minimum Standard for Treatment of Fractures to which all hospitals are urged to adhere. These standards will be found, together with their explanation, in the Manual of Hospital Standardization.

The Committee on the Treatment of Fractures desire that the special fracture form which they have devised be filled out as a supplement to the general medical record. This will provide material for review and analysis of fractures at the medical staff conference or possibly in the fracture clinic and facilitate the study of end-results. Hospitals are urged to co-operate with the local, state and national fracture committees in improving the treatment of fractures and to adhere to the requirements laid down in the Minimum Standard. This also presupposes the study of fracture cases in the medical staff conference—not only patients who have been discharged but also those in the hospital presenting problems of treatment.

Department of Traumatic Surgery. A well organized emergency or accident department is a necessity in most hospitals. Rapid and competent handling and transportation of the injured patient are often decisive factors in saving life or minimizing the ill effects from injury.

Realizing the importance of early and efficient treatment of the emergency or accident patient, the American College of Surgeons devised and promulgated the Minimum Standard for Traumatic Surgery, which stipulates that adequate diagnostic and therapeutic facilities must be available and that only surgeons who have proved their competence in the field of traumatic surgery be permitted to care for these patients; that accurate and complete medical records be kept on each case; and that a committee be appointed which shall be responsible for the supervision of traumatic surgery. The medical staff, not the resident staff, should be responsible for the work in the emergency department.

Department of Physical Therapy. The value of physical therapy in an increasing number of diseases is being recognized and the services in this direction have been gradually extended. Hospitals seeking guidance in the organization and management of a modern physical therapy service find it advantageous to observe the requirements laid down by the American College of Surgeons in the Minimum Standard for Physical Therapy Departments in Hospitals as explained in detail in the Manual of Hospital Standardization.

If the department is to achieve the desired results it is imperative that it be under competent medical supervision. This is best accomplished when the director is a medical graduate specially trained in physical therapy. This type of therapy is of value only when properly administered.

The status of the physical therapy technician is being improved through registration with the American Registry of Physical Therapy Technicians as sponsored by the American Congress of Physical Therapy. The educational standards for technicians or aids have been well established by the American Physical Therapy Association.

Hospitals are advised to give serious attention to this form of treatment for its value in hastening convalescence and in stabilizing end-results. The limited number of recognized physical therapists makes it necessary that several hospitals must often share the time of one specialist in this field.

Occupational Therapy. Occupational therapy is still not extensively practiced in the general hospital. Its value lies in the fact that the patient who is kept reasonably busy, develops and maintains a healthier mental and physical condition, which materially aids recovery and hastens convalescence.

In order that the department may be properly operated, there must be a trained therapist in charge who has met the requirements for training and registration as published by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association.

Oxygen Therapy. Not many hospitals have a recognized department of oxygen therapy but a large number are rendering this service in one form or another. More knowledge and better equipment have enlarged the scope and value of this type of therapy.

Oxygen therapy is usually controlled by the department of medicine. A member of the medical staff with knowledge and experience concerning the mechanics of the apparatus in use as well as the scientific principles in its application and clinical effects should supervise this service assisted by nurses specially trained in the detail of administration of oxygen and the observation of the patient.

Oxygen is now administered to the patient early in the disease in regulated measure and by three well recognized methods: (a) intra-nasal catheter, (b) oxygen tent, (c) oxygen room. It should be given before the patient has developed a serious anoxemia and continued until well after the anoxemia is completely controlled. The air is at the same time properly conditioned in respect to temperature, moisture, and carbon-dioxide content.

Ambulance Service. Hospitals generally should give more attention to the transportation of patients. If this service is not provided for directly, it should be closely supervised by the management and medical staff of the hospital. It is quite evident that the manner in which patients are handled in conveying them to the hospital may have a considerable influence on the end-results in their care. Especially is this true in connection with accident cases in which there are fractures and internal injuries. Adequate ambulance service pre-supposes proper equipment, trained personnel, and the necessary emergency appliances. Periodic inspection is also recommended.

Pharmacy Service. The pharmacy service in some hospitals has been neglected in the past but since the establishment of the Minimum Standard for Pharmacies in Hospitals as described in the Manual of Hospital Standardization, there has been improvement in this service in many institutions.

Consultations. Many hospitals continue to have a much too low incidence of recorded consultations. It is believed that 15 to 20 per cent of the patients passing through a hospital caring for acute diseases should have consultation.

Hospitals generally classify consultations into two types. The private consultation is one requested by the physician or patient and the consultant collects his own fee from the patient after a careful examination and study of the case with correlation of laboratory and other findings in rendering an accurate opinion and written report. The house consultation originates through a regulation of a hospital requiring consultation in certain types of cases. Under those conditions the consultant gives his services free of charge. In both instances the ethical procedure in connection with consultations should be observed.

Autopsies. The percentage of autopsies secured in approved hospitals continues to increase in many institutions. A satisfactory incidence of autopsies in hospitals cannot be assured, however, without adoption of a definite routine procedure. Interest of the medical staff in the findings from autopsies can best be maintained through the holding of clinical pathological conferences at which gross and microscopic specimens are shown and correlated with the clinical history. If the individual members of the medical staff are to become "autopsy conscious," the findings from the operating room and from autopsies must be studied in relation to the clinical history.

Nursing Service. Recognizing the importance of good nursing in hospitals, the American College of Surgeons has formulated fundamental principles which are offered to governing boards of hospitals as an aid in organizing nursing service and a school of nursing. Standards established by nursing organizations, particularly through the state and provincial boards of examiners, conform in principle to the Minimum Standard for Nursing Services outlined by the College.

In some hospitals, particularly those which have not continued their training schools, there is a tendency to supplement the graduate nursing staff with personnel designated as aids, attendants, subsidiary workers, or assistants to nurses. Occasionally these employees are given some practical training and limited classroom instruction and in time assist in the operating room and in the bedside nursing. This arrangement does not conform to any of the three acceptable types of nursing service, namely: (1) graduate personnel, (2) student personnel; (3) combined graduate and student personnel. In some instances it has been observed that not only is there inadequate supervision over the subsidiary worker by the graduate personnel but the former is permitted to do certain duties which should only be done by the professional nurse.

The first requirement of the Minimum Standard for Nursing as stated in the Manual of Hospital Standardization emphasizes the importance of suitable administrative and teaching staff. This includes at least a director, graduate supervisors, head nurses, and instructors where there is a school of nursing. In the small school of nursing these positions are combined, but no hospital should conduct a school unless it has at least five graduate nurses on its staff, namely, director of nursing, day supervisor, night supervisor, operating room supervisor, and instructor.

Dietary Department. The effect of diet upon disease is being more and more universally recognized and dietary departments in hospitals are making progress in rendering food service to patients both from the standpoint of general diets and diet therapy. The dietitian carries efficiently her three-fold responsibility—to the hospital management for the budget and the general administration of the food service, to the medical staff for diet therapy and assistance in clinical work, and to the nursing division for the teaching of dietetics to student nurses when there is a school of nursing.

Medical Social Service. There are very few hospitals wherein medical social service is not indicated. A new conception of the hospital is promoted in the public consciousness when it becomes apparent that those administering it have a broader appreciation of the patients' social aspects than are involved in the physical care when in the hospital or in the outpatient department.

The Small Hospital. Nearly one-third of the general hospitals of 25 to 50 beds and over two-thirds of the general hospitals of 50 to 100 beds in the United States and Canada which are now on the Approved List bear witness to the assertion that small hospitals can meet the requirements for approval by the American College of Surgeons. The Minimum Standard is sufficiently flexible in principles to be adopted by all hospitals of various sizes and types. A large number of beds is not a fundamental requirement; a training school for nurses and an interne staff are not essential for approval. Compliance is based mainly on (1) an organized medical staff with a membership restricted to ethical, competent physicians who meet at least once a month to review and analyze the clinical work of the hospital; (2) accurate and complete medical records of all patients; (3) adequate diagnostic and therapeutic facilities under medical supervision, which includes at least clinical laboratory and x-ray facilities.

The American College of Surgeons believes that the approved small hospital fulfills an important place, especially in rural communities, and stands ready to assist the administrators of these hospitals to provide the best possible care for the patients.

Attention is directed to the Manual of Hospital Standardization in which will be found on pages 67 to 71 a section dealing with the standardization of the small hospital, explaining the requirements in detail.

MEDICAL, SURGICAL, AND HOSPITAL EQUIPMENT, INSTRUMENTS, AND SUPPLIES WHICH ARE APPROVED BY THE COLLEGE

During the past six years the American College of Surgeons has pursued its program of approving medical, surgical, and hospital equipment, instruments, and supplies. In response to the many demands of the various groups working in the hospitals which are under survey, the College has concerned itself with the fundamental and practical principle that the equipment, instrument or article shall assure proper service to the patient and shall measure up to the claims of the manufacturer. The College adheres to the principle of basing its approval on service to the patient, believing that therein lies the basic test for all products of this nature.

The standpoints from which the articles have been considered are as follows:

1. Adaptability to medical, surgical, and hospital needs.
2. Guarantee by the manufacturer to the purchaser as to the quality of the article.
3. Claims made in descriptive literature must be supported by evidence.
4. Manufacturers shall be permitted to use an identifying mark on such articles as secure the approval of the College, and in advertising matter pertaining thereto in ethical media directed exclusively to the medical and surgical profession and to hospitals.
5. The identifying mark authorized by the College will indicate to the prospective purchaser that the article bearing the mark is good and useful, and meets the claims of the manufacturer.

Application for approval may be directed to the American College of Surgeons by the manufacturer or, in the case of an imported article, by the authorized American agent. Each application should be accompanied by literature customarily used in describing the product to a prospective purchaser.

In the October, 1938, BULLETIN of the American College of Surgeons appears a list of Approved Equipment, Instruments, and Supplies for this year, which includes the names of 103 manufacturers and more than 540 individually approved articles.

SECTIONAL MEETINGS

THREE state and provincial sectional meetings of the American College of Surgeons were held during 1938:

Date	City	Participating States and Provinces
February 2, 3, 4....	Houston....	Arizona, Arkansas, Cuba, Louisiana, Mexico, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas.
March 22, 23, 24....	Toronto....	Michigan, New York, Ohio, Ontario, Pennsylvania, Quebec.
March 29, 30, 31....	Milwaukee....	Illinois, Iowa, Michigan (upper peninsula), Minnesota, Wisconsin.

The medical fraternities of the cities in which meetings were held co-operated with the local committees on arrangements, and as a result the three meetings proved to be among the most successful that have been held by the College since the plan for sectional meetings was initiated in 1920. It was especially gratifying to the officers and Regents of the College who attended the meetings to note the unusual interest and good will which have been created through the sectional meetings.

Attendance. The attendance at all of the meetings was large, but the registration did not always indicate the actual number who were present at the various sessions. A total of 1,361 doctors registered at the three meetings, with 338 cities represented. The total number of hospital representatives registered was 702.

Scientific Exhibits. The scientific exhibits which were arranged by the local committees on arrangements in Houston and Milwaukee were interesting and instructive. Exhibits of the activities of the American College of Surgeons included bone sarcoma, cancer clinics, medical service in industry, fractures, and hospital standardization. The College exhibits were presented at all of the sectional meetings in the form of wall displays of charts and graphs.

Clinics. Operative and non-operative clinics covering general surgery and the surgical specialties were held in local hospitals during the mornings of the first and second days, and the third morning was devoted chiefly to two major clinics, one on cancer and one on fractures, in which some of the visiting surgeons participated. The clinics, which were arranged by the local Fellows and their assistants, were of an unusually high order.

Scientific Sessions. At each sectional meeting there were three major scientific sessions in general surgery, and three in the specialties of eye, ear, nose, and throat. The addresses at each meeting were presented chiefly by the visiting speakers. The sessions were well attended by the visiting surgeons and physicians, and by the local profession and medical students.

Medical Motion Pictures. During the course of each meeting there were programs of approved medical motion pictures. There is an increasing interest in the employment of this medium of demonstrating surgical diagnosis and technique, and the meeting rooms, though large, were frequently over-crowded.

Hospital Conferences. The hospital conferences embraced nine sessions, some of which were held at the headquarters hotel, and others at local hospitals. The program was designed to include all problems of administration and standardization of hospitals—an intensive institute. There was opportunity for the presentation of excellent papers and discussions, and splendidly arranged departmental demonstrations in the hospitals. The panel round table conferences and the demonstrations were of particular interest to all who were present, and these sessions were generously attended.

Community Health Meeting. Following the plan which was inaugurated by the College in 1920, a community health meeting was held in each city on the evening of the last day of the meeting. The large and representative audiences ranged from 2,000 to 6,500. The brief, interesting and instructive talks in support of scientific medicine, disease prevention, and better health, were well received by the public. Enthusiastic commendations have been received by the College from the laity and the medical profession in the cities in which the meetings were held.

Other Activities. A series of arranged talks was given to college and high school students, luncheon clubs, and business and professional organizations. These addresses were presented by the visiting speakers, and dealt with the progress of scientific medicine, the prevention of disease, hospital care, and other health topics of interest to the laity. Similar addresses were broadcast over the radio. These presentations had an important effect in arousing the interest of the public in scientific medicine and the institutional care of the sick.

Annual Meeting of Fellows. The annual meeting of the Fellows from the states and provinces represented in each section was held on the afternoon of the first day. The President of the College, Dr. Frederic A. Besley; Dr. George Crile, Chairman of the Board of Regents; other members of the Board who were present, and the Associate Directors, Dr. MacEachern and Dr. Crowell, presented brief reviews of the activities of the College, in which the Fellows were greatly interested.

Credentials Committee Meetings. State and provincial credentials committee meetings of such committees as were geographically convenient were held in each city. These meetings, at which applicants for fellowship in the College were considered, were well attended, and the members of the committees did their work diligently and thoroughly.

Visiting Speakers. The visiting speakers who participated in the sectional meetings were:

FRANK E. ADAIR, New York
 ALFRED W. ADSON, Rochester, Minn.
 THOMAS D. ALLEN, Chicago
 FREDERIC W. BANCROFT, New York
 FREDERIC A. BESLEY, Waukegan
 THOMAS E. CARMODY, Denver
 RICHARD B. CATTELL, Boston
 GEORGE M. CURTIS, Columbus
 GEORGE CRILE, Cleveland
 GEORGE CRILE, JR., Cleveland
 CLAUDE F. DIXON, Rochester, Minn.
 WILLIAM J. ENGEL, Cleveland
 JOHN R. FRASER, Montreal
 FRASER B. GURD, Montreal
 M. REESE GUTTMAN, Chicago

CHARLES C. HIGGINS, Cleveland
 WESTLEY M. HUNT, New York
 FRANK H. LAHEY, Boston
 WILLIAM H. LUEDDE, St. Louis
 PAUL B. MAGNUSON, Chicago
 MICHAEL L. MASON, Chicago
 GORDON B. NEW, Rochester, Minn.
 ALTON OCHSNER, New Orleans
 GEORGE T. PACK, New York
 CHARLES B. PUESTOW, Chicago
 A. D. RUEDEMANN, Cleveland
 CHARLES L. SCUDDER, Boston
 ALBERT O. SINGLETON, Galveston
 HORACE J. WILLIAMS, Philadelphia

Résumé. The officials of the College were greatly impressed with the means which are afforded by the sectional meetings to further the aims, objects, and ideals of the organization. The meetings are an inspiration alike to the surgeon who has a part in them and to the visiting guest.

The above necessarily brief résumé is altogether inadequate to present an effective picture; and least of all does it convey the widespread interest on the part of the general public in the work of the College.

The sectional meetings could not have been a success without the co-operation of the medical profession, lay organizations, and public officials, and the untiring efforts of the local committees. Likewise, the willingness of the leaders of the profession to address these meetings, even when they were held in sections of the country far removed from their homes, has been responsible in a large measure for the splendid results which have been achieved.

SECTIONAL MEETINGS, 1939

Preliminary negotiations are complete for the following sectional meetings of the American College of Surgeons for 1939:

Date	City	Participating States and Provinces
January 18, 19, 20...	Nashville...	Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky.
March 15, 16, 17...	Baltimore...	Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, District of Columbia, New Jersey, Delaware, Eastern Pennsylvania, North Carolina, South Carolina.
March 22, 23, 24...	Indianapolis...	Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio.
March 29, 30, 31...	Winnipeg...	Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Northern Ontario, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota.

"It is a man's duty to have books. . . . A library is not a luxury, but one of the necessities of life."

GROWTH OF THE LIBRARY

The Library of the American College of Surgeons, organized in 1921, comprises a collection of some twenty-five thousand volumes: current textbooks, journal files, and historical works. These reference works are supplemented by a collection in excess of one hundred thousand reprints.

The nucleus of the Library consisted of the volumes in the library of the late Dr. John B. Murphy. To this collection have been added journal files and individual volumes from the library of the late Dr. Albert J. Ochsner; eighteenth and nineteenth century volumes in French and English from the collection of the late Dr. William McDowell Mastin of Mobile, Alabama; the comprehensive collection of the late Dr. H. W. Mills of San Bernardino, California, on the subject of echinococcus cysts; and the historical works and current monographs on orthopedic surgery which Dr. H. Winnett Orr of Lincoln, Nebraska, has assembled and to which he is constantly adding. Included with the orthopedic material is a set (almost complete) of the reports of the twenty-eight Congresses of the Italian Orthopedic Society, the gift of Dr. Vittorio Putti of Bologna, Italy. A collection of two hundred and fifty volumes in the field of otolaryngology has been presented by Dr. Otto Joachim of New Orleans and fifty volumes of recent journals by Dr. Lawrence L. Iseman of Chicago. Mrs. Franklin H. Martin has presented a valuable collection of literary and historical publications, especially rich in items concerned with the settlement of Illinois and the Northwest, and with the development of medicine in these sections.

In addition to the gifts above mentioned, Fellows and friends of the College have contributed many valuable smaller collections and individual volumes, some consisting of treatises of historic interest and others of current reference works. These together with the journal files regularly received through subscription are valuable facilities for the furthering of the many research problems which are constantly being studied in the Department.

The College Library has likewise been made a depository for manuscripts. Representative of this type of contribution is the monograph of Dr. Joseph McFarland who has made a thorough study of Dysontogenetic and Mixed Tumors of the Urogenital Region. In publishing this article it was not possible to include the charts, graphs, and analysis of cases which formed a portion of this study and the extensive bibliography (513 titles and references) upon which it was based. Dr. McFarland has, therefore, presented a complete copy of this study to the Library of the American College of Surgeons and one to the College of Physicians in Philadelphia in order that this material may be available to anyone studying this problem. Other members of the profession, considering the College Library as a suitable means for the preservation and distribution of such studies, have added similar material to the files.

Another collection of manuscripts which has been undertaken includes signed papers of significance to the annals of the College. This group of manuscripts should include presidential and fellowship addresses, orations, and other addresses presented at the Clinical Congresses. It is hoped that officers and guest speakers will co-operate in collecting this material for the archives of the College.

The College reprint collection is divided into two sections. The first, the Fellow file, includes the reprints of articles by Fellows of the College arranged alphabetically by author and is representative of the contributions each man has made to the progress of surgery. The second division also includes the publications of Fellows and friends of the College. In this section, however, the reprints are classified by subject so that they may be readily accessible for loan when requests for data upon specific subjects are received. Although this loan file, the College Package Library, is extensive and representative of the best in the surgical literature, it is not complete with respect to any one subject. In order that it may be as comprehensive as possible, Fellows are urged to continue their contributions of reprints and of unbound journals, when feasible, placing the College Library upon their mailing list to receive duplicate copies of their writings as published.

SERVICES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF LITERARY RESEARCH

The value of this collection of reference works and reprints, especially in so far as the individual surgeon located at a distance from the College is concerned, is measured by the services offered by the Department of Literary Research. This Department consists of a staff of workers equipped to select reprints on medical and surgical subjects, compile bibliographies, and prepare abstracts and translations. If reprints only are desired, these are supplied without charge in Package Library form; the number of articles sent in response to each request varies depending upon the extent and availability of the articles upon the subject. Whatever the number, the time expended by an investigator in making his research is considerably lessened through the use of this loan material.

His time may be conserved, likewise, in the compilation of bibliographies and translations. Trained workers in each of these fields, assisted by accurate typists, compose a staff of workers equipped to care for any research problem in the domain of medical literature. Whether the bibliography be a simple one covering only the literature of recent years and requiring the checking of references from a single heading in the indices, or more comprehensive, requiring the selection of titles listed under numerous anatomical divisions, this experienced staff can be depended upon to do the work with a minimum expenditure of time and money. The complete and accurate citations furnished by these workers, accompanied by the free loan material in the College Package Library, form an excellent basis for the surgeon's investigation. When this portion of his study has been completed, he may select from the bibliography additional articles to be abstracted or translated.

Whether he requires the abstract of an English article, or a translation or abstract from the foreign literature (including the German, French, Italian, Spanish, Rumanian, Hungarian, Russian, or Scandinavian languages), or a series of translations, the staff is equipped to care for his request. Each year, many requests for research are received, some of them being continuous surveys which have carried through the years. Whether the material is to be utilized as a background for laboratory experiments, for the study of an unusual clinical case, or to assist in reviewing an extensive series of cases in connection with the preparation of a scientific paper, the Department is ready to be of service. Its purpose is to make the best in the medical and surgical literature of the world available to any member of the profession, whatever his need and wherever he may be located, and to do this expeditiously and economically.

COMMITTEE ON THE LIBRARY

At the annual meeting of the Board of Regents in 1935 a Committee on the Library was appointed. The function of this Committee is to advise and assist the Librarian in the further development of this department of the College. The present committee consists of approximately fifty members, selected because of their marked interest in books and libraries, and, in particular, in the Library of the American College of Surgeons. During the past two years they have been especially effective in searching out material representative of their professional interests and of the localities in which they reside. Grateful acknowledgment is made of their services in this connection as well as those extended in an advisory capacity.

RARE-BOOK ROOM

The beautiful room on the main floor of the College building, which served the former residents as a library, has been equipped with suitable lighting so that the rare volumes which form an important part of the College collection may be properly displayed. The present collection includes volumes from the historical group presented by Dr. H. Winnett Orr of Lincoln, Nebraska, and single volumes, as well as smaller collections, presented by individual Fellows.

In this room, also, are displayed some of the case records of Fellows to whom certificates of honor and life fellowships in the College have been awarded since 1930. Fellows passing through Chicago are urged to visit the College headquarters in order to inspect and enjoy this very interesting and beautiful room.

PORTRAITS AND MEMORIALS IN THE LIBRARY

The Albert J. Ochsner Memorial Room contains the collection of photographs assembled by the late Dr. Ochsner, a founder, treasurer, and past president of the College, as well as mementos of his life and work. Portraits of Dr. Elijah Dewey Harmon, physician and surgeon at Fort Dearborn in 1830, and Mrs. Harmon, and a photograph of Mrs. Maud Mellish Wilson, have been hung in the Reading Room. A picture of the Nicholas Senn Memorial Banquet of 1905 is of great interest, including as it does in the group pictures of many other prominent Chicago medical men assembled to do him honor. Mementos of historical significance—the mortar and pestle of the early physician and the medicine chest of the venturesome surgeon who accompanied the early French explorers along the Mississippi—these and other items of historical significance have been fittingly placed in the Library where it is hoped they will serve as an incentive for further gifts of a similar nature.

Eleven beautiful anatomical plates, the gift of Dr. Edward Ochsner of Chicago and Mrs. Nancy Ekstrom Amour of Stockholm, Sweden, adorn the north wall of the Reading Room. These are engravings from copperplates which bear the name of A. Cattani. One carries the date: 16 Novembre 1778, and the inscription: In Bologna presso l'Autore nel Borgo delle Tovaglie. These plates are representative of the beautiful workmanship of the time and place, and, as such, are a much appreciated gift of the past year.

The Library has likewise a small but interesting collection of bookplates. To extend this Collection, the librarian would be glad to receive two copies of the personal bookplate of each Fellow of the College and would also appreciate having such bookplates placed in any monographs presented to the Library. To these volumes, further, would be added the College bookplate which affords an opportunity for the registration of the signature of the donor.

MEDICAL MOTION PICTURES

THE personnel of the Committee on Medical Motion Pictures is as follows:

WILL H. HAYS, Esq., New York, Honorary President

J. BENTLEY SQUIER, New York, Chairman

W. W. CHIPMAN, Montreal

MALCOLM T. MACEachern, Chicago

GEORGE CRILE, Cleveland

BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Chicago

PHILEMON E. TRUESDALE, Fall River

The study of medical motion pictures was undertaken by the American College of Surgeons in 1926, and the importance of this means of disseminating medical knowledge is now generally recognized.

Motion pictures present a valuable supplement to the classroom lecture, to the demonstration, or to the thesis. Every film which is produced should comply with specific fundamental requirements along the following lines:

1. Selection of the subject matter.
2. Preparation of the scenario.
3. Illustration by animation or drawings.
4. Photography.
5. Ethics.
6. Teaching value.

The Committee on Medical Motion Pictures of the American College of Surgeons desires to review medical and surgical films. Many pictures have been received, and as they are reviewed a card catalogue is being compiled for the purpose of recording detailed data concerning medical and surgical films of high quality. This digest enables the College to supply information regarding films which are available on a given subject, where they may be obtained, and whether or not they are satisfactory for the purpose desired.

Films received at the College are reviewed by a committee consisting of recognized authorities on the subject matter portrayed. Films which meet basic standards from the standpoint of professional technique, general teaching value, and photographic quality are approved by the College, and the author of the film is authorized to insert a legend which reads:

Passed by the
American College of Surgeons.

Principles which guide the College in evaluating medical motion pictures have been formulated by the Committee on Medical Motion Pictures. Information regarding the medical motion picture films which meet the basic standards of the College (including rental charges and conditions under which the films may be procured) may be secured from the individual or organization responsible for the particular film. The College itself does not maintain a film library, but is ready and willing to disseminate information pertaining to medical motion picture films. A list of films approved by the College was published in the October, 1938, BULLETIN.

The College has produced a film entitled "That Man May Live," which portrays progress in the medical care of man and animals, and emphasizes the debt of man to research conducted on animals and the necessity for its continuance.

Another film which is distributed by the College is entitled "Good Hospital Care." It gives a brief outline of the growth and development of hospital standardization, and a complete demonstration of the procedure in an approved hospital in arriving at the diagnosis and rendering the best possible care to the patient.

CLINICAL CONGRESS

NEW YORK-BROOKLYN—OCTOBER 17-21, 1938

THE twenty-eighth annual session of the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons was held in New York during the week of October 17 to 21, 1938, with headquarters at The Waldorf-Astoria. The comprehensive program of operative clinics and demonstrations at the five medical schools and more than sixty hospitals, planned by the surgeons of New York City and Brooklyn, provided a complete showing of their clinical activities in all departments of surgery and the surgical specialties. In addition, the committees arranged a series of non-operative clinics in many of the large hospitals and medical schools for the presentation of the work being done in many special fields. The programs were so correlated that the visiting surgeon could devote his time continuously, if he so desired, to clinics dealing with the special subject in which he was most interested. Special features of the clinical program included cancer clinics, which demonstrated the treatment of cancer by surgery, radium, and x-ray; fracture and traumatic surgery clinics which presented modern methods in the treatment of injuries; neurological, thoracic, genito-urinary, bone and joint, and plastic and faciomaxillary surgical clinics.

An outline of the programs which were arranged during the week, the address of the retiring president, Dr. Frederic A. Besley, and the Annual Oration by Dr. Walter W. Chipman, may be found on subsequent pages. Reports of special committees of the College are given on preceding pages. A special number of the Official Journal, SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS, to be published in February, 1939, will contain the addresses on general surgery and surgery of the eye, ear, nose and throat which were presented at the evening meetings, the addresses given at the six afternoon symposia, and some of the opening talks at the midday round table conferences. Supplementary data will be included in the January, 1939, BULLETIN of the College. Abstracts of papers presented before the Hospital Conference will also be printed in the BULLETIN.

ANNUAL MEETING, BOARD OF GOVERNORS

BALLROOM, THE WALDORF-ASTORIA—1:30 P.M., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20

Report of the Committee on Nominations:

For Board of Regents, term expiring 1941: IRVIN ABELL, M.D., Louisville; ARTHUR W. ALLEN, M.D., Boston; FREDERICK A. COLLIER, M.D., Ann Arbor; JOHN R. FRASER, M.D., Montreal; GEORGE P. MULLER, M.D., Philadelphia.

For Board of Regents, term expiring 1939 (to serve the unexpired term of HOWARD C. NAFFZIGER, M.D., who becomes the sixteenth member of the Board of Regents elected by the Fellows of the College to the Presidency): HARRY S. GRADLE, M.D., Chicago.

For Board of Regents, term expiring 1940 (to serve the unexpired term of ALLEN B. KANAVEL, M.D., deceased):

JAMES MONROE MASON, M.D., Birmingham.

The personnel of the Nominating Committee was as follows:

HAROLD L. FOSS, M.D., Danville, Chairman; VICTOR D. DAVIDSON, M.D., St. John; WILLIAM H. LUEDDE, M.D., St. Louis; WILLIS D. GATCH, M.D., Indianapolis; ARTHUR C. SCOTT, M.D., Temple.

PRESENTATION OF HONORARY FELLOWS

REGENT IRVIN ABELL: Mr. President, on recommendation of the Board of Regents may I present for Honorary Fellowship in the American College of Surgeons:

SURGEON GENERAL CHARLES RANSOM REYNOLDS, M.D., D.S.M.,
Washington, District of Columbia.

Served in the Philippine Insurrection; Chief Surgeon of the Second Army, American Expeditionary Forces, World War; Legion of Honor (France); Distinguished Service Medal, World War; Surgeon General of the United States Army with the rank of Major General.

REGENT ARTHUR W. ALLEN: Mr. President, on recommendation of the Board of Regents, may I present for Honorary Fellowship in the American College of Surgeons

WILLIAM HENEAGE OGILVIE, M.A., L.R.C.P. (Lond.), F.R.C.S. (Eng.), M.Ch., M.D., London, England.

Member of Council, Royal College of Surgeons of England; Teacher in Clinical Surgery, Guy's Hospital; Examiner in Surgery, University of Cambridge; Surgeon, Guy's Hospital, Royal Masonic Hospital, Hampstead General Hospital, and St. Vincent's Orthopedic Hospital.

PRESIDENT NAFFZIGER: By and with the authority vested in me by the Fellows of the American College of Surgeons, I admit you, Surgeon General Charles Ransom Reynolds and Mr. William Heneage Ogilvie, to Honorary Fellowship in the College and to all of the rights, privileges, and distinctions pertaining thereto; and in testimony thereof, I present to each of you a diploma, bearing the seal of the College and the inscription of its proper officers. Let the candidates be invested with the hood appropriate to the Honorary Fellowship.

PRESENTATION OF INITIATES

CLASS OF 1938

GEORGE CRILE, M.D., Chairman, Board of Regents: On behalf of the Board of Regents of the American College of Surgeons, I have the honor to present for fellowship in the College initiates as follows:

United States.	496	Bermuda.	1
Hawaii.	1	Brazil.	3
Puerto Rico.	2	Chile.	1
Virgin Islands.	1	China.	3
Canada.	23	Colombia.	1
Africa.	1	India.	2
Antigua (West Indies).	1	Iran (Persia).	1
Australia.	1	Mexico.	1
Total.	539

There were 7,339 applications on file January 1, 1938. Of these, 1,394 were already approved by their State, Provincial, or Unit Committees on Credentials.

During the year 1,470 were presented to State, Provincial and Unit Committees on Credentials. Of these 607, or 41% were recommended. Of the total recommended for fellowship before and since January 1, 1938 (2,001), our careful sifting process has admitted to fellowship only 539, or 27%, constituting the initiates who are here present. Of the total 7,339 applications on file January 1, 1938, the 539 accepted initiates represent only 7 1/3% approved, or one in every 14 applicants.

Mr. President, inasmuch as the initiates herewith presented have fulfilled all of the requirements for admission and have affirmed the Fellowship Pledge of the American College of Surgeons, on authority of the Board of Regents of the College I take great pleasure in presenting them for fellowship.

PRESIDENT NAFFZIGER: By and with the authority vested in me by the Fellows of the American College of Surgeons, I admit you to fellowship in the College with all of the rights and privileges pertaining thereto.

MEDICAL RECORDS PRIZE AWARD

CLASS OF 1938

J. BENTLEY SQUIER, M.D.: The Board of Directors of SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS is so heartily in sympathy with the program of the College and its demands that all patients should receive careful study, as evidenced by adequate records, that in 1930 it asked of the Board of Regents the privilege of presenting an annual prize in the form of a life fellowship in the American College of Surgeons for the most acceptable set of medical records presented by the candidates during the preceding year. The prize winners of the last seven years have come from Louisiana, Texas, Montana, West Virginia, Michigan, Alberta, Michigan, and Pennsylvania respectively. The prize consists of five hundred dollars, invested in the name of the successful candidate for life dues in the American College of Surgeons, and is accompanied by an appropriately engraved certificate of appreciation on behalf of the donor, SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS.

On behalf of the Journal, I transmit to you, Mr. President, this prize and certificate.

PRESIDENT NAFFZIGER: That fairness to the candidates may be assured, the College has been most careful to surround the choice with every safeguard. Of all the medical records submitted during the year, 25 medical records, outstanding because of their evidence of careful study of the patient, have been selected. These were examined by the full Committee of the College on History Reviews with the name of the surgeon and his address eliminated so that an unbiased choice might be insured. May I ask to come to the platform.

DR. M. TISCHER HOERNER, of Dayton, Ohio

On behalf of the College, I extend to you the congratulations of the Board of Regents upon the excellence of your medical records. This recognition of your work is an expression by the College of its belief that scientific investigation, careful records, and critical analysis of medical records elevate the standard of surgery and insure to patients the most efficient care. It is our hope that this expression of commendation may serve to stimulate others to emulate your example, advance the frontiers of surgical knowledge, and benefit those entrusted to their care.

On behalf of SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS and the American College of Surgeons, I present a certificate of honor to you together with the prize award representing payment of life dues in the American College of Surgeons. I congratulate you.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS

THE AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS IN RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT ON ITS 25TH ANNIVERSARY

FREDERIC A. BESLEY, M.D., F.A.C.S., Waukegan, Illinois

This, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the American College of Surgeons, is a milestone in its progress. Let us review the accomplishments of its first quarter of a century. Have the years of planning and of laboring to uplift the standards of surgery produced results? In what directions has the influence of the College been strongly and courageously wielded? In what other directions could that influence have been more powerful, more beneficial, more significant, had our vision been clearer and our convictions stronger?

This is a time for critical self-analysis by the Fellows of the College. We are starting on a new stretch of our journey. We have an opportunity to redefine our objectives and to re-intensify our efforts in the directions in which we appear to be pursuing the right course. Today is the future of which some of us had a vision twenty-five years ago. The realities around us now are the fulfillment of those dreams of yesterday. In all respects they do not meet our expectations, but not one of us will question that, without the dreams, the realities would have been far less satisfying. Therefore we must focus our eyes today on the next quarter of a century. We must dream and plan anew, that the record of twenty-five years' accomplishment upon which the new generation of surgeons will look back in the year 1963, shall be equally as inspiring, equally as substantial and impressive, as the one we now review.

Over the dreamers of 1913 we have important advantages today. These are the results of their great foresight. We are solidly organized for smooth functioning. We have accumulated experience in co-operative effort which gives us confidence. We have acquired a background, a sense of stability, and a feeling of permanence that equip us for accomplishing much more in the future than we have in the past. We have won in the eyes of the profession and of the public a position of unquestioned leadership in our field. This last achievement compels us, as trusted guardians of the sick and injured, to insist that surgeons be guided by the highest professional and ethical considerations. Upon us devolve responsibilities not alone for our own fellowship, but for all members of the profession. Looking to the future, we see no lessening of responsibilities. Rather, as our ideals and our purposes become more widely understood, we see increasing dependence upon the College, by both the profession and the laity, for educational, scientific, and ethical leadership.

Our founder and organizer, Franklin H. Martin, set us an example of courage and of persistence that is a wellspring of inspiration. Consider the obstacles he faced in trying to weld a profession composed of individualists, into a guild organized to curb unethical practices by individuals, and to encourage a co-operative ideal that would necessarily destroy individualism of the old self-sufficient type. The College stands as a living monument to his success in overcoming these obstacles. He took the spirit of democracy and the spirit of co-operation as ingredients, and mixed a potion strange to the taste of the average surgeon of his day. Many of them drank reluctantly. But time and circumstance, and his own gifts of diplomacy and persuasiveness, were on the side of Dr. Martin, and they learned to like the potion as they felt its stimulating effects.

In organizing the College Dr. Martin and his associates followed the principles of democratic rule, distributing the executive power among many individuals through a representative Board of Governors and a Board of Regents who would be free from any direct self interest or monetary gain. Thus they assured adaptability, and the constant influx of new ideas. The basic principles involved in the welfare of the patient will not change, but the modes of applying these principles are changing constantly with new conditions.

As an illustration, there has arisen of late the important question of graduate training in general surgery and its allied specialties. The College has always been actively interested in the formal education and early training of the surgeon. But latterly surgery has been tremendously complicated theoretically and practically by new discoveries and new methods, and by modern developments in techniques. To obtain the desirable command of knowledge and the necessary skill for precision and safety, the student of surgery today must add more supervised training to his clinical preparation. Not enough qualified hospitals, however, are providing opportunities for him to gain such practice. Therefore the College is assuming the responsibility which rightly belongs to it to determine the extent of the need and to encourage hospitals to inaugurate a graduate training program in surgery or to enlarge and improve the one they may now have. The Board of Regents of the College by raising the requirements for admission to fellowship for this and succeeding years' graduates, obligated it to aid in providing opportunities for the extended training that these higher standards demand.

The established departmental activities of the College, since they were carefully based on pressing needs for reform or for research, have produced actual, tangible improvements in surgical and hospital methods and environment. Perhaps we should consider whether any of these departments have accomplished the purposes for which they were founded to such a degree that their task is finished. Must the College ever be seeking new avenues of service, or does the future hold boundless opportunities for some of these established departments?

The Department of Hospital Standardization—one of our strongest divisions of endeavor, the achievements of which are so well known that they need no reiteration before this audience—what will be its future?

Hospitals, like the human beings who work in them, betray no signs of reaching a state of perfection, despite our energetic efforts to improve them. This is an admission we must make at the outset. It means that the work of the hospital department of the College will never be finished. Changing times will only bring new problems. Now, the department must co-operate with the Committee on Graduate Training by continuing the surveying, analyzing, and planning required for developing graduate training opportunities in acceptable hospitals. In assuming this responsibility the department is insuring its own happy destiny, by multiplying its opportunities for present and future service to the patient in the hospital.

The Department of Clinical Research has likewise made rapid progress and insured its permanent usefulness by seeking and making the most of opportunities for service. Great educational and practical benefits have resulted from the promotion and surveys of cancer clinics, the registry of bone sarcoma, the collection of records on five-year cancer cures, the surveys and standardizations of medical departments in industry, and the efforts to improve the management of fractures. The Fellows of the College are essentially practical, realistic, clinically minded surgeons, and in the future they will certainly be guided more and more by the evaluations of advances being made in clinical surgery as they are presented by the Department of Clinical Research. In the past four decades much of the advance in surgical therapy has been in the technique of operating, and it may be predicted that in the future increasing study and research will be devoted to the cause, pathology, and progress of those diseases which are now and will later be found to be amenable to surgical treatment. The Department has before it an ever widening horizon of usefulness and influence in contributing to the advance of scientific surgery.

The field representatives of the College deserve especial acknowledgment for the surpassing value of their services. These experienced, highly trained men have worked diligently to secure first hand, accurate information of many kinds from many sources. Their findings have influenced the determination of policies by the Board of Regents, and the execution of these policies by the administrative executives. The proficiency of these investigators is increasing. In the future it will doubtless be necessary to increase their number as the scope of the College activities broadens to include new avenues of service. It can be stated with some degree of finality that this branch of the College work will grow and become more vital.

Another activity that has bright prospects for continued growth, is the Library and Department of Literary Research. A valuable service, constantly improving, is being rendered. The usefulness of the package library service cannot be overstated. In the future the service of the library will be more utilized and appreciated. By co-operating in securing additions to its collections, the individual Fellow can help to increase the department's ability to serve the fellowship.

The College has used extensively the congress and conference method of educating the profession and the layman. While this work is not handled in a specific department, but is participated in by all departments, it is an established activity that for our purposes today needs separate consideration. It is an activity that has reached astonishing proportions. The Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons is one of the great educational events of the year on this continent. Few regular occurrences of any nature are accorded more attention from the press. This shows that the College has been able, with the co-operation of the press, to arouse a demand for news of advances in surgery. When to this public educational value is added the instructional value to the surgeon himself, it is safe to prophesy that the annual Clinical Congress will have a brilliant future to correspond with its brilliant past.

The miniature clinical congresses, or Sectional Meetings, the idea for which was conceived twenty years ago, have performed in their lesser spheres the same service as the larger congress—and have the same outlook for continued success. The first one was held in Butte, Montana, the beginning of a series of meetings which have introduced the College and its work to the American people in their home communities. In the smaller group more discussion and freer expression are possible, and the scientific sessions and the operative clinics held in the smaller cities have been valuable supplements to the Clinical Congresses held in the larger cities. The Community Health Meetings, for obvious reasons, have been particularly well attended in the smaller communities, and have unquestionably stimulated confidence in the doctor. Confidence, so engendered, will help the public to seek medical advice more frequently and follow it more intelligently. The public should not be expected to accept medical practices on faith. There is nothing occult or mysterious about modern medicine; its scientific basis should be made more clear to the layman to help him to distinguish between imposters and competent doctors, and between haphazard and correct procedures.

This introduces the subject of public education which cannot be too strongly emphasized as a field which must be cultivated more systematically by the medical profession. The College has already prepared the ground in a more or less incidental fashion through Clinical Congresses, Sectional Meetings, and the publicity arising naturally as a result of its various activities, especially Hospital Standardization. The community health meetings have provided an excellent impetus. More must be done, however, of a direct nature. The practice of medicine was never before so prominent in the day's news as it is now. Back of it is a gradual awareness by the public that great things have been occurring in the field of medical science—an awareness that we have ourselves tried to develop—and people want to know more about the new discoveries, the new theories, and the new procedures. They also want to know why they are not, all of them, benefiting from those discoveries as they should.

Capitalizing upon this interest, authors and publishers are turning out books and articles that are being read avidly. And what is in them? Much sensation and distortion of facts, merely to enhance their readability, in order that they may sell. Some of the current popularized medical literature is good and is truly educational, but much of it exaggerates the flaws which we all know exist, while it fails to convey the impression it should of the sound features of modern medical practice. As is always the case in such a situation, the attack is read by ten persons, to one who reads the answering defense if the profession is sufficiently aroused to prepare one for publication. The result is that we may expect a weakening of public confidence unless direct measures are taken to interpret the doctor aright. When the profession is misrepresented as being more interested in its economic security, let us say, than in healing the sick, the remedy is to let people know, in more systematic ways than we have heretofore attempted, that we are surgeons first and earners afterward, for this is true of the great majority of members of the profession.

This brings us to a consideration of the unfortunate practice of fee-splitting, which furnishes the public with one reason for the accusation of commercialism. Fee-splitting is diminishing, we believe, but it is still too prevalent. From the beginning the College has fought it. Candidates must sign a pledge not to indulge in it. Hospitals in which it is countenanced are not approved. Other professional groups have likewise acted against it. In some instances the agitation has only degraded an open practice to a surreptitious one, so more stringent measures are needed to abolish it completely. The competent physician should have a high enough estimate of his own worth to convince his patient of the value of his services, and should not expect what amounts to commission on a sale, deducted from the surgical fee. Such a practice endangers the patient because it fosters bargaining in patients, and the only way in which it can be completely eradicated is to educate the public to its evils. The Board of Regents of the College have done much to decrease the practice of fee-splitting. It is their clear and pressing duty to eliminate it altogether.

The doctor is handicapped because he cannot individually advertise his honesty, his philanthropy, his spirit of service, the way a man who operates a business can do, and so the critics are unanswered when they point to a practice, such as fee-splitting, which is really indulged in by only a small minority. Consequently the medical profession has to use extraordinary measures to regulate the unethical minority, in order that aspersions may not be cast through them upon the entire membership. Through its own organizations such as the American College of Surgeons it has provided for self-policing, as well as for developing of programs for broader and constantly improving service to the patient. To acquaint the public with the work the College is doing is to enlighten it concerning the scientific, humanitarian, and public service attitude that characterizes the typical surgeon who through his fellowship and support decides the scope of its activities.

It is true that the great advance shown by medicine, scientifically speaking, has not quite been equalled by medical practice as applied to the needs of all classes of society. This problem, however, is not by any means peculiar to the medical field. It exists in government—in industry—in education. The progress that has been made in improving the lot of the individual is generally obscured by the far greater progress in theoretical and factual knowledge in almost any field. A parallel can be drawn between this state of affairs and the noticeable lag—especially to other people—between almost any man's actions and his professed principles and ideals. We think that the medical profession is trying as hard as any other, and perhaps harder than most, to solve the problems arising out of uneven distribution of income which make its services easily available to a few people, but not obtainable by the great majority in the lower income brackets. It is unquestionably a fact that physicians and surgeons give more service for which they receive no money compensation than any other class of people in modern life—and they give it gladly because of the humanitarian motives that govern them.

The American College of Surgeons has always recognized the advantage for everybody concerned of united effort by all groups acting to improve the care of the sick and injured and to promote preventive medicine. This again might be considered a special activity in which all departments participate. Its program has been actuated by a desire to enable the surgeon to play in this joint effort the important part for which his background and services qualify him, in order that the entire effort may be more effective. All plans of the College for the future are being made in this same co-operative spirit.

As for the science of surgery, the College has an ambitious project which typifies its zeal to spread knowledge. This refers to the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery. As yet there is no distinct building in which to house it, but a site had been acquired on which to build some day, and we dreamers of 1938 see upon it, not the old structure that now stands there, but a fitting monument to the zeal and inspiration of those who have led in the research work of the College. Nor is the project wholly dependent upon imagination for sustenance. An impressive nucleus for the collection of exhibits already exists. It is well arranged for display and bids fair in the not too distant future to outgrow the accommodations for its exhibition in the Administrative Building. The Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery will some day need a building of its own, and many of us, we hope, will live to see it a reality.

Chiefly, it is as a moral rather than a material force that we see the College of the future. Our ambition for it is that the quality in which it shall most excel will be that of worthy leadership. It needs no artful phraseology or extensive logic to point out that there is grave need for medical statesmen in the ranks of organized medicine. Men who have a broad vision, and the diplomatic and judicial qualifications which make for leadership, are required to cope with the difficult problems confronting us, which cannot be regarded with indifference and equanimity. It is the duty of the American College of Surgeons to discover and to develop leaders who will make the influence of the profession felt in improving the whole environment of human life. A large part of that responsibility is distinctly medical, for a high average of health is essential to progress. We in the medical profession are compelled today, for our own good and for the good of society, to pool our problems with those of other social agencies, to the end that the fundamental factor of adequate medical care may be a strong impetus to their constructive efforts. We must maintain a flexible mentality. Good health fosters economic self sufficiency, good citizenship—everything that makes a happy life. Therefore it is our duty to welcome—not to resent—the interest being shown in high places in the conduct of medical affairs; it shows appreciation of the importance of the work we are doing and can do. As an organization of surgeons we have before us a great opportunity to throw our experience, and intimate knowledge of the problems, back of any effort to provide better care for the patient, with the insistence that the direction of the effort be placed in the hands of a competent medical personnel.

If we make the most of our present opportunities, we face a busy, eventful, new quarter of a century. That is what we want—is it not?—strenuous working programs ahead to call forth our best efforts—to develop us individually and as a strong fellowship striving to serve our generation. The College was erected on an ideal for service; so far we think we have lived up to that ideal to the best of our collective abilities. The prospect is that we shall continue to go forward by holding to that ideal. Hopefully and optimistically we set forth on our new quarter of a century—"it is better to journey hopefully than to arrive."

ANNUAL ORATION

OUR COLLEGE MANDATE—A TRIBUTE TO ALLEN B. KANAHEL

WALTER W. CHIPMAN, M.D., F.A.C.S., Montreal, Quebec

For the honor of submitting to our College its fourth Annual Oration, I cordially thank the Board of Regents, and especially its distinguished Chairman, George Crile. Crile of Cleveland be it remembered; the famous surgeon, the able administrator and the loyal friend! A human dynamo, the supreme embodiment of his own belief "that man is created and driven by electrical force" (in some way securing a double share for himself!). He must forgive me, for so richly does he deserve it. A Founder of our College, its second President, Regent, for fourteen years Chairman of the Board, and since the lamented death of Franklin Martin, our Director General, in 1935, the executive head of this great foundation. One of the Old Guard he, and how cheerfully we obey him.

On May 5, our College celebrated its twenty-fifth year, its quarter-century of service in these two Americas. Very reasonably, I think that we may be proud of the achievement. However, "Wisdom is justified only of her children"; or in other words this very success carries with it a commensurate, an increasing responsibility.

While we have already 12,700 of these children, a large fellowship, mere numbers or mere size may be, in and of itself, no special virtue. Quality is the thing that counts, and a set regard for our abiding fitness in this changing world. And it is of this aspect of our College life that I shall speak.

You will remember that our Charter of Incorporation, in somewhat quaint phrase, extends "To All To Whom These Presents Shall Come, Greeting." And to this the 450 Founders annexed our Constitution and our By-laws, bequeathed to us this College Mandate. And we Fellows implement this Mandate, give our hand upon it (as the name implies); accept this trust, the privilege, the authority and the obligation.

For as a College we solemnly promise to do what we can for the betterment of surgery, its training and its practice; to improve our hospitals and our medical schools; to make of our College a great clearing house, wherein a sound knowledge and a safe technique may be advanced; may be tested, stored and distributed. It is indeed a reform from within, undertaken to make our surgical world a safer and a better place; the welfare of the patient, the Alpha and the Omega of it all.

And this is no small domain or no light undertaking. Even in our approved hospitals there are two and one half million operations every year, and how imperative is the need of a wise, a vigilant and a critical stewardship. I need not say here that good surgery is a difficult, a responsible and a painstaking business. To secure this for rich and poor alike is the purpose of this Mandate, and it is the sum and substance of our College life.

Our College Mandate then—and with a special reference to the life and work of the late Allen B. Kanavel, distinguished Regent.

And first, in the name of the College, I extend an added welcome to the Class of '38; the 539 Fellows who have been admitted this evening. Your number is somewhat greater than the number of our Founders—the Founders of this College. Our one wish is that you prove yourselves as good as they. This fellowship confers a two-fold blessing—you donate yourselves to our College life-stream, a carefully-matched transfusion; and in return, to each of you are thrown open the gates of a larger and more useful life.

Thucydides said of the ancient Greeks that they "possessed the power of thinking before they acted, and of acting too," and it is just this power of thinking and of acting that has set its seal upon this later Magna Graecia—our own America.

I can think of no better axiom to govern our College life; the sine qua non of any achievement. No one can gainsay that our graduates were men of thought and action.

It is sometimes said of Franklin Martin that he dreamed three dreams and lived to make them all come true. And these three were:—

(a) The publication of the Journal, SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS in 1905.

(b) The creation of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America, in 1910.

(c) The founding of the American College of Surgeons, three years later, in 1913.

The Journal and the Congress were the successive steps that led to the foundation of our College. How clearly it now appears to us! Franklin Martin, the great har-binger of our College Mandate, now rests from his labors. We owe to him and his, a debt we never can repay.

And the truth is the surgical world had great need of such a Mandate. May I place before you, very shortly, the proof of this, the setting of that earlier time.

Though the American Medical Association had been founded in 1847 for the betterment of medical education and the control of irregular practice, very little was achieved until in 1904 it appointed a special council for the study of medical education and hospitals. At this time there were in this country 162 medical schools—more than in all the rest of the world put together. And is it any wonder that Henry S. Pritchett, President of the Carnegie Foundation, said of these schools, that nearly half were entirely inadequate; and Abraham Flexner declared that our "medical education includes something of what is best, and all of what is worst, to be found among civilized nations."

And during these years surgery, perhaps, was the greater offender. For brilliant as were many of its exponents, the general standards were low, the prevailing methods slap-dash and ill informed, with no general oversight or organization.

Samuel Gross of Philadelphia had published the first "Complete System of Surgery" in 1859. Writing in 1876 he declared that "there is not a medical man on this continent who devotes himself exclusively to the practice of surgery." This was the year—1876—of the founding of the American Gynecological Society. It was not until 1880 that the American Surgical Association was formed, and only in 1903 the Society of Clinical Surgery.

As an illuminating corollary we observe that in 1873 there were only 149 hospitals in these United States. In 1934, sixty and one years later, the number is given as 6,334, with their own hospital association formed in 1899.

This addition of 95 hospitals a year was merely the result of supply and demand, for there developed an enormous increase in the work of general surgery and its specialties, with the rapid creation of sixteen special surgical societies or associations. In all conscience it was rapid—really catching, like the measles. These sixteen societies, however, were separate and distinct, determined in part by the points of the compass, and in part by the special character of the work; separate and distinct I say—there was little dealing with one's neighbor, for there was as yet, no common nexus between them. Assuredly there was a large and disjointed house to be set in order—in Flexner's phrase, "something of what is best," and at the beginning of the century, abundant need of our College Mandate. "Vere scribere est per causas scribere"—to write truthfully is to write in the light of the causes of things.

And so in 1913, the stage was set.

Two ways were open to us—either to follow tradition and exact a scholastic examination, again an exclusive hierarchy; or on the other hand to create from the beginning a surgical commonwealth, the members chosen for their character, their actual work and experience.

I shall always believe that, very fortunately, our young College chose the latter course. For in so doing it drew together the many surgical associations, gave them an axis as it were, and also it secured the influence and the weight of the whole profession. After all, in any arena a "punch" is the thing that counts, and the Mandate, to impress itself, must have this general strength behind it. Moreover, as we all know, an academic distinction may confer no skill in practice; even the author of a surgical text may be, as a surgeon, just a weariness to the flesh.

I make no apology for the early College requirements. Accordingly, in the first two years we admitted to fellowship 2024, established at once a powerful nucleus, to control, as it were, our cellular life. Speaking for the College we have had, as yet, no cause to regret it.

Again, in my judgment, our College gains no small measure of strength from its democratic form of government. As you know, fifty Governors are elected each year for a triennial term; seventeen of these represent fifteen surgical societies, and the Army and the Navy, while thirty-three are chosen by the Fellows at large. I think you will agree that this makes for a fair, a strong, and a cohesive organization.

And now concerning the Mandate, how much have we done, what is the accounting of our stewardship?

We are all familiar, I take it, or we should be, with the multiple activities of the College. I shall not enumerate them other than to indicate their wide range of usefulness. I have spoken of our College as a great clearing house, and this truly it has become. For example, it receives from special committees, annual reports of clinical research, of the standardization of hospitals and clinical laboratories, and of all the many problems that confront a surgical training and practice. Here, too, is our own Journal with its International Abstract of Surgery; the College Bulletins; a library of 25,000 volumes, with current monographs and periodicals, where there is a Department of Literary Research and, thank you, a "package edition" which I am using now. The College has a palatial home; it has held 28 clinical congresses, and nearly 200 sectional meetings; it has provided community health programs, round table talks, and a legion of lectures, both popular and scientific. Why, it reads, this curriculum, even as a liberal education. True, it has cost the College three and three-quarters millions of dollars. An expensive Mandate if you will, but the improvement in our hospitals alone is well worth the money.

This Hospital Standardization represents the largest work of its kind that has ever been undertaken; the largest, the most far-reaching and beneficent. In a true sense a hospital may be considered the fairest measure of any civilization, for it really shows how we treat the sick and the afflicted, and whether or not we are in any practical way our brother's keeper. This campaign begun twenty-one years ago with only 89 hospitals meeting the requirement, now shows 2664 that are fully approved. Read Malcolm T. MacEachern's textbook, "Hospital Organization and Management," published three years ago.

From the first this College has been intensively engaged in education, the education of ourselves, the laity, and the profession; it is and always has been a great postgraduate school. If any proof were wanting, just read the program of this annual meeting in New York. Everything is here, clinical, technical and scientific; and it is no eight-hour day I can assure you. The sorrow is that one cannot be in two places at once, for with this embarrassment of riches, the great difficulty is to choose.

Our College then is a great postgraduate school; and, in consequence, and for this very reason, it is intimately concerned with all medical education. During these years we have lived in the very midst of an American renaissance, and with truth it may be said that this College has borne a share in the great reform. In this time what a change has been wrought in our medical education! You cannot make bricks without the proverbial straw, and now we are indeed very proud of our 87 recognized medical schools.

Our chief concern, however, is with the young graduate, the embryo-surgeon. How is he to secure the requisite training, both in theory and in practice? How is he to spend the years between his graduation and his fellowship? These are the long, lean years of his so-called "graduate training"—the most critical and the most important of the whole surgical business.

Samuel Butler enunciated a great educational truth when he said, "Don't learn to do, but learn in doing." And this Mandate so expressed, has been for several years of urgent interest to the College. Various committees have been formed and have studied the many aspects of this important question. The Junior Candidate Group was a step in this direction, and from January 1, 1938, all applicants for fellowship must have at least three years of hospital training and experience—"to learn in doing" under control and supervision; and, Fellows of the College, we have promised to find the place.

Progress is a sign of life; we cannot stand still. It seems to me that in this best and natural way, we raise the College requirement and make the path straight toward an entrance examination for the fellowship. Personally I believe in such an examination. Surgery is a science as well as an art, and at some time in his apprenticeship, the candidate is to be examined in the basic sciences—Anatomy, Physiology, and Pathology—while later, if you will, he is to present his case reports. The average man is lazy and indifferent, most of us are average, and he needs such an objective, such a stimulus, to make him work. I have experienced it myself; I also have seen it; and I know.

The American Board of Surgery, established nearly two years ago, amply corroborates this undertaking. In this way then, we educate and train our future Fellows, and peradventure by so doing we may silence the criticism of, may even satisfy, the dyed-in-the-wool academic mandarin. In any case, we benefit ourselves in this appeasement.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston recently observed that the greatest single curse in medicine is the curse of unnecessary operations. Well, ladies and gentlemen, the above is the remedy to lift this curse, even from the mind of the austere physician; and in raising these standards, we are merely redeeming our promise; fulfilling the terms of our College Mandate.

The strength of it all, of course, is derived from the individual Fellow; his character, his education and his work. To the extent of his sixpence, the success or failure of the College is determined by each and every one of us. And just here how apposite is Carlyle's enunciation, "What you are thunders so loud I can't hear what you say."

May I quote to you the following: "The failure of any Fellow to conserve the ideals of professional honor, of service to the public, and of self-improvement, will impair more than we realize the prestige of the College." These were the words of Allen B. Kanavel in his Presidential Address given here in this city seven years ago.

From the beginning our College has been blessed with outstanding men, men who have guided its policy and given it impetus and inspiration. These have been our "prophets in Israel," and this Chicago surgeon was one of the latest, and by no means the least, of these. We do well to learn from such men, to study their lives, their influence, and example.

Born in Kansas in 1874, Allen Buckner Kanavel was graduated from Northwestern University in Arts, at the age of 22, and three years later took there (cum laude), his medical degree. After six months of graduate study in Vienna, he returned to Chicago, serving first as an interne at the Cook County Hospital, before becoming associated with the new Department of Surgery at Northwestern University Medical School. Here he was to spend the working years of his surgical life. Certainly he began at the foot of the ladder, for during the first year he merely supervised the patient's recovery from the anesthetic and was given no opportunity whatever even to observe a surgical operation. However, nothing could dampen his ardor and enthusiasm.

There is a strong satisfaction in recalling that not so many years later, nineteen to be exact, he became Professor of Surgery and Chairman of the Department, in this, his old school.

Endowed with skilful hands, these first years revealed an enquiring mind with a special aptitude in research.

Very early in his career he became impressed by the haphazard treatment of severe infections of the hand, and so he was led to undertake his famous dissections of the hand and forearm, using the injection of bismuth paste, to determine the relation of the tendon-sheaths, the lymphatic and fascial spaces—the natural channels of invasion. He was engaged on this work for some ten years, and in 1912 he published the monograph, "Infections of the Hand," now in its sixth edition, and a recognized authority throughout the world. In the words of his associate, Dr. Sumner L. Koch, "The complicated operations which he was able to perform on the hands and forearm reflected the skill of this investigation." Other studies undertaken now included the anatomy of the trigeminal nerve as leading to the removal of the Gasserian ganglion, and the approach to the pituitary fossa through the nose.

This was only the beginning. The long list of his contributions to our surgical literature reveals a wide range of investigation and a continued interest in all research. In his practice he was perhaps best described as a specialist in many fields; equally at home in the axilla, head and neck, and the abdomen. His operative work was neat, resolute, and resourceful, and Lord Moynihan was led to declare that in any serious operation upon himself, this surgeon was the man to do it. No mean tribute I can assure you! Moreover there were other qualities of the artist in him as expressed not only through his hands, but also by his unusual gift in writing and in speech. He was an admirable teacher, and an outstanding exponent, in his chosen profession.

In the midst of this active professional life, Dr. Kanavel found time, or made it, for many additional activities. He was one of the five founders of the Journal, SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS, and served throughout his life on its editorial staff, for the last three years its Editor in Chief; he was treasurer of the Clinical Congress during its seven independent years; and of the College, he was a Founder, a Governor, and a Regent, an active member of many committees and finally its President in 1931-32. Through it all, he was always the "man on deck," ready, purposeful and competent; I can imagine no finer tribute than the one paid to him by his Journal on his sixtieth birthday in commemoration of these services, and of his thirty-five years of surgical teaching and practice.

A full life indeed, and full to its tragic end.

All this work, of course, was the great center of his life, but there were nevertheless certain "margins of leisure" round about it; and these margins only revealed the more clearly, the lovable character of the man. He was always a great reader and genuinely attached to books. It is in his library that I best remember him. Again, he was fond of games, and of the open and the sky, and especially in his later years, Nature in her changing moods was a great solace to him.

The end came in a motor accident at the age of sixty-four. He has passed from the sight of men; but he lives "in minds made better by his presence, and in thoughts that pierce the night like stars."

Frederic A. Besley

FELLOWSHIP PLEDGE

RECOGNIZING that the American College of Surgeons seeks to develop, exemplify, and enforce the highest traditions of our calling, I hereby pledge myself, as a condition of Fellowship in the College, to live in strict accordance with all its principles, declarations, and regulations. * * In particular, I pledge myself to pursue the practice of surgery with thorough self-restraint and to place the welfare of my patients above all else; to advance constantly in knowledge by the study of surgical literature, the instruction of eminent teachers, interchange of opinion among associates, and attendance on the important societies and clinics; to regard scrupulously the interests of my professional brothers and seek their counsel when in doubt of my own judgment; to render willing help to my colleagues and to give freely my services to the needy. * * Moreover, I pledge myself, so far as I am able, to avoid the sins of selfishness; to shun unwarranted publicity, dishonest money-seeking, and commercialism as disgraceful to our profession; to refuse utterly all money trades with consultants, practitioners or others; to teach the patient his financial duty to the physician and to expect the practitioner to obtain his compensation directly from the patient; to make my fees commensurate with the service rendered and with the patient's rights; and to avoid discrediting my associates by taking unwarranted compensation. * * Finally, I pledge myself to co-operate in advancing and extending, by every lawful means within my power, the influence of the American College of Surgeons.

THE BY-LAWS

AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS

Founded by Surgeons of the United States and Canada, 1913

I. NAME. The name of the corporation is the American College of Surgeons.

II. OBJECT. The object for which it is formed is to establish and maintain an association of surgeons, not for pecuniary profit but for the benefit of humanity by advancing the science of surgery and the ethical and competent practice of its art; by establishing standards of hospital construction, administration and equipment, and all else that pertains to them; by engaging in scientific research to determine the cause, nature and cure of disease; by aiding in better instruction of doctors; by formulating standards of medicine; and methods for the improvement of all adverse conditions surrounding the ill and injured wherever found. To accomplish these benevolent and charitable aims, it shall be within the purposes of this corporation to use those means which from time to time may seem to it wise, including research, publication, education, the establishment and maintenance of libraries, museums, and other agencies or institutions appropriate hereto, and the co-operation of any other such activities, agencies or institutions already established or which may hereafter be established.

III. THE COLLEGE. Section 1. Membership. The College shall consist of all members of the corporation, such members to be designated as Fellows.

Section 2. Eligibility of Fellows. The Fellows of the College shall be graduates in medicine who are licensed to practice medicine in their respective states, provinces, or countries, or who are medical officers of the Federal services, who have made an application for fellowship, and who meet the qualification requirements which shall from time to time be established by the Board of Regents, and who shall have been elected to fellowship by the Board of Regents after investigation and report by the Committees on Credentials.

Section 3. Honorary Fellows. The Honorary Fellows of the College shall be individuals who possess an international reputation in the field of surgery or medicine, and who shall be elected to such membership by the Board of Regents. They shall not be required to pay any fees or dues and shall enjoy all of the privileges of other Fellows except those of voting and holding office.

Section 4. Designation of Fellows. Each individual elected to fellowship in the College shall be designated as a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons and shall be authorized and encouraged to use the letters "F.A.C.S." after his name on professional cards, in professional directories, and in articles published in medical literature.

Section 5. Annual and Special Meetings. The College shall hold an annual meeting on the day and at the place selected for the annual meeting of the Board of Governors. Special meetings of the College may be called at any other time at the request of the Board of Regents, or by a written call signed by not less than one hundred (100) Fellows. Thirty (30) days' notice of the time and place of annual or special meetings of the Fellows shall be given by mail, postage prepaid, addressed to each Fellow at his residence or place of business as the same shall appear on the books of the College.

Section 6. Quorum. The Fellows present shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any regular or special meeting of the Fellows.

Section 7. Expulsion of Fellows. Any Fellow of the College may be expelled for conduct which the Board of Regents shall find to be injurious to the good order, peace, or interest of the College, or derogatory to its dignity or inconsistent with its purposes, provided that:

(a) Not less than thirty (30) days prior to a regularly called meeting, the Board of Regents shall send by registered mail to the last known address of the Fellow against whom charges are made (1) a statement of the charges against him, (2) a recital of the time and place of such meeting, and (3) notice that then and there he will be given an opportunity to be heard relative to such charges;

(b) At such meeting the Fellow so charged shall be given a fair opportunity to be heard in person or by his representative, to submit his testimony and that of other witnesses in his behalf, and to make his defense;

(c) If a majority of all of the members of the Board of Regents shall find that the Fellow so charged is guilty of conduct warranting expulsion, it shall reduce its findings to writing, and shall vote the expulsion of such Fellow.

IV. BOARD OF REGENTS. Section 1. Membership. The Board of Regents shall consist of sixteen (16) members, fifteen (15) of whom shall be elected by the Board of Governors from among the Fellows in a manner to be determined by the Board of Regents. The Fellows of the College shall, at their annual meeting, elect one of their number to be the President of the College, and the Fellow so elected shall be the sixteenth member of the Board of Regents.

Section 2. Certificate of Election. Whenever members of the Board of Regents are elected, including elections to fill vacancies, a certificate under the seal of the College, giving the names of those elected and their term of office, shall be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of Cook County, Illinois.

Section 3. Vacancies. All vacancies on the Board of Regents shall be filled from the Fellows by the Board of Governors at its next regular or special meeting. Any Fellow so elected shall hold office until the expiration of the term in which the vacancy occurred. The Board of Regents may, however, appoint a Fellow to serve as Regent until the vacancy is filled by the Board of Governors.

Section 4. Duties. The Board of Regents shall have the control and management of the affairs and funds of the College, such control and management to include, without limiting in any manner the foregoing powers, the following: to adopt rules and regulations for the admission of Fellows; to fix initial fees and dues of Fellows; to elect Fellows to the College; to arrange for convocations or other meetings for the conferring of fellowships; to arrange for the annual Clinical Congress and such sectional or other meetings as may be deemed advisable; to call any meetings of the College not already provided for; to create, appoint and direct all standing committees; to create such executive and administrative offices as may be necessary and appoint incumbents thereto; to elect members of the Executive, Finance, and Central Credentials Committees; to have supervision of all activities and business affairs of the College; and to transact all business not otherwise provided for that may pertain to the College.

Section 5. Chairman and Vice Chairman. The Chairman of the Board of Regents shall be annually elected for a term of one (1) year by the Board of Regents, from its own members. He shall preside at all meetings of the Board, and shall execute all duties delegated to him by the Board. A Vice Chairman shall also be elected in a similar manner. He shall preside at all meetings of the Board in the absence of the Chairman, and perform such other duties as shall be delegated to him by the Board of Regents. In the event of the death or resignation of either the Chairman or the Vice Chairman, the office shall be filled by election at the next meeting of the Board of Regents.

Section 6. Regular and Special Meetings. Regular meetings of the Board of Regents shall be held at least annually at the call of the Chairman of the Board. Special meetings may be convened at any time by the Chairman of the Board, or on a request made to him in writing and signed by thirty (30) members of the Board of Governors, or by nine (9) members of the Board of Regents. Not less than five (5) days' notice of the time and place of such meetings shall be given by mail, postage prepaid, addressed to each member of the Board of Regents at his residence or place of business as the same shall appear on the books of the College.

Section 7. Quorum. Nine (9) members of the Board of Regents shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

V. BOARD OF GOVERNORS. Section 1. Founders of the College. The members of the first Board of Governors shall be designated as Founders of the American College of Surgeons.

Section 2. Membership. The Fellows of the College shall nominate and annually elect, in a manner to be determined by the Board of Regents, fifty (50) of their number to membership on the Board of Governors, each to serve for a term of three (3) years. Each of the following surgical associations and societies may also nominate each year one Fellow as a candidate for the Board of Governors:

American Surgical Association

Surgical Section of the American Medical Association

Section on Obstetrics, Gynecology, and Abdominal Surgery of the American Medical Association

American Gynecological Society

Western Surgical Association

Section on Surgery of the Canadian Medical Association

American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists, and Abdominal Surgeons

American Orthopedic Association

American Association of Genito-Urinary Surgeons

American Laryngological Association

American Institute of Homeopathy

Pacific Coast Surgical Association

Medical Corps, U. S. Army

Medical Corps, U. S. Navy

Section 3. Vacancies. The Board of Regents shall elect members from among the Fellows to fill vacancies in the current membership in the Board of Governors due to death, resignation, or other causes. Any member so elected shall hold office until the expiration of the term in which the vacancy occurred.

Section 4. Election of Board of Regents. The Board of Governors shall elect annually, in a manner to be determined by the Board of Regents, five (5) Fellows of the College to membership on the Board of Regents, each to serve for a term of three (3) years. Not more than four (4) of the five (5) Fellows so elected to membership on the Board of Regents shall be selected from one country. Vacancies on the Board of Regents shall be filled by the Board of Governors as provided in Article IV, Section 3.

Section 5. Annual and Special Meetings. The Board of Governors shall meet in executive session annually for the transaction of business, which shall include the election of members of the Board of Regents and other routine business which may be brought before it by the College or by the Board of Regents. Such meetings shall be called by the Chairman of the Board of Regents. Special meetings of the Board of Governors may be called at any other time at the request of the Board of Regents. Thirty (30) days' notice of the time and place of annual or special meetings shall be given by mail, postage prepaid, addressed to each member of the Board of Governors at his residence or place of business as the same shall appear on the books of the College.

Section 6. Convocations and other Formal Meetings. Members of the Board of Governors shall be expected to attend other formal meetings and convocations called by the Board of Regents for the purpose of conferring fellowships and for the transaction of other business.

Section 7. Quorum. Thirty (30) members of the Board of Governors present in person shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

VI. OFFICERS. Section 1. Number. The officers of the College shall be a President, a First Vice President, a Second Vice President, and a Treasurer, all of whom shall be Fellows of the College; and a Secretary.

Section 2. Election and Appointment. The President, the First Vice President, and the Second Vice President shall be elected by the Fellows of the College at their annual meeting. These officers shall assume their offices upon inauguration on the first day of the annual session next following their election, and they shall serve for a term of one (1) year or until their respective successors are inaugurated. The Treasurer and Secretary shall be appointed by the Board of Regents. They shall each serve for a term of one (1) year or until their respective successors are appointed and qualified.

Section 3. President. The President of the College shall preside at all regular and special meetings of the College and of the Board of Governors, and at all convocations for the conferring of fellowships. He shall also be ex-officio a member of the Executive Committee.

Section 4. First Vice President. The First Vice President shall preside at all meetings of the College in the absence of the President; and in the event of the death, resignation, or disability of the President, he shall perform the duties and exercise the powers of the President.

Section 5. Second Vice President. The Second Vice President shall preside at all meetings of the College in the absence of the President and of the First Vice President; and in the event of the death, resignation, or disability of the President and First Vice President, he shall perform the duties and exercise the powers of the President.

Section 6. Treasurer. The Treasurer of the College shall administer the funds of the College under the supervision of the Finance Committee, and he shall make such reports to the Finance Committee, the Executive Committee, and the Board of Regents as may be required from time to time. He shall furnish a bond to the corporation for the faithful performance of his trust. In the absence or disability of the Treasurer his duties shall be performed by such person and in such manner as the Finance Committee may direct.

Section 7. Secretary. The Secretary shall be appointed by the Board of Regents and shall hold office during the pleasure of the Board. The Secretary shall keep the minutes of the meetings of members, the Board of Regents, and Board of Governors, and of the standing committees of the College; shall see that all notices are duly given in accordance with the provisions of law or of the by-laws; shall keep the records and the corporate seal, and see that the seal is affixed to all documents the execution of which under seal is duly authorized in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws; and in general the Secretary shall perform all duties incident to the office, and such other duties as may from time to time be assigned by the Board of Regents.

Section 8. Vacancies. All vacancies among the officers of the College shall be filled by the Board of Regents. The Executive Committee may, however, appoint temporary officers to hold office until the next meeting of the Board of Regents. An officer elected to fill a vacancy shall serve for the unexpired portion of the term of his predecessor.

VII. COMMITTEES. Section 1. Standing Committees. The standing committees of the College shall include an Executive Committee, a Finance Committee, and a Central Committee on Credentials, and such other committees as the Board of Regents may from time to time appoint. The members of all such standing committees shall be appointed by the Board of Regents as provided in Article IV, Section 4.

Section 2. Executive Committee. (a) The members of the Executive Committee shall consist of the Chairman and the Vice Chairman of the Board of Regents, the Treasurer, and four (4) Regents. The four (4) Regents shall be elected by the Board of Regents and shall serve for one year and until their respective successors are elected and qualified, and they shall be eligible for re-election. The Chairman of the Board of Regents shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee. The President of the College shall be ex-officio a member of the Executive Committee.

(b) During the intervals between the meetings of the Board of Regents, the Executive Committee shall exercise all the powers of the Board of Regents in the management and direction of the business and the conduct of the affairs of the College, except that it shall not have power to elect Fellows, to amend the by-laws, or to regulate initial fees or annual dues of fellowship. It shall keep a record of its proceedings and shall, immediately after each meeting, report the same to the Board of Regents for approval at the next succeeding meeting of the Board. The Executive Committee may fill vacancies occurring in its membership and may appoint temporary officers of the College as provided in Article VI, Section 8.

Section 3. Finance Committee. (a) The Finance Committee shall consist of the Treasurer and four (4) other Fellows elected to membership on the Committee by the Board of Regents. The Finance Committee shall be subject to the authority of the Board of Regents, and shall have the general supervision and direction of all the financial affairs and interests of the College. The committee shall have the power to invest and reinvest the funds of the College, to sell, transfer and convey any securities and property other than real estate, and to execute and deliver on behalf of the Board of Regents all necessary and proper instruments of transfer and conveyance. The committee shall designate the banks and/or trust companies in which the moneys and securities of the College shall be deposited. The Treasurer shall perform such duties as may from time to time be specifically delegated to him by the Finance Committee. At each annual meeting of the Fellows, the Finance Committee shall present a statement of the financial condition of the College.

(b) After the close of each fiscal year the Finance Committee shall have the books and accounts of the College audited by a certified public accountant who shall make necessary entries and corrections, ascertain the cash and securities on hand, and furnish the Board of Regents in connection with the report of the Treasurer a certificate of their findings.

Section 4. Committees on Credentials. There shall be a Central Committee on Credentials, selected in such manner, and to serve for such periods, as the Board of Regents may from time to time determine. There shall also be local Credentials Committees, distributed geographically by states, provinces, countries, or other units. These Committees on Credentials shall consist of such number as the Board of Regents may designate. The members shall be nominated by mail ballot by the Fellows and from among the Fellows living within the respective states, provinces, countries, or other units. Their eligibility, manner of election, and term of office shall be determined by the Board of Regents. The Committees on Credentials shall be subject to the supervision and control of the Board of Regents.

Section 5. Notice of Meetings. Unless otherwise provided by the Board of Regents, meetings of all standing committees of the College may be held on one day's notice given to each member personally or by mail, telegraph or telephone.

Section 6. Quorum. A majority of the members of any such committee shall constitute a quorum, and the acts of the majority at any meeting when a quorum is present shall be the acts of the committee, provided that a quorum of the Finance Committee shall always include the Treasurer of the College.

VIII. CORPORATE SEAL. The Board of Regents shall provide a suitable seal, which shall be in the form of a circle and shall bear the name of the College and the words: "Corporate Seal, Illinois."

IX. AMENDMENT OF BY-LAWS. At any duly convened regular or special meeting of the Board of Regents, these by-laws may be modified, altered, or amended by a majority vote of all of the members of the Board; these by-laws may also be modified, altered, or amended by a majority vote of all Fellows, present in person or by proxy, at any duly convened regular or special meeting; provided that the proposed amendment or amendments shall have been included in the call of the meeting at which such action is to be taken.

X. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS. Section 1. Annual Sessions. The College shall hold an annual session at such place and time as may be determined by the Board of Regents which shall include:

(a) The Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons consisting of (1) surgical and diagnostic clinics and demonstrations; (2) scientific and literary papers concerning or relating to the art and science of surgery; (3) hospital standardization conference.

(b) Annual meeting of the Fellows of the College, as provided in Article III, Section 5.

(c) Annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the College, as provided in Article V, Section 5.

(d) Convocation of the College at which occasion candidates for fellowship are admitted to fellowship in the College.

Section 2. Publications. The Board of Regents shall issue a directory containing the names and addresses of the Fellows of the American College of Surgeons arranged by states, provinces, colonies, or countries.

Section 3. Waiver of Notice. Whenever any notice is required to be given under the provisions of the articles of incorporation or of the by-laws, a waiver thereof in writing, signed by the person or persons entitled to such notice, shall be deemed equivalent to the giving of such notice. No notice of the time, place, or purpose of any meeting shall be required when all of the persons entitled to such notice are present at the meeting.

Section 4. Adjournment of Meetings. In the event that a quorum shall not be present at any duly called meeting of the Board of Regents, the Board of Governors, or of any standing committee, the members present and entitled to vote at any such meeting may adjourn the same from time to time to reconvene without further notice than that contained in the resolution of adjournment. At any adjourned meeting at which a quorum shall be present, the members may transact any business which might have been transacted at the meeting if it had been held at the time for which it was called.

To CORNELIUS J. DOYLE, Secretary of State:

We the Undersigned, Albert J. Ochsner, John B. Murphy and Franklin H. Martin, Citizens of the United States, propose to form a Corporation under an act of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, entitled "An Act Concerning Corporations," approved April 18, 1872, and all acts amendatory thereof, and that for the purposes of such organization we hereby state as follows, to-wit:

1. The name of such Corporation is American College of Surgeons.
2. The object for which it is formed is to establish and maintain an association of surgeons, not for pecuniary profit but for the benefit of humanity by advancing the science of surgery and the ethical and competent practice of its art; by establishing standards of hospital construction, administration and equipment, and all else that pertains to them; by engaging in scientific research to determine the cause, nature and cure of disease; by aiding in better instruction of doctors; by formulating standards of medicine; and methods for the improvement of all adverse conditions surrounding the ill and injured wherever found. To accomplish these benevolent and charitable aims, it shall be within the purposes of this corporation to use those means which from time to time may seem to it wise, including research, publication, education, the establishment and maintenance of libraries, museums, and other agencies or institutions appropriate hereto, and the co-operation of any other such activities, agencies or institutions already established or which may hereafter be established.
3. The management and control of the affairs and funds of the corporation shall be vested in a board of sixteen (16) trustees who may be known as Regents, and who are to be elected as the by-laws provide.
4. The following persons are hereby selected as the Directors to control and manage said Corporation for the first year of its corporate existence, viz.:
Edward Martin, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; George E. Brewer, New York City, New York; Albert J. Ochsner, Chicago, Illinois; John B. Murphy, Chicago, Illinois; and Franklin H. Martin, Chicago, Illinois.
5. The location is in the city of Chicago in the County of Cook in the State of Illinois, and the post office address of its business office is at No. 31 North State Street, in the said city of Chicago.

(Signed) ALBERT J. OCHSNER
JOHN B. MURPHY
FRANKLIN H. MARTIN

GENERAL STATEMENT

ORGANIZATION OF THE COLLEGE

THE American College of Surgeons is a society of surgeons of North and South America which aims to include within its fellowship all who are of worthy character and who possess a practical knowledge of the science and art of surgery. The College is concerned fundamentally with matters of character and of training, with the betterment of hospitals and of teaching facilities in medical schools and hospitals, with laws which relate to medical practice and privilege, and with an unselfish protection of the public from incompetent medical service.

The College was organized on May 5, 1913, in Washington, D. C., when four hundred and fifty prominent surgeons came together at the invitation of an Organization Committee which had been appointed by the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America at its meeting in November, 1912. This Organization Committee consisted of Edward Martin of Philadelphia, Emmet Rixford of San Francisco, John B. Murphy of Chicago, Rudolph Matas of New Orleans, Albert J. Ochsner of Chicago, Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Frederic J. Cotton of Boston, George Emerson Brewer of New York, John M. T. Finney of Baltimore, Walter W. Chipman of Montreal, George Crile of Cleveland, and Franklin H. Martin of Chicago. By-laws, rules, and regulations were adopted, and the Board of Regents, the Board of Governors, and officers of the College were elected. Details of these matters are published in the Year Book and in bulletins of the College.

THE CLINICAL CONGRESS OF THE AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS

By the joint action of a committee appointed by the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America and of the Regents of the College, the Clinical Congress of Surgeons became, on October 25, 1917, the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons. The following resolution effected the merger of these two organizations:

WHEREAS, The past presidents of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons were, on October 26, 1916, in Philadelphia, appointed as a Committee with power to act to confer with the American College of Surgeons with a view to closer affiliation between these two organizations; and

WHEREAS, The Regents of the College, in accordance with Section VI, Article 3, of the By-Laws of the College, constitute a governing board with power to act with regard to the proposed affiliation. Now, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That it is the unanimous decision of the Committee of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America, as above stated, and of the Regents of the American College of Surgeons in joint session, first, that for the welfare of the two organizations the management and the control of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons shall be vested hereafter in the American College of Surgeons; second, that hereafter the Clinical Congress of Surgeons shall be known as the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons with its invited guests.

The past presidents of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons are Dr. Albert J. Ochsner of Chicago, Dr. Edward Martin of Philadelphia, Dr. George E. Brewer of New York, Dr. John B. Murphy of Chicago, Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Dr. Fred B. Lund of Boston, Dr. John G. Clark of Philadelphia, Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester.

THE ENDOWMENT FUND

In order to provide funds for the organization of the College, an initial fee of fifty dollars from each Fellow was voted at the first meeting. Realizing that the income to be derived in this manner was temporary and inadequate, and desiring to place the College on a sound financial basis, the Fellows voted in June, 1914, to raise an endowment fund of one million dollars. This plan provided that the endowment should be invested in perpetuity and only the income used for the budget of the College.

It developed later that the activities of the College called for expenditures beyond the income provided by the interest of the endowment, and the Fellows of the College, at the annual meeting held in Philadelphia in 1916, voted that those who had not subscribed to the fund should be assessed by annual dues of twenty-five dollars each. The full resolution provided:

That the Board of Regents be requested to levy annual dues on the Fellows of the American College of Surgeons as hereinafter provided.

1. That the annual dues of the Fellows of the College be $25, payable January 1.
2. That all Fellows who have subscribed $500 to the endowment fund of the College be exempt from annual dues.
3. That the total amount required of any Fellow in annual dues or other fees shall not exceed $500.
4. That the Board of Regents cancel the indebtedness of any Fellow of the College, without publicity, to whom in its judgment such dues are a hardship.
5. That no Fellow of the College be required to contribute any fee whatever to the College either after sixty-five years of age or after he has retired from active practice.

Several years later a letter was sent to the Fellows of the College over the signature of Dr. W. J. Mayo referring to the activities of the organization and calling attention to a suggestion made by the Board of Regents regarding individual action by the Fellows in support of the endowment fund of the organization. More specifically, the thought was that if those who desire to co-operate in the fulfillment of the aims of the College, would each make a codicil to his will or take out a life insurance policy in favor of the American College of Surgeons, the aggregate would, in the course of years, prove of most valuable assistance in making the endowment fund adequate without being at all burdensome to the donors. The minimum amount of $1,000 was suggested, with a statement that contemplated gifts in excess of the minimum would be very welcome.

This letter was followed by reminders from Merritte W. Ireland, President, and Frederic A. Besley, Treasurer. Beyond these and other similar letters, no attempt has been made to persuade the Fellows to act upon the suggestion. The feeling on the part of the Board of Regents and the officers of the College is that the Fellows have been so generous in their financial contributions and have so proved their willingness to assist that it is unnecessary to do more than to suggest opportunities.

It is with pleasure that record is herein made that a constantly increasing number of the Fellows have already written definitely that they have taken out a policy or made a codicil in favor of the organization. In amount these evidences of loyalty have run from $1,000 to one-half of an estate, the value of which is not definitely given, but is understood to be of material amount.

In accordance with the keynote struck at the time of organization, the College has already demonstrated the practical value of its results. The benefit to every clinician and to every individual who is ill and injured which has accrued through the hospital standardization program, carried on during the past twenty years, is of inestimable value, as is the promotion of clinical research, particularly relating to cancer clinics, bone sarcoma, the treatment of fractures, and industrial medicine and traumatic surgery. Scientific studies for the advancement of the knowledge of the surgeon have been furthered by the College through the work of the Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases and the Registry of Bone Sarcoma.

The general education of the surgeon has been a field of great activity on the part of the College through the media of its clinical congresses, sectional meetings, publications, exhibits, scientific studies, medical motion pictures, and more recently, its program of graduate training for surgery. In addition, through the sectional meetings held in various parts of the United States and Canada, of which there have been approximately 200, the lay public is being educated to know what to expect from surgeons and hospitals from the standpoint of competent and ethical service.

To meet the need of co-ordinating literature on certain subjects and making it available quickly and easily to the busy practicing surgeon, the College maintains a library and Department of Literary Research.

Because all results of the work of the American College of Surgeons are of such demonstrated practical value, it is considered certain that additional financing required will be contributed by the public, through its knowledge of what is being accomplished through the work and financial co-operation of the Fellows. Every Fellow should co-operate in spreading this information.

The endowment fund, invested in securities, now amounts to $856,171.06. A Fellow may become a life member of the College at any time by subscribing five hundred dollars to the endowment fund.

ENDOWMENT FUND—LIFE MEMBERSHIP

I hereby subscribe FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS ($400) to the Endowment Fund of the American College of Surgeons. To this amount is to be added the $100 already paid as my Fellowship Fee, my total subscription being $500. The balance of $400 shall be payable in one lump sum during the year 1938, or, at my option, in four annual installments with interest on the unpaid balances at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, beginning January 1, 1938.

Date	Amount	Interest	Date	Amount	Interest

It is further agreed that beginning January 1, 1938, I shall be exempt from annual dues, and upon full payment of this subscription the sum of $500 shall be credited to and become a part of the Permanent Endowment Fund of the College and I shall become a Life Member of the American College of Surgeons.

In case of death all unpaid balances are cancelled

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE ENDOWMENT FUND

Contributions to the endowment fund from others than Fellows of the College will be gratefully accepted in the form of subscriptions, donations, or bequests.

BEQUESTS

The College loses by death each year an average of two hundred of its members. If each Fellow would add to his will a codicil reading "$1,000 to the American College of Surgeons at my death," or would leave that amount to it through insurance, it would add $200,000 each year to the endowment fund.

REQUIREMENTS FOR FELLOWSHIP

1. The applicant shall be a graduate in medicine, who is licensed to practice in his respective state, province, or country, or who is a medical officer of the federal service.

2. The applicant to be eligible for fellowship shall be a graduate of a medical school approved by the American College of Surgeons.

3. The applicant shall give evidence that he has served at least one year as interne in an acceptable hospital and two years as surgical assistant, or he shall give evidence of apprenticeship of equivalent value. Seven years after graduation in medicine, devoted to special training and to practice, is normally the time requirement for eligibility to fellowship. Due importance is attached to supplementary study and training for surgery.

4. The applicant's moral and ethical fitness shall be determined by reports of surgeons whose names are submitted by the applicant himself, and by such other reports and data as the credentials committees and the administrators of the College may obtain.

5. The applicant's professional activity shall be restricted to the study, diagnosis, and operative work in general surgery or in special fields of surgery. Each case shall be judged on its individual merits as to the professional ability, training and experience of the applicant in the particular field of surgery in which he is engaged. The College desires to admit to its fellowship only those who are primarily specialists in surgery, and the minimum proportion of specialization which is acceptable may vary according to the character and size of the community in which the applicant resides.

6. The applicant shall make formal application for fellowship. Blank forms for this purpose may be obtained from the central office of the College upon request.

7. The applicant in making application for fellowship shall sign a declaration which reads:

"Upon my honor as a gentleman, I hereby declare that I will not practice the division of fees, either directly or indirectly, in any manner whatsoever."

8. As evidence of his qualifications in the technique of surgery, the candidate is required to submit 100 case records of major work, 50 records in complete detail and 50 in abstract. The series of 50 detailed records must be of major work done by the candidate and for which he was the responsible surgeon. This series of records should be of comparatively recent work and should not date back further than two or three years from the time of the submission of the histories after recommendation for fellowship by the Credentials Committee. A variety of major procedures rather than a number of cases of one type should be included. The series of 50 abstracted records must be of work in which the candidate has acted as assistant, or which he performed himself independently or under supervision.

Candidates who have been certificated by the American Board of Ophthalmology, the American Board of Otolaryngology, the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, the American Board of Urology, or the American Board of Orthopedic Surgery, and who have been recommended for fellowship by their respective State, Provincial or other unit Credentials Committees will be required to submit only one-half of the number of case records; that is, 25 in complete detail and 25 in abstract. This does not imply that the College declines to admit to fellowship candidates practicing in these specialties who have not been certificated by one of the Boards.

A candidate who has had graduate training for surgery through a residency or fellowship in an acceptable institution or institutions, and who meets the requirements in all other respects, may submit 25 of the required detailed records from work done during his period of residency, the other 25 detailed records to be taken from his independent practice.

A candidate who has spent at least four years in special training for surgery in an acceptable institution or institutions, and who has not entered independent practice but has remained exclusively in institutional work, and in all other respects meets the requirements for fellowship, may submit the required case records from his institutional work.

9. Surgeons widely recognized by the profession as progressive leaders and exponents of finished technique, and teachers with full professorial status in the various departments of surgery and its specialties in approved medical schools may, by a unanimous vote of the Board of Regents, be admitted to fellowship without examination, on unanimous recommendation of the committees on credentials.

10. The fellowship fee shall be $100, payable upon notification of election to fellowship. The annual dues shall be $25, payable January 1.

11. The Regents of the College reserve the right to alter, as they may think proper, the regulations respecting admission of Fellows to the College.

NOTE: Applicants for fellowship whose qualifying medical degree shall have been obtained after the date of January 1, 1938, shall be required to present evidence of having completed three years of hospital service in one or more hospitals approved by the American College of Surgeons for graduate training in surgery, of which two years shall have been spent in training in surgery. In the case of graduates of medical schools which withhold the medical degree until after a fifth year of hospital internship, the date set will be January 1, 1939.

PROCEDURE IN CONSIDERING APPLICANTS FOR FELLOWSHIP

The by-laws provide that there shall be local Credentials Committees distributed geographically by states, provinces, countries, or other units, and a Central Credentials Committee.

Any legalized practitioner in medicine may apply for fellowship, or a request may be made by any Fellow of the College or other member of the medical profession, that application forms be sent to a surgeon who, in his opinion, is qualified and could meet the requirements for fellowship.

The formal application for fellowship, which is required of every applicant, includes the following information: Date and place of birth; preliminary education; medical schools attended as an undergraduate and as a graduate; hospitals in which internship or residentship was served and dates of service; period of assistantship and with whom; past and present hospital connections; medical teaching positions; postgraduate study; research conducted; specialty and period of specialization; percentage of professional activity devoted to surgery or one of the surgical specialties; medical society affiliations; and a list of personal contributions to medical literature. The applicant is also required to furnish five references, and to sign a pledge against the practice of the division of fees.

Upon receipt of the formal application, the College reviews the statements recorded therein. Each individual given as reference is communicated with and is asked to fill out a comprehensive questionnaire that will furnish definite statements about the applicant's surgical judgment and ability, and information about his moral and ethical standing. A questionnaire is also sent to other Fellows of the College who live in the city or vicinity in which the applicant is practicing.

In such cities and states as have established Committees on Applicants, each applicant is given the opportunity of an interview with the Committee on Applicants for the purpose of presenting detailed information concerning his special training for surgical work, clinical experience, present surgical activity, and any further data which would have a bearing upon his application for fellowship.

After the interview and other investigation the Committee on Applicants makes a report upon the applicant's qualifications from the following aspects: academic qualifications, training, experience, evaluation of surgical judgment and surgical ability, ethical and professional qualifications, and such other criteria as may assist the State or Provincial Credentials Committee in arriving at a decision.

When all of the data received from this preliminary survey are complete, these data are summarized and the applicant's application is presented to the Credentials Committee of his state, province, country, or other unit for consideration and recommendation.

Each Credentials Committee holds one meeting a year. In advance of such meeting a list of the applicants to be considered, with summarized information regarding their respective qualifications, is sent to each member of the committee so that he may be in a position to evaluate the qualifications of the applicants. An official of the College is present at each meeting of a Credentials Committee, and this official has in his possession all information collected by the central office that may have a bearing on the eligibility of the applicants to be considered. The Credentials Committee, acting as a preliminary court, makes its recommendation upon the information presented by the applicant on his application blank, by the individual members of the Committee, and the representative from the central office.

The Committee is urged to consider carefully the surgical qualifications of the applicant, his standing in the community, his moral conduct, his general reliability, his ethical standing, including his attitude toward "fee splitting."

Each member of each committee assumes full responsibility; the action on each applicant is taken through a motion duly made, seconded, and carried, all members of the committee voting; and the action is recorded by the secretary.

Applicants recommended by their respective local Credentials Committees are given opportunity to furnish to the College the required number of case records of major surgical work.

There is a Committee on History Reviews composed of approximately twenty teachers of surgery and surgical specialties from approved medical schools in Chicago. The Committee meets regularly throughout the year for the review of the case histories submitted. A staff official of the College meets with the Committee.

The case records submitted by candidates for fellowship are referred to the Committee on History Reviews, which Committee reviews all case histories submitted. After each set of records has been reviewed, a summary of the findings with the recommendation signed by the examiner is attached to the records for the guidance of the Central Committee on Credentials. Each case record is verified by the hospital in which the operations have been performed.

All accumulated evidence that has come into the executive offices is brought before the Central Committee on Credentials, which, as the higher court, peruses in detail the record of each candidate, sifts all of the evidence on file in regard to his qualifications, including the reports of the local Credentials Committee and the Committee on History Reviews, and makes its recommendation to the Board of Regents.

One of three recommendations is made by the Central Committee: acceptance, postponement, or non-acceptance. Action may be postponed to enable the executive office to secure further evidence of the candidate's fitness or unfitness for fellowship; to afford the candidate an opportunity to submit further essential data in connection with his records or to submit additional records; or to give him opportunity for further study, training, and experience to qualify for fellowship. The central office endeavors to give every candidate for fellowship such information as will aid him to complete his fellowship.

After the candidate has passed successfully all of the requirements under the careful surveillance of the College, he is notified of his acceptance and sent instructions in regard to receiving his fellowship.

It is absolutely necessary that the uniform regulations for the admission of applicants to fellowship, formulated by the executive officers after years of experience, should be disinterestedly observed. Even though the applicant may appear most worthy, short-cut methods cannot be employed without subjecting the committees to severe criticism and lessening the judicial standing of the College.

The central office for obvious reasons must decline to furnish information concerning an application for fellowship to other than the applicant himself.

Any applicant who is not accepted, or upon whose application action has been deferred, may appeal to the Board of Regents.

THE JUNIOR CANDIDATE GROUP

The purpose in establishing the Junior Candidate Group was to bring the younger medical graduates who signify their intention of entering the surgical field under the influence of the ethical and educational purposes for which the College stands, thereby rendering a real service to the younger surgeon at a time when he needs guidance on questions of education, training, affiliation, and other professional problems.

The time requirement for eligibility to make application to the Junior Candidate Group is from two to seven years after the receipt of the qualifying medical degree.

Any legalized practitioner of medicine who has been graduated from an approved medical school for a minimum period of two years, and not more than seven years, and who plans to specialize in surgery or some branch of surgery, may apply for membership in the Junior Candidate Group. He may personally request an application blank, or such request may be made in his behalf by a member of the medical profession who is in good standing.

An applicant for the Junior Candidate Group is required to give on his application blank the same information as is required from the applicant for fellowship, and he is also required to sign the declaration against the division of fees.

By means of a supplementary blank sent annually to the Junior Candidate, he makes a report of his progress in special training for surgery acquired from assistantships, residencies, postgraduate work, through formal courses under the auspices of recognized medical schools and clinics, observation at clinics, and research work. All of these data are placed on file and become a part of the credentials of the candidate.

A Junior Candidate is not required to submit any case records, but it is suggested that he keep a complete record of his surgical work, that this information may be readily available when it is asked for by the College. The applications for the Junior Candidate Group are submitted to the Credentials Committees of the respective states, provinces, and other units at their regularly called meetings.

Endorsement of an applicant for the Junior Candidate Group by the Credentials Committee is effective for one year only, the applications being reconsidered each year by the committees during the period of the candidate's eligibility to the Group.

An endorsed applicant for the Junior Candidate Group may remain a member of the Junior Candidate Group while he continues his training in surgery, and until he is eligible to make application for fellowship.

If a candidate fails to live up to the established ideals and principles of the College, enters medical practice, or for other sufficient reason is no longer eligible for membership in the Junior Candidate Group, the local Credentials Committee may recommend at any meeting that his name be dropped from the Junior Candidate Group.

Provision has been made for the appointment of a Fellow of the College to act as an adviser to each Junior Candidate during his period of membership in the Junior Candidate Group. The duties of the adviser are to counsel the candidate regarding adequate training in surgery, to stimulate him to take advantage of opportunities for training in surgical work, and to advise him regarding ethical relations and all other subjects which have a bearing on his professional career as a surgeon.

There is also extended to the members of the Junior Candidate Group the privilege of attending the annual and sectional meetings of the College, and there are sent to them the BULLETINS and other publications of the College which are deemed to be of interest and value to them.

A Junior Candidate is eligible to make application for fellowship seven years after the receipt of the qualifying medical degree. When his application for fellowship is received, his name is again presented to the respective Credentials Committee. After he is recommended by the Credentials Committee, he is given an opportunity to submit the case histories and to fulfill all other requirements for fellowship.

Members of the Junior Candidate Group are exempt from fees and dues.

STATE, PROVINCIAL AND UNIT CREDENTIALS COMMITTEES

Following is an analysis of the work done by the state, provincial, or other unit Credentials Committees during the year 1937:

United States.....	49
(Including 2 in California and 1 each for New York City, Brooklyn, and Chicago)
Provinces of Canada.....	7
Other Units.....	2
Applications for fellowship presented to the committees.....	1,367

Following is an analysis of the work of the Committee on History Reviews during the year:

Histories filed.....	619
Histories reviewed.....	598
Histories accepted.....	517
Histories not accepted.....	81
Histories not reviewed.....	21

Of the 517 applicants whose histories were approved, 442 were recommended in 1937, and 75 had been recommended previously.

The work of reviewing the records submitted, which was carried on by the Committee on History Reviews, required many hours of time in the evenings at meetings held at the headquarters of the College where all case records are reviewed.

The histories which were recognized as being of unusual merit were segregated and were the subject of a special review of the committee for the selection of those which were considered from the standpoint of completeness, accuracy, and form of presentation to merit special mention. A list of the six Fellows whose cases merited a place on the Medical Records Honor List appears on page 164.

Much credit is due the Credentials Committees of the states, provinces, countries, and other units, for maintaining the high standard of the fellowship of the College through their untiring work, the judicious manner in which all applications for Fellowship are considered, and the painstaking study of the histories submitted. The members of these committees give generously of their time without financial return.

INTER-AMERICAN PROGRESS

In 1915, at the Scientific Congress held in San Francisco during the Panama-Pacific Exposition, a number of Latin-American surgeons petitioned the American College of Surgeons to admit the surgeons of Latin America to the fellowship of the College. This affiliation, after some preliminary correspondence, was postponed until after the war and definite work was begun in 1920.

In that year Dr. Franklin H. Martin, Director General, and Dr. William J. Mayo, then President, made a trip to Latin-American countries to meet on their own ground the southern neighbors. At this time visits were made to the surgeons of Panama, Peru, Chile, Argentina, and Uruguay.

In February, 1921, Dr. Thomas J. Watkins and the Director General revisited these countries and added to the itinerary Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo in Brazil. Also, early in 1921, Dr. Francis P. Corrigan of Cleveland, Ohio, visited Ecuador and Bolivia as an official representative of the College.

In the winter of 1922, official visits were made by Dr. Edward I. Salisbury of Denver, Colorado, to Colombia, Venezuela, and Cuba; and by Dr. Corrigan, to Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, and Panama.

Early in 1923, representatives of the College from thirty-five states of the United States and five provinces of Canada visited Cuba, Panama, Colombia, Venezuela, Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, and Peru. Of these Fellows, eleven were Founders, nine Governors, one Regent, a Vice President who had been appointed Acting President for the period of the cruise, and the Director General.

Official receptions were tendered to the members of the cruise party by the Presidents of all countries whose capitals were visited, and formal meetings of the College were held in Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, and Montevideo. Meetings were held in each country of the respective Committees on Credentials.

During 1924, official visits were made to Cuba, Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Bolivia, Peru, Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, and Venezuela. Committees on Credentials were formed in the places newly visited and meetings held of committees previously created.

In December, 1924, Dr. James T. Case of Battle Creek, Michigan, represented the College at the Third Pan-American Scientific Congress held in Lima, Peru. He presented the Hospital Standardization program of the College and its Minimum Standard as the basis of that program. The Congress passed a motion that the program of the College have the full approval of the section on medicine and sanitation, and that the Congress as a whole give a vote of approval and request that all governments represented adopt steps toward the accomplishment of similar work in their respective countries. The motion was passed unanimously by this section and also by the Scientific Congress at its closing session.

Official visits were again made to Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, and Panama. Credentials Committee meetings were held in various cities, and talks in Spanish on the Hospital Standardization movement in North America, illustrated with lantern slides, were given before the Fellows of the College, various medical and surgical societies, and faculties of medicine in these countries. About forty hospitals were surveyed and several placed upon the Approved List of the College.

On October 26, 1926, the Board of Regents constituted the Fellows of the College who are resident in Mexico a Committee on Credentials for that Republic, for the consideration of further candidates from Mexico.

To date eighteen Latin-American countries are represented, each having its Committee on Credentials, and fellowships in the College have been conferred upon 311 surgeons from Latin America, as follows: Prior to 1920, seven; Convocation in Montreal, 1920, thirty-five; Philadelphia, 1921, fifty-five; Boston, 1922, thirty-three; Chicago, 1923, forty-three; New York, 1924, thirty; Philadelphia, 1925, sixty-two;

Montreal, 1926, five; Detroit, 1927, four; Boston, 1928, eleven; Chicago, 1929, two; Philadelphia, 1930, two; New York, 1931, four; St. Louis, 1932, three; Chicago, 1933, one; Boston, 1934, one; San Francisco, 1935, one; Philadelphia, 1936, nine; Chicago, 1937, three.

Honorary fellowship in the College has been conferred upon some of the leading Latin-American surgeons. A number of applications for fellowship from surgeons in these countries are under consideration for future membership.

JUDICIARY COMMITTEES

A duty which confronts the Board of Regents of the American College of Surgeons is the consideration of complaints which are filed against Fellows of the organization. In order to obviate any injustice, either to a Fellow of the College or to the organization itself, and as a means of securing reliable information, a plan was adopted by the Board of Regents which provides for the appointment in each state and province of a Judiciary Committee to aid the headquarters officials to obtain facts regarding complaints which are registered, or derogatory information regarding Fellows of the organization, and the surrounding circumstances.

Judiciary Committees are expected, upon request, to ascertain the facts in any given case, and to report their findings and suggestions to the College headquarters in Chicago. Committeemen are cautioned not to take any action which would involve the College, the committees themselves, or individuals, in legal difficulties.

Consideration is given to each complaint which is filed in the central office, and to information derogatory to a Fellow which may reach an official of the College. The Fellow against whom the complaint is made is notified, and given an opportunity to submit his explanation. If after investigation further action is warranted, the case is referred to the Judiciary Committee of the state or province for investigation and recommendation. Should there be sufficient derogatory evidence, the Fellow in question is notified that all of the data will be placed before the Board of Regents for consideration and action.

The by-laws of the College (Article III, Section 7) provide that any Fellow may be expelled for conduct which in the opinion of the Board of Regents is derogatory to the dignity of the College or inconsistent with its purposes. Each year many judiciary cases are considered and acted upon by the Board of Regents, and the Judiciary Committees have aided materially in supplying the data upon which the rulings have been made.

REBATES ON SURGICAL APPARATUS AND OPTICAL SUPPLIES

In view of the many inquiries which have been received at the headquarters office in regard to the attitude of the American College of Surgeons on the question of rebates on surgical apparatus, optical supplies, etc., there is appended hereto a resolution pertaining to this subject which was passed at a special meeting of the Board of Regents on June 7, 1921:

"BE IT RESOLVED that to accept rebates on glasses and other surgical apparatus and supplies is considered unethical and not consistent with fellowship in the College."

CLINICAL RESEARCH

BOWMAN C. CROWELL, M.D., Associate Director, American College of Surgeons
Director of Clinical Research

THE work in clinical research which is being conducted by the College includes that of the following committees:

- Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases
- Committee on the Archives of Malignant Diseases
- Committee on Bone Sarcoma
- Committee on Fractures
- Committee on the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery
- Committee on Clinical Laboratories

A survey of the work of this department which has been performed during the past year is embraced in the reports of the individual committees.

COMMITTEE ON THE TREATMENT OF MALIGNANT DISEASES

CHARLES A. DUKES, Oakland, Chairman

BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Chicago, Secretary

FRANK E. ADAIR, New York	JOHN M. T. FINNEY, Baltimore
A. C. BRODERS, Rochester, Minn.	FRANK W. LYNCH, San Francisco
CURTIS F. BURNAM, Baltimore	GORDON B. NEW, Rochester, Minn.
GEORGE CRILE, Cleveland	ALTON OCHSNER, New Orleans
EDWIN C. ERNST, St. Louis	EUGENE P. PENDERGRASS, Philadelphia
RUPERT H. FIKE, Atlanta	GEORGE GRAY WARD, New York
FRANCIS C. WOOD, New York

The work of this department has been conducted through the Department of Clinical Research along the same lines as in previous years.

As a result of the reorganization of the field work of the College the four representatives who also survey hospitals and medical services in industry have included cancer clinics in their surveys. The total number surveyed has been 296, of which 240 merit approval of the College. This indicates a definite advance in cancer therapy. Some clinics which apparently were not well organized have not succeeded in accomplishing the purposes for which such clinics are formed and have been dropped from our list. There has been some encouraging progress in the number of clinics which had our provisional approval and now are in the fully approved list.

A widespread invitation for the filing of records of five-year cures was made during the year and the response was rather disappointing except from certain sources, which resulted in the addition of 4,755 to the already 24,440 registered cases, bringing the present total to 29,195.

Neck of womb	7,705	Stomach	1,035	Skin	1,151
Body of womb	1,307	Colon and rectum	3,151	Thyroid	538
Cervix and fundus	98	Kidney	280	Larynx	238
Ovary	571	Bladder	548	Eye	30
Vagina and vulva	128	Prostate	108	Bone	204
Breast	8,577	Testis	79	Other classifications	1,042
Mouth and lip	2,377	Penis	28	Total	29,195

It is expected that the number of five-year cures registered will be much increased when a sufficient number of cancer clinics have been in existence for a time long enough for them to have secured five-year results.

The committee recommends that the College undertake the development of a repository for the recording of cancer families. Having established the existence of cancer families, further studies concerning those families might be undertaken as to the questions of individual characteristics dependent upon endocrine variations, physiological and anatomical variations, and environmental variations.

An attractive program on cancer dealing this year with its scientific aspects has been prepared for the current Clinical Congress.

With the submission of this report I beg to submit my resignation as chairman of this committee.

Respectfully submitted,
CHARLES A. DUKES, Chairman.

MINIMUM STANDARD FOR CANCER CLINICS IN GENERAL HOSPITALS

1. ORGANIZATION. There shall be a definite organization of the service, and it shall include an executive officer and representatives of all the departments of the hospital which are concerned in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. The services of a secretary and of a social service worker shall be available.

2. CONFERENCES. As an essential feature of the service there shall be regular conferences or consultations at which the diagnosis and treatment of the individual cases are discussed by all members of the clinic who are concerned with the case.

3. PATIENTS. Reference to the cancer clinic of all patients in whom the diagnosis or treatment of cancer is to be considered shall be either voluntary or obligatory in accordance with the vote of the medical staff or of the governing board of the hospital.

4. EQUIPMENT. In addition to the diagnostic and therapeutic surgical equipment which is required in every approved general hospital there shall be available an apparatus for x-ray therapy of an effectiveness which is generally agreed upon as adequate, and an amount of radium sufficient to insure effective treatment.

5. RECORDS. In addition to the records which are required in every approved general hospital, there shall be additional records of: (a) the details of the history and of the examination for cancer in different regions of the body, such as are indicated on the form records which are recommended by the Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases, American College of Surgeons; (b) the details of the treatment by radium or x-ray as indicated on the form records which are recommended by the Committee on the Treatment of Malignant Diseases, American College of Surgeons; (c) periodic examinations at intervals for a period of at least five years following treatment.

6. TREATMENT. The treatment of cancer patients shall be entrusted to the members of the staff of the cancer clinic except in cases in which adequate treatment in accordance with the collective recommendation of the staff of the cancer clinic can be procured otherwise.

HOSPITALS IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA CONDUCTING CANCER CLINICS WHICH ARE APPROVED OR PROVISIONALLY APPROVED BY THE COLLEGE

Herewith is presented a summary of the 1937 survey:

Total cancer clinics surveyed	296
Approved cancer clinics in general hospitals	144
Provisionally approved cancer clinics in general hospitals	53
Approved cancer diagnostic clinics	36
Hospitals with departments conducting approved cancer clinics	7
Total approved cancer clinics	240

The publication of the list of 240 approved cancer clinics in no way indicates that effective cancer treatment cannot be obtained elsewhere, but serves to show that these institutions have formally organized for this purpose as part of a countrywide campaign in behalf of the cancer patient.

In addition to the list of approved cancer clinics the College has information concerning 56 other cancer clinics which for one reason or another are not yet ready for a rating by the College, and still 104 other hospitals have definitely signified their contemplation of the formation of such clinics in the future.

Following is a list of the hospitals which are conducting cancer clinics which conform to the minimum standard of the College for cancer clinics. The conduct of such clinics varies somewhat according to the character of the hospital with regard to whether its patients are charity patients or otherwise. Some institutions have established diagnostic clinics but refer the patients elsewhere with advice as to the nature of treatment that should be administered. In certain other large institutions some departments have organized cancer clinics for the recognition and care of cancer in their patients while other departments have not so organized. Cognizance of these facts is taken in the publication of the list of institutions that are approved from the standpoint of their cancer clinics.

The asterisk (*) indicates provisional approval or that certain institutions have accepted the minimum requirements for cancer clinics as formulated by the American College of Surgeons and are endeavoring to carry them out, but for lack of time or other acceptable reasons have not yet been able to do so in every detail.

REGISTRY OF BONE SARCOMA

DALLAS B. PHEMISTER, Chicago, *Chairman*BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Chicago, Registrar

EDWIN I. BARTLETT, San Francisco	JAMES EWING, New York
EVERETT L. BISHOP, Atlanta	FRANK W. HARTMAN, Detroit
BARNEY BROOKS, Nashville	HENRY W. MEYERDING, Rochester, Minn.
ERNEST A. CODMAN, Boston	JOHN J. MORTON, Rochester, N. Y.
CHARLES L. CONNOR, San Francisco	CHANNING C. SIMMONS, Boston

There are at present 2,098 cases in the Registry, 110 of which have been registered since the last report. Twenty additional cases were submitted but for various reasons could not be registered.

During the past year 826 cases were circulated to 31 doctors for their study and opinions. Several groups of similar cases and groups of different tumors in one location have been intensively studied and analyzed by members of the committee and by others and their studies are being embodied in monographs published by themselves.

The registered cases are classified as follows:

Osteogenic Sarcoma	976	Benign Osteogenic Tumor	73
Ewing's Sarcoma	226	Paraosteal Osteogenic Sarcoma	6
Myeloma	83	Liposarcoma	4
Lymphosarcoma	19	Xanthoma	1
Inflammation	101	Parosteal Fibrolipoma	2
Periosteal Fibrosarcoma	31	Reticulum Cell Sarcoma	7
Metastatic Tumor	65	Adamantinoma	4
Vessel Tumor	34	Not Bone Tumors	22
Benign Giant Cell Tumor	357	Unclassified and Miscellaneous	68
Giant Cell Tumor, Malignant	19	Total in Registry	2,098

There are 701 cases of osteogenic sarcoma and 155 cases of Ewing's sarcoma that were treated five years or more ago.

Since Dr. Codman's original report in 1926 of 13 registered cases of five-year cures of osteogenic sarcoma the number has risen this year to 97 cases of osteogenic sarcoma and 15 cases of Ewing's sarcoma. These patients have lived clinically free from the disease for a period of five years or more following treatment.

Five of the original 13 cases reported by Dr. Codman have died; B.S.R. No. 100 died eleven years after treatment with metastases in the spine, ribs, and lungs, after having been clinically free of the disease for ten years or more; B.S.R. No. 50 died of paralysis twenty-four years and nine months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 29 died from cancer of the breast seventeen years and five months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 501 died of cardiovascular disease twenty-two years after treatment; and B.S.R. No. 64 died from an acute septic sore throat twenty-six years and ten months after treatment. The other eight original "cures" are still alive and free from the disease at the time of the latest report.

Seven of the other cases here reported have died after the expiration of the five-year period; B.S.R. No. 1437 from cardiac and cerebral sclerosis; B.S.R. No. 176 following a prostatectomy; B.S.R. No. 970 with probable pulmonary metastases eight years after treatment; B.S.R. No. 156 nine years after treatment from heart disease without recurrence of the tumor; B.S.R. No. 1025 from metastases twelve years and two months after treatment; B.S.R. No. 1124 from metastases eight years and four months after treatment; and B.S.R. No. 955 from general visceral and subcutaneous metastases eight years and six months after treatment.

At least two cases (B.S.R. Nos. 183 and 267) have had definite evidence of metastases which have disappeared after treatment.

Ninety-four of the 97 five-year cures of osteogenic sarcoma were treated by surgical methods, and of these 50 had surgical methods only. In the other 47 cases surgery was supplemented by radium or x-ray treatment or Coley toxins or some combination of these agents. In 19 of the cases Coley toxins were administered.

The cases in which amputation was not performed are as follows:

- B.S.R. No. 668. Local excision of tumor of lower part of femur followed by radium.
- B.S.R. No. 183. Local excision of tumor of lower part of tibia followed by radium and Coley toxins.
- B.S.R. No. 523. Excision of tumor of ilium followed by radium.
- B.S.R. No. 585. Tumor of ilium treated by x-rays only.
- B.S.R. No. 1489. Tumor of ilium treated by x-ray and excision.
- B.S.R. No. 109. Tumor of rib treated by resection followed by radium.
- B.S.R. No. 373. Tumor of rib was explored and then treated by radium and Coley toxins.
- B.S.R. No. 759. Tumor of scapula treated by excision and x-rays.
- B.S.R. No. 867. Tumor of scapula treated by excision alone.
- B.S.R. No. 1523. Tumor of humerus treated by excision alone.
- B.S.R. No. 1625. Tumor of humerus treated by resection followed by transplantation.

It is interesting to note that 28 of the cases had some form of operative procedure on the tumor at periods of one day to five years prior to amputation. These operative procedures consisted of single or multiple biopsies, curettages, explorations, excisions or resections.

Ewing's Sarcoma. Fifteen of the registered cases of Ewing's sarcoma have lived from five to twenty-one years following treatment. These occurred in a group of 155 cases that were treated five years or more ago.

Fourteen of the cases were subjected to surgery. In nine of them amputation was performed; in three there were excisions. B.S.R. No. 893, a tumor of the rib, was treated by resection followed by x-ray. B.S.R. No. 1932, a tumor of the right hip, was treated by resection followed by x-ray. One case B.S.R. No. 1756, a tumor of the upper half of the shaft of femur, was treated by x-ray and Coley toxins alone without surgical procedure other than biopsy. Five of the nine amputated cases also received Coley toxins and, of these, six had radiation in one form or another. Five of the nine amputated cases had one or more surgical procedures at some period prior to the amputation.

One of the cases here reported B.S.R. No. 515 died of an unknown cause seven and a half years after treatment.

A meeting of the committee was held in New York on June 5, 1937, at which numerous administrative and scientific problems which have arisen in connection with the Registry were discussed. The opinion was expressed by members of the committee that the Registry had done a great deal to clarify the subject of bone tumors. Its terminology has come to be recognized generally in the United States and extensively in all countries. It has been used extensively by undergraduates in the teaching of bone tumors and by study groups. Also, many of the publications on bone tumors have incorporated material of the Registry. It has served as a diagnostic laboratory for many interesting cases. Consequently, the Registry should continue to accept interesting new cases. The registrations in future will be limited to primary malignant tumors of bone.

Dr. James Ewing accepted an invitation of the committee to write an article on "The Classification of Bone Tumors," the manuscript of which will be submitted to the members of the committee and the article will be published.

Respectfully submitted,

BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Registrar.

The Committee on Fractures functions through two meetings a year—one clinical and executive meeting which is held in January of each year, and the second at the annual meeting of the College.

In the previous winter meetings the committee has concentrated its activities on one day of clinics showing the newer methods of treatment, and the second day is devoted to the reports of the various sub-committees. It was the consensus of opinion at the last meeting, held in January in Boston, that the afternoon usually devoted to dry clinics should be changed so that at this meeting two presentations of newer methods of treatment might be scheduled wherein the author would be given adequate time to present his subject without being limited to let us say twenty minutes, and that sufficient time be allotted for discussion, so that the author, with the benefit of such full discussion might be enabled to prepare an article for presentation which would meet with the approval of the Committee on Fractures. Such a stamp of approval would give the presentation when published a high professional status.

An experiment is to be made at the next meeting to be held in New York in February to bring younger men in contact with the committee. It may be that we shall request, after this meeting, the permission of the Board of Regents to form a junior group. The plan is not definite as yet, and it is mentioned solely to show the trend of thought among some of the senior members.

A detailed report of the sub-committee on regional groups will be given by Dr. Scudder at the fracture symposium. There are now 66 regional groups throughout the United States and Canada, with a membership of 1,172, and Dr. Scudder has recent reports from fifty of them.

The accomplishments of these various regional groups are of great value to the College and as an educational and social power they cannot be overestimated. For instance, a new regional committee in Connecticut has contacted the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, who published and distributed a pamphlet entitled "Call an Am-

STANDARD FOR MINIMUM EQUIPMENT FOR FRACTURE TREATMENT IN HOSPITALS

1. That all general hospitals be equipped to care for fractures; that the minimum equipment for the transportation and emergency treatment of fractures be the following or its equivalent:

Thomas upper extremity splints; Thomas lower extremity splints with traction straps, slings and buckle straps; Hodgen splints; coaptation splints, assorted sizes; Cabot wire splints; straight pieces of wood (of assorted length, width and thickness) for splints; plaster of Paris bandages; some form of overhead frame for suspension; suitable x-ray apparatus, including a portable machine, if practicable.

2. That it is highly desirable that one individual surgeon be responsible for the supervision of the care of fractures in each hospital service.

3. That special record sheets be used for fracture cases.

4. That a close follow-up be maintained on all fracture cases for such time as necessary to establish an accurate knowledge of end results.

balance," which was widely distributed throughout the entire state. In this pamphlet are described the highway first aid stations established by the Red Cross and photographs of types of splints used in fixed traction are presented, with the method of application. They were also concerned in having presented in TIME magazine of December 16, 1936, a discussion of the method of handling patients with injured backs. This method will be described in detail further in this report. In addition, the Connecticut committee has arranged with a firm to make splints at a minimum cost and has interested the Aetna Casualty & Surety Company so it has produced a 500-foot film illustrating the application of fixed traction.

Time does not permit me to give the accomplishments of other regional committees, which are just as thrilling.

The New York and Brooklyn regional committee has spent several months in attempting to develop, with the aid of Dr. Byron Stookey, a safe method for lay instruction in transporting people with broken backs. As you know, there have been numbers of cases reported where inexperienced lay and even professional handling of injured backs has resulted in complete severance of the cord. I would like to present to you the recommendations of the New York and Brooklyn Regional Fracture Committee for this transportation, as I believe it should be given due publicity by the American College of Surgeons. A copy of these recommendations was mailed to each member of the general Committee on Fractures, and sixteen responded, of whom fourteen were favorable and two were somewhat doubtful of the procedure at first but, after further correspondence, were convinced it was right. I feel therefore that it can be stated it was approved by the general Committee on Fractures. The instructions are as follows:

FIRST AID FOR NECK AND BACK INJURIES AS PRESENTED TO THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE LOCAL REGIONAL COMMITTEE ON FRACTURES

1. The committee recognizes that the injured spine is first seen and first moved by the lay public and only rarely by the physician.

2. The committee further recognizes that the first movements of the injured person may further damage the spinal cord, causing additional irreparable paralysis and destroying any remaining function which may have escaped. Recovery is then impossible.

3. The committee feels very strongly that the lay public must be instructed in the proper method of handling suspected injuries of the spine so that further damage in moving and transportation may be avoided.

4. Unless there is imperative need to move an individual suspected of having a spinal injury to a zone of safety the injured is best not moved or lifted until medical aid reaches him.

5. If the injured must be moved, the committee proposes the following first aid methods suitable for the physician, the ambulance and the lay public:

a. If a patient complains of pain in his back he may have a broken back. If he complains of pain in his neck he may have broken his neck. Never lift an injured person or his head until he has told you whether he can move his legs or fingers. If he cannot move his legs, his back is broken. If he cannot move his fingers, his neck is broken. In both cases the spinal cord is injured. If you lift his head to give him a drink of water or if you fold him up to carry him, you inevitably grind the injured spinal cord between parts of the broken spine and destroy any useful remnant of the spinal cord which may have escaped injury in the accident. Do not allow the victim to sit up.

b. When the back is broken, gently roll the victim over onto a blanket so that he rests on his abdomen, placing arms at sides, with the head turned to one side. When the blanket is lifted, the victim's back sags downward, thus making him sway-backed and removing pressure from the spinal cord. The injured person is then placed face downward on a stretcher or similar support for transportation and should not be transported in the seat of an automobile. Do not allow injured to sit up.

c. When the neck is broken, gently slide the victim on a plank, rigid board or shutter, so that he rests face upward, arms at sides. Under no circumstances should the head be tilted forward. No pillow should be placed under head or neck. A strap should be placed around the injured and the board to prevent injured from falling off board during transportation. Do not allow injured to sit up.

d. If the injured person with a broken neck must be moved or lifted, four should form a team—one at the victim's head, another at his feet, the others at each hip and shoulder. While those at the hips and shoulders lift and carry, the others gently pull. The lift and pull must be in unison. The patient is then placed on a rigid board, such as a shutter or door, or rigid stretcher for transportation. The pull at head and feet tends to hold the spine apart and prevents the bones from grinding against the injured cord while the injured is being lifted.

e. When the victim is unconscious, handle him as though his neck were broken.

This method requires no special ambulance equipment other than a board four feet long and twelve inches wide which can be placed on a stretcher for neck injuries. The head and trunk rest on this board while the injured is being transported. A blanket or its equivalent is nearly always available.

ADDITIONAL RECOMMENDATIONS INTENDED FOR USE IN AMBULANCES OF NEW YORK CITY

The above recommendations are intended primarily for the lay public and to bring the patient to the stretcher rather than have the patient picked up and carried in a sitting posture to a waiting automobile. If a stretcher is immediately available to bring to the patient, then the following recommendations are made:

a. In back injuries, remove one bar from the canvas stretcher, place the canvas stretcher beside the injured, roll the patient onto the canvas so that he lies face down. Pillows should then be placed beneath the patient's thigh and also beneath the shoulders so as to produce mild extension of the vertebral column.

b. Neck injuries. The recommendations expressed in "c" and "d" are adequate.

The injured should be thus transported to a hospital where x-ray apparatus is available and x-rays taken without removing injured from stretcher or blanket and without changing his position. Lateral x-rays are the most valuable. The injured should not be taken off the stretcher or blanket until the surgeon is ready to begin treatment.

The committee has considered the prone position in relation to injuries of the extremities, abdomen, chest, and head and in so doing has consulted with a number of general surgeons. The consensus of opinion is that the above proposed method is not harmful to associated internal injuries or those of the extremities.

The Sub-Committee on Transportation, under Dr. Kennedy's able leadership, has continued to spread the gospel of fixed traction.

The American Red Cross, in its latest edition of its first aid book which has just come from the press, states in its preamble that fixed traction for transportation is advisable as the best method of treatment, and for the first time has introduced in its handbook the arm splint and the Keller-Blake half-ring splint. It has ceased advocating the use of the long lateral splint in its text. The Red Cross has made arrangements with 19 mobile organizations, covering over 690 units, to train their personnel in fixed traction and to install traction splints in their trucks. These units are largely public utility organizations whose trucks are apt to be along main-traveled highways.

The increase in the number of severe accidents from skiing has stimulated the American Alpine Club and the Skidreiverein of New York to contact our committee for advice on transportation of the injured, and Dr. Kennedy has helped them prepare their handbook on first aid.

The Board of Regents has been good enough to have one member of the Committee on Fractures at its sectional meetings, and has featured the fracture programs. Dr. Scudder has attended the greatest number of these meetings. Your chairman, however, went to Halifax for the meeting of the Maritime Provinces. It has been of great advantage to have Dr. Scudder or myself present at these meetings, because we have been able to organize regional groups. As the meetings continue in the future it would also be of inestimable value to check up on the groups formed, and to stimulate renewed action. As I have stressed before the Regents in previous reports, personal visits are frequently necessary to regional groups who are lagging in their activities. Occasionally groups falter in their activities if they cannot be contacted in sectional meetings for a considerable period of time. It would be of great advantage if the chairman were empowered to send a representative to a state or locality where immediate action might be necessary to produce results. As I have stated previously, I believe that the regional group activities are a tremendous factor for good or bad to the College. The lay and medical education program which they have undertaken is far reaching and of vital importance.

In conclusion, I wish to express to the Regents my appreciation of the interest they have taken in the past few years in the Committee on Fractures.

HALL OF THE ART AND SCIENCE OF SURGERY

GEORGE CRILE, Cleveland, Chairman

JOHN R. FRASER, Montreal

RICHARD R. SMITH, Grand Rapids

J. BENTLEY SQUIER, New York

Contributions to the exhibits for the Hall of the Art and Science of Surgery have been received during the year and some have been prepared at headquarters. Notable among the contributions are those from Dr. George Crile, Dr. James T. Nix, Dr. Nolie Mumey, Dr. R. D. McClure and Dr. G. C. Penberthy, and the Mayo Clinic. These illustrate the energy systems of the lion and alligator (comparatively), advanced cancer, transillumination of the breast and certain other pathological conditions, treatment of burns, and treatment of fractures of the femur. Appropriate cases for the display of these exhibits have been provided. The Lister exhibit is being rearranged and remounted in a room dedicated to this purpose. Some of the exhibits from this collection have been loaned to other organizations during the year.

Pending other provisions these exhibits are placed on display in the Murphy Memorial building.

Respectfully submitted,

BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Director.

STANDARDIZATION OF CLINICAL LABORATORIES

At the meeting of the Committee on the Standardization of Clinical Laboratories, held in October, 1926, the following Minimum Standard for laboratories was adopted and has been approved by the Board of Regents:

MINIMUM STANDARD FOR CLINICAL LABORATORIES IN HOSPITALS

1. SUPERVISION. The director of the clinical laboratory shall be a graduate of an acceptable college or university of recognized standing, and shall have had adequate training in clinical pathology or allied subject. In case the director is not a physician there shall be attached to the laboratory a graduate in medicine competent to render diagnoses on pathological conditions.

2. FUNCTIONS. The clinical laboratory shall be prepared to perform satisfactory work in (a) pathologic anatomy, gross and microscopic; (b) bacteriology and parasitology; (c) serology; (d) hematology; (e) chemical and morphologic examinations of other body fluids, exudates, transudates, and excreta.

3. EXAMINATION OF TISSUE. All tissues removed at operation shall be sent routinely to the clinical laboratory for examination and report.

4. RECORDS AND REPORTS. A readily available copy of all reports shall be filed in the laboratory and one with the patient's record. In pathologic anatomy there shall be in the laboratory a cross index of, at least, the name of the patient, of the hospital or laboratory number of the patient, and of the lesion or organ. There shall be preserved also, for at least three years, either section, imbedded tissue, or gross specimen from each case from which tissue possibly showing pathologic change is removed.

5. CHARGES. A uniform system of charges for laboratory work shall be enforced.

6. CONFERENCES. The clinical pathologist shall attend the medical staff conferences of the hospital.

INDUSTRIAL MEDICINE AND TRAUMATIC SURGERY

During the past year the work of this committee has been conducted on a less extensive scope than in former years. More attention has been given to the medical services of industrial organizations that had already been surveyed and in which there was not only an opportunity but an urgent need for constructive work. In the past two years no funds have been specifically allocated for the promotion of the activities of this committee. However, through the splendid arrangement made by Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern and Dr. Bowman C. Crowell in the schedule of the men in the field, the surveys of industrial medical services have been conducted in a satisfactory manner. This part of the College program is of great importance and it is recommended that some provision be made whereby its activities could be adequately financed and enlarged.

As of October 1, 1937, the medical services of 1,657 industrial organizations in the United States and Canada have been surveyed by the American College of Surgeons of which number 843 or approximately 50 per cent have been fully or provisionally approved. Industrialists are continuing their interest and co-operation in this work of the College not only for the honor of having an approved medical service but for the assistance that they may receive from the College in organizing a better medical and surgical service for their employees. In many states the compensation laws have been changed or supplemented so as to cover occupational diseases in addition to the coverage of accidental injuries. This is another factor that has stimulated the ever increasing interest of the employers in the health of their employees.

Dr. M. N. Newquist has been especially interested in this phase of the College program and has done excellent work. It is his observation that many employers are enlarging the scope of their medical services so as to care for their employees when they are ill or injured even when such cases have no industrial connection. This development in the situation is something that should command our interest and consideration for it has such a direct bearing on any policy that may eventuate and on any financial arrangements that may be made for providing medical care and hospitalization of patients in the lower income brackets.

The fine work that the Committee on Fractures is doing is appreciated and their accomplishments are certainly amplifying the progress that is being made in the field of traumatic surgery. Any program that is adopted to increase and improve the facilities for graduate training for surgery should include plans for training in traumatic surgery which we believe is not being taught adequately at the present time.

Respectfully submitted,

FREDERIC A. BESLEY, Chairman.

MINIMUM STANDARD FOR MEDICAL SERVICE IN INDUSTRY

1. The industrial establishment shall have an organized medical department or service with competent medical staff including consultants and also shall have adequate emergency, dispensary and hospital facilities and personnel to assure efficient care of the ill and injured.

2. Membership on the medical staff shall be restricted to physicians and surgeons who are (a) graduates from an acceptable medical school, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, in good standing and licensed to practice in their respective states or provinces, (b) competent in the field of industrial medicine and traumatic surgery, (c) worthy in character and in matters of professional ethics; in the latter connection the practice of the division of fees, under any guise whatsoever, shall be prohibited.

3. There shall be a system of accurate and complete records filed in an accessible manner, such records to include particularly a report of injury or illness, description of physical findings, treatment, estimated period of disability, end-results, as well as other information pertinent to the case or required by statute for Workmen's Compensation claims or other purposes.

4. Patients requiring hospitalization shall be sent to institutions approved by the American College of Surgeons.

5. The medical department or service shall have general supervision over the sanitation of the plant and the health of all employees.

INDUSTRIAL ESTABLISHMENTS CONDUCTING MEDICAL SERVICES WHICH ARE APPROVED BY THE COLLEGE

Herewith is submitted the list of medical services in industry in the United States and Canada approved by the American College of Surgeons as of October 1, 1937. Approval is granted on the basis of compliance with the Minimum Standard for Medical Service in Industry formulated by the Committee on Industrial Medicine and Traumatic Surgery of the American College of Surgeons. The asterisk (*) indicates provisional approval which signifies that the medical services so designated have accepted the minimum requirements of the College standard and are endeavoring to put them into effect, but for lack of time or other acceptable reasons have not been able to do so in every detail. A Certificate of Approval is granted to an industrial establishment in which the medical organization and service is fully approved and is of such a nature as to give reasonable assurance of continued compliance with the Minimum Standard.

(GENERAL SURGERY AND THE SURGICAL SPECIALTIES)

AT the annual meeting of the Board of Regents, October 24, 1937, there was presented the report of the survey of hospitals for graduate training for surgery, supplemented by proposed criteria for graduate training for general surgery and the surgical specialties. The report was approved in principle, and a Committee on Graduate Training for Surgery (General Surgery and the Surgical Specialties) was appointed by the Regents as follows:

DALLAS B. PHEMISTER, Chicago, Chairman

DONALD C. BALFOUR, Rochester

JOHN R. FRASER, Montreal

ALBERT C. FURSTENBERG, Ann Arbor

HARRY S. GRADLE, Chicago

PHILIP D. WILSON, New York

The primary object of the American College of Surgeons since it was founded has been the elevation of the practice of surgery. All activities of the College are closely allied with this purpose, and among them is the subject of graduate training for surgery which has received continued consideration during the past seven years from committees appointed by the Board of Regents to study the problem.

In October, 1934, the Board of Regents of the College appointed a committee for the study of graduate training for surgery under the chairmanship of Dr. Samuel C. Harvey, Professor of Surgery, Yale University School of Medicine. A year later, at the Clinical Congress in San Francisco, the committee presented its recommendations. The complete report was published in the December, 1935, BULLETIN of the College. One of the specific points made was that the "present practice as regards the training of a surgeon should appear in an analysis of the applications for fellowship accepted this year [1935]." This analysis was made by Dr. Bowman C. Crowell, Associate Director.

Concurrent with the work of Dr. Harvey and his committee, an analysis was made by Associate Director, Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, of the reports accumulated through the extensive surveys of hospitals, to determine in a general way the availability, or possible availability, for graduate training in hospitals connected with universities and those not so connected, and more particularly to set forth tentative criteria for evaluating this training. The report which resulted was submitted to the Board of Regents in May, 1936. It was approved in principle, with the request that the details be further studied as the program developed.

The committees of the College have made comprehensive studies of the various methods of training which lead to qualification as a surgeon. The consensus of opinion has been that the resident system is preferable. This method consists essentially of an extension of training after a general internship, thus enabling the graduate student, under close control and supervision, to obtain in a concentrated experience a degree of accomplishment impossible through other methods.

As a result of these opinions, Dr. Harvey's committee further recommended "that the introduction of this type of graduate teaching into such hospitals as have the proper personnel, plant, and organization be further studied and that minimum standards for such be established." Similar recommendations as to the necessity for a survey of existing and potential facilities for graduate training were also made by representatives of several organizations interested in this subject.

By action of the Board of Regents at its meeting on May 10, 1936, the requirements for fellowship were amplified under the following resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED, that applicants for fellowship whose qualifying medical degree shall have been obtained after the date of January 1, 1938, shall be required to present evidence of having completed three years of hospital service in one or more hospitals approved by the American College of Surgeons for graduate training in surgery, of which two years shall have been spent in training in surgery. In the case of graduates of medical schools which withhold the medical degree until after a fifth year of hospital internship, the date set will be January 1, 1939.

The College, by this action, has assumed a moral obligation at least to its future fellowship to do what it can to make possible the right kind of opportunities for graduate training in surgery. There will be an increasing demand upon officials of the College to guide those who aspire to fellowship. To advise them correctly, the College must be fortified with accurate, practical information that will help young men to secure proper preparation for a surgical career.

The data accumulated at the beginning of 1937 warranted an actual survey of a group of selected hospitals to elicit further information and to confirm or disprove impressions already gained from observations and opinions. It was believed that a special study of a selected group of hospitals might give a fairly comprehensive cross section of the whole situation pertaining to opportunities and criteria for graduate training for surgery.

The group of approximately 140 hospitals selected for survey included three distinct types:

1. Hospitals owned and operated by medical schools, or generally designated university hospitals.
2. Hospitals loosely affiliated with medical schools and used for undergraduate teaching, but in which the influence of the school did not otherwise extend.
3. Hospitals not connected with medical schools, but in which there were potential factors for graduate training in surgery.

In addition to the survey of these hospitals, the field staff had abundant opportunities to study the practice of surgery in other institutions and particularly in rural community hospitals. At all times this has afforded them the privilege of looking at the problem of surgical practice from its various angles. Information regarding graduate training for surgery was difficult to obtain as few hospitals had given the subject special study. The apparent need for criteria or minimum standards as a guide to the individual hospital was forcibly impressed on the field staff.

The data on which this report is based are from the findings of actual surveys of selected institutions by three members of the College staff: Assistant Director, Dr. M. N. Newquist, and Field Representatives, Dr. Harold Earnheart and Dr. M. H. Manson, the latter being the author of the original of this report. Each of these men, by virtue of his extensive training and experience, was eminently qualified to do the work; each of them has a splendid background of knowledge in surgery in all of its branches, and is thoroughly familiar with the technique of making surveys.

One of the most striking impressions which has been gained from the recent study is the complete lack of any basic standard or uniformity of methods of graduate training. This dissimilarity is not sectional or provincial, for often in the same city there is a heterogeneity of method and opinion as to what constitutes proper training.

There should exist some definitely organized program covering each year of the training period. It is suggested that this might be outlined as a fixed course of study. The basic program presupposes a definite existing organization of the attending medical staff in the institution which offers graduate training, with individuals designated to assume responsibility for it. This does not obtain at present. The lack of organization reflects itself in the minimal systematic supervision which is provided, the non-existence of records of work done in most instances, and the very minor participation of residents in educational activities other than routine work. There is no logical reason why every hospital cannot have such organization if it has sufficient clinical material, properly equipped diagnostic departments, and the professional and technical personnel. The invalid excuse proffered many times is that the institution is not a teaching hospital. Every hospital is a teaching hospital. The fact that the hospital is not directly connected with a medical school does not preclude the utilization of talent and facilities for proper training of young surgeons. A few of the best planned and best functioning surgical residencies encountered in the survey were found in non-university connected hospitals.

There is need for definite criteria for graduate training for surgery which will be accepted by all groups interested in the subject. There is also need for a recognized organization to encourage and aid hospitals in meeting these standards. There are 128 hospitals included in this survey to which a minimum standard or yard stick could be applied to estimate to what extent they are conforming to these standards. To 40, or 31.3 per cent, a rating of full approval might be given; 23, or 17.9 per cent, fell just short of fulfilling all requirements, but with more attention given to some details they could be rated as fully approved; 46, or 35.9 per cent, are not meeting the requirements primarily because of a lack of intrinsic organization, but have excellent possibilities for instituting a good training program; 19, or 14.9 per cent, of the hospitals were unsuited for consideration in a training program, primarily because the staff organization is inadequate for the purpose.

The belief has been expressed that the program of graduate training would deprive the surgeons' assistants, or the younger men on the visiting staff of the hospital, of opportunities for obtaining experience in operating. It is, however, a fact that the presence of residents in surgery will enhance the opportunities of the entire visiting staff. An alert resident is a stimulus to the surgical staff, and if the staff is properly discharging its obligations to the resident, the members will derive as much educational benefit as the resident himself. Also, the resident program will enhance the value of the internship. The same relationship can and should be established between the younger visiting staff and the residents as exists in a correctly managed service between the resident and the interne. Such mutually beneficial situations do exist and admittedly require some sacrifices by all concerned.

An objection to many of the established graduate training programs in hospitals with large surgical services is that there is a pyramiding of the house staff which results in incomplete or short-time training for all except the successful one or two who have demonstrated their capacity to complete the program. At present the incompletely trained individual either seeks other appointments or goes into practice with his limited training. However, it is believed that these men have gained a consciousness that they are incompletely trained, and thus have a respect for their own limitations. When more non-university connected hospitals assume their educational obligations, the opportunities for second-year internes and one- or two-year residents will be greatly augmented.

In any plan which contemplates the extension of a program for surgical training into hospitals which are at present poorly organized for the most part, it is imperative that adequate machinery for the periodic survey of these hospitals be available. Both the intrinsic and the extrinsic organization for individual hospitals and the entire graduate training program could be materially aided by the designation of a qualified, recognized organization to make such surveys.

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

A summary of conclusions as contained in the report of the survey of graduate training for surgery, prepared by Dr. Manson, is as follows:

1. Since January, 1937, approximately 827 hospitals were surveyed by representatives of the American College of Surgeons, of which number approximately 140 seemed to present facilities for graduate training in surgery and so were made the subject of a special survey. According to provisional criteria for rating hospitals for graduate training, it was found that 50 per cent of those surveyed could be put on an approved list. Nearly 36 per cent of the remainder have everything necessary for conducting adequate graduate training in general surgery and the surgical specialties except sufficient organization of the staff or of the services within the hospital.

2. The fact, shown by the survey of only a portion of the potential facilities in the country, that 36 per cent of the hospitals visited might be utilized for graduate training in surgery, indicates that there is no lack of facilities. By this is meant that these hospitals have a large enough percentage of patients of the classification usually used for teaching purposes. They have well equipped diagnostic departments with competent technical and professional personnel and have surgeons available who could adequately conduct a teaching program.

3. The need for organization of both the existing and potential facilities has been pointed out in the report of this survey. One indication of this is the fact that in only 38 per cent of the hospitals having residents is there any real systematic supervision or direction of the residents. This need is further emphasized by the absolute lack of any basic uniformity in the various hospitals in the design of the graduate training program. The variable definition and interpretation of what really constitutes graduate training in surgery is attributable to lack of organization.

4. This survey indicates that 42 per cent of the hospitals visited have available facilities for basic science study which are being utilized by only 15 per cent of the surgical residents. It is significant that only 4 per cent of the residencies provide time out from the routine hospital work for collateral basic science study or research. There is also minimum utilization of the facilities available in 28 per cent of the hospitals for dissection and study on the cadaver and on animals.

5. Approximately 26 per cent of the hospitals in this survey are owned or operated by medical schools and train 38 per cent of the residents; 33.5 per cent of those training surgical residents are either owned or operated or are affiliated in some manner with medical schools; approximately 62 per cent of the 297 residents trained annually are in hospitals of this type. The desirability of such affiliation is discussed and should be further encouraged.

6. In contemplating the extension of a graduate training program for surgery into hospitals not engaged in training residents at present or not carrying out an adequate training program, it is essential that measures be designed to ascertain the effectiveness of any teaching project in the individual instance. Only a fraction over 8 per cent of the residencies in this survey have any type of examination at the conclusion of the training period and this does not pertain to all of the individual residents on the service. It is not enough to expose the resident to an educational process; it is also important to ascertain if he has profited by it to the necessary degree.

7. If the existing and potential facilities for graduate training are to be extended and utilized, and if the intrinsic organization within individual hospitals and the extrinsic organization of a graduate training program are to function properly, it is necessary that adequate machinery be made available. Tentative criteria or a minimum standard for evaluating graduate training in surgery should be formulated and accepted by those interested in the subject. Periodic surveys should be made by a competent personnel for the purpose of rating such hospitals as are engaged in or have the potentialities for engaging in graduate training. A national objective in graduate training, with the co-operation of all institutions instrumental in defining and capable of guiding such an objective, will result in the most significant advance in standards in surgery in the history of American medicine.

HOSPITAL STANDARDIZATION

M. T. MACEachern, M.D., Associate Director, American College of Surgeons
Director of Hospital Activities

E. W. WILLIAMSON, M.D., Assistant Director of Hospital Activities

TWO decades of Hospital Standardization have been completed, and although remarkable improvement is recorded through the succession of surveys, of which the present one is the twentieth, there is no inclination on the part of either the American College of Surgeons or the administrators of the hospitals under survey to call the task anything but well begun. The work must continue.

The fairness of the principles which comprise the Minimum Standard for Hospitals is unquestioned, and in the course of some 45,000 surveys which the College has made up to this time, even those hospitals which could not conform in entirety have conceded the enlightened spirit of the movement and have been inspired in many cases to correct deficiencies as far as they were able. It is therefore not alone the growing number of approved hospitals—2,621 in the 1937 survey—which signifies the progress of hospital standardization, but also the large number which are working toward the standard and the decreasing number which are unconcerned with adequate, ethical, and humanitarian service.

Since there is no legal authority behind Hospital Standardization, and acceptance and maintenance of the Minimum Standard are entirely voluntary, it is only through constant insistence upon good hospital service by physicians and patients that the existing inadequate institutions can be discouraged and the establishment of others of a like nature prevented.

Each year it is more apparent that we are approaching a time when the public will be sufficiently educated to shun the unapproved hospital, forcing it to improve its service to the required level or go out of existence. This level can easily be reached by even the small hospital if it supplements its facilities through means recommended by the College.

To determine what measure of protection was afforded the hospital patient through licensing by states, cities, and other governmental units, the College recently conducted a survey of prevailing practices. It was found that only 3 states, out of 40 which answered the inquiry, required licensing of all hospitals. Twenty admitted they had no requirements for the licensing, establishing, or operating of hospitals. Two required a license for maternity and mental institutions only, and nine required licenses for hospitals doing maternity work. One state has a licensing law applying only to mental hospitals. Several of the larger cities have established regulations, but in some instances these are not enforced. Even where licenses are required, all that is usually necessary is the payment of an annual fee and conformance with certain requirements covering fire and other safety precautions. Therefore, the American College of Surgeons has formulated for presentation to state, city, and other interested bodies, recommendations for the licensing and regulating of hospitals. With the co-operation of commissioners of health and other properly constituted governmental authorities in following these recommendations, progress may be expected toward eliminating the unethical, needless, and irregular institutions, and safeguarding the hospital patient.

The term "standardization" might be misinterpreted to mean maintenance of a certain level of hospital administration and operation. This would imply toleration of a lower standard on the part of those institutions which had exceeded the minimum previous to standardization, and lack of progress on the part of those which, after a struggle, had successfully reached it. No such static idea is intended. Attainment of

MINIMUM STANDARD FOR HOSPITALS

1. That physicians and surgeons privileged to practice in the hospital be organized as a definite medical staff. Such organization has nothing to do with the question as to whether the hospital is "open" or "closed," nor need it affect the various existing types of medical staff organization. The word staff is here defined as the group of doctors who practice in the hospital inclusive of all groups, such as the "regular medical staff," the "visiting medical staff," and the "associate medical staff."

2. That membership upon the medical staff be restricted to physicians and surgeons who are (a) graduates of medicine of acceptable medical schools, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, in good standing, and legally licensed to practice in their respective states or provinces; (b) competent in their respective fields; and (c) worthy in character and in matters of professional ethics; that in this latter connection the practice of the division of fees, under any guise whatsoever, be prohibited.

3. That the medical staff initiate and, with the approval of the governing board of the hospital, adopt rules, regulations, and policies governing the professional work of the hospital; that these rules, regulations, and policies specifically provide: (a) that medical staff meetings be held at least once each month; (b) that the medical staff review and analyze at regular intervals their clinical experience in the various departments of the hospital, such as medicine, surgery, obstetrics, and the other specialties; the medical records of patients, free and pay, to be the basis for such review and analysis.

4. That accurate and complete medical records be written for all patients and filed in an accessible manner in the hospital, a complete medical record being one which includes identification data; complaint; personal and family history; history of present illness; physical examination; special examinations, such as consultations, clinical laboratory, x-ray and other examinations; provisional or working diagnosis; medical or surgical treatment; gross and microscopical pathological findings; progress notes; final diagnosis; condition on discharge; follow-up and, in case of death, autopsy findings.

5. That diagnostic and therapeutic facilities under competent medical supervision be available for the study, diagnosis, and treatment of patients, these to include at least (a) a clinical laboratory providing chemical, bacteriological, serological and pathological services; (b) an x-ray department providing radiographic and fluoroscopic services.

the Minimum Standard is necessary for approval, but beyond the specific minimum requirements there is room for unlimited development.

Hospital Standardization has promoted individuality in hospital administration and operation at the same time that it has fought inadequacy, inefficiency, and irresponsibility. Its influence has been positive and constructive because the underlying idea has been to elevate and encourage, and not merely to remedy deficiencies. The requirements imposed have not operated to restrict individuality, but have stimulated it, because they are of such a nature that their unmistakable import is to focus attention upon the patient and to concentrate every effort in his behalf. Hospital Standardization by prescribing the fundamentals of efficient care of the patient illuminates the pathway to super-efficient care. That kind of care is possible only when a hospital capitalizes upon all its individual resources of mind, matter, and spirit in its service to the patient.

In twenty years the science of hospital care has developed to a point where the patient not only has a much better chance for recovery, but his period of hospitalization on the average is considerably shorter. Under Hospital Standardization, the hospital selects its medical staff carefully, considering integrity, ethics, and competency; members of the medical staff consult freely and review and analyze the clinical work; accurate and complete medical records are kept on all patients; recognized diagnostic and therapeutic aids are available under competent medical direction to assist the physician; and all departments and the combined personnel of the hospital co-ordinate their efforts for the purpose of rendering the best service possible to the patient.

Hospital Standardization has made itself felt beyond the United States and Canada. In July of this year, the Director of Hospital Activities for the American College of Surgeons was privileged to present the Hospital Standardization program to the Fifth Congress of the International Hospital Association in Paris, where some 44 countries of the world were represented through their appointed delegates. Intense interest was manifested in the movement and numerous subsequent inquiries were received. Hospital Standardization has also had its influence on hospitals in Australia, New Zealand, South America, Cuba, Newfoundland, and China. In 1926 at the request of the governments of Victoria, Australia, and the Dominion of New Zealand, and the British Medical Association of Australia and New Zealand, the Associate Director of the American College of Surgeons and Director of Hospital Activities, was loaned to make a survey of their hospitals and advise with them regarding future policies and developments. While there, he assisted the authorities in laying the foundation for the reorganization of their hospital systems in accordance with the Minimum Standard for Hospitals of the American College of Surgeons. Noteworthy progress has been made by both countries since his visit. Significant, also, is the fact that Hospital Standardization had a prominent place on the programs of the 1929 and 1936 congresses of the Pan-Pacific Surgical Association at Honolulu, when its principles were discussed at length by delegates from the countries which were represented at the Congress.

The American College of Surgeons, founded in 1913, originated Hospital Standardization. The motive which prompted the College to begin the movement was a desire to advance the practice of surgery by improving the environment of the surgeon. The principles set forth in the Minimum Standard for Hospitals are essentially the same today as when originally established in 1918. They are adaptable to all types of institutions caring for the sick and injured. The first group of hospitals surveyed were those of 100 beds and over. Commencing in 1918, twenty annual surveys have been made. In 1918, out of 692 hospitals in the United States and Canada surveyed, 89, or 12.9 per cent, were approved. In 1937, out of 1,787 hospitals of 100 beds and over surveyed, 1,674, or 93.7 per cent, merited approval. The number of hospitals surveyed has increased more than five times, reaching a total of 3,575 in 1937, of which 73.3 per cent were approved. Hospitals having from 50 to 99 beds have been under survey since 1922, and those having from 25 to 49 beds since 1924. In 1937, 1,045 hospitals in the former classification, and 743 in the latter, were surveyed, and the percentages approved were 68.2 and 31.5 per cent respectively, comparing with 41.3 per cent of the former approved in the first survey made by the American College of Surgeons in 1922, and with 15.9 per cent of the latter approved in the first survey made in 1924.

GROWTH OF HOSPITAL STANDARDIZATION—1918 TO 1937

In the tables which are presented herewith, the growth of Hospital Standardization from 1918 to 1937 inclusive is shown. This growth either in the aggregate or in the various groups has not been rapid, but it has been steady, and of a substantial character as will be noted.

SURVEYS OF HOSPITALS OF 50 TO 99 BEDS

This table shows 16 annual surveys of hospitals having from 50 to 99 beds, from 1922 to 1937 inclusive, with number and percentage approved. While the increase in meeting the requirements has not been so rapid as in the larger group, it has been most gratifying as the results indicate:

	Hospitals surveyed	Hospitals approved	Percentage

SURVEYS OF HOSPITALS OF 25 TO 49 BEDS

The fourteenth annual survey of hospitals having from 25 to 49 beds reveals the highest percentage yet shown as conforming with the Minimum Standard. The hospitals of this group have many difficult situations to overcome since they are deprived of close affiliation with the larger institutions. However, the high standard which many of these institutions maintain despite physical, financial, and personnel handicaps is surprising. These institutions render very competent service in smaller communities and the managements deserve commendation and encouragement for their efforts. The results of the 14 surveys reveal:

1924.....	307	49	15.9
1925.....	327	60	18.3

SURVEYS OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT HOSPITALS

In 1925, at the request of the United States Veterans Administration, a survey was undertaken of all Veterans' hospitals in the United States. In the same year similar requests were received from the United States Public Health Service, the Army, and the Navy. The ready response to the requirements for approval is evidenced by the outcome. Thirteen surveys have been completed, with the following results:

Early this year the fourth revision of the Manual of Hospital Standardization was completed. It is available to all hospitals for ready reference. A copy may be secured by writing to the central office of the College. This Manual contains a comprehensive, detailed explanation of all of the requirements for an approved hospital. Valuable addenda have been included which contain sample by-laws, rules, and regulations for the various types of hospitals, organization charts, special forms, and other information. A section pertains to the standardization of the small hospital.

Every effort was expended to make this Manual as helpful as possible, not only to hospitals which are on the Approved List and which desire to amplify the application of the principles of the Minimum Standard for Hospitals, but also to institutions not yet approved but which aim to meet the Minimum Standard. Reference to the detail of the Hospital Standardization requirements has been omitted from this report inasmuch as the revised Manual recently issued contains a complete explanation of each of the clauses of the Minimum Standard for Hospitals, and other information.

Plans for the annual survey of hospitals in the United States and Canada are made at the beginning of each year, and all institutions eligible for survey are carefully considered. To accomplish this work the College maintains a group of competent field representatives, graduates of approved medical schools, who possess a thorough knowledge of hospital administration in all its phases and who have had an extensive training in clinical work. They are selected on the basis of character, personality, tact, diplomacy, industry, honesty, and ability to meet the public.

Each hospital is considered for rating annually. An institution once approved will not necessarily always remain so. The ratings of all hospitals automatically cease on October 1 each year and these institutions are immediately reconsidered for new ratings. At the annual Hospital Standardization Conference in October, public announcement is made of Fully Approved and Provisionally Approved hospitals in the United States, Canada, and other countries.

The field representatives of the College co-operate in every possible way in helping a hospital to overcome difficulties which prevent it from meeting the standard. Hospitals may also request assistance directly from the College which maintains an efficient information service. However, the College, although desirous of rendering every possible service, must not become involved in disciplinary matters or other problems of an individual and local nature.

Administration. Steady progress is being made in improving the type of personnel intrusted with the responsibility for hospital administration. Since the administrator is not required to participate in the actual care of the patient, it is sometimes assumed that knowledge of or training in the scientific and technical aspects of hospital operation are not essential for him. Managerial and business ability of a general character may be his only qualification. Frequently an opposite view is taken and a physician or nurse is selected on the basis of his or her training and experience in handling patients without due regard for executive ability. In tax-supported hospitals sometimes neither qualification is required, and political appointees are delegated with the important task of hospital administration without any consideration of their fitness. This latter condition has compelled the American College of Surgeons, in its work of hospital standardization, to omit certain hospitals from the Approved List and to reduce the ratings of others to provisional approval.

The hospital administrator's responsibility is well described in the following statement taken from the "Report of the Committee on Educational Policies of the American College of Hospital Administrators," presented at the last annual meeting of that organization:

From a functional viewpoint there can be little doubt but that hospital administration must be regarded as a distinctive and highly complex area of endeavor. The hospital administrator must be cognizant not only of the intricacies of finance, the complexities of patient care, the public relations of the institutions, the relation of his hospital to other professional groups, certain aspects of sociology and psychology, of community organization and inter-relationships, but also of a literally vast number of technical procedures in four or five professions.

These specialized procedures he must understand at least in their significance. He must be possessed not only of a wealth of knowledge, but what is even more important, of tact, diplomacy, and sympathy to a degree that may make it possible for him to apply his knowledge prudently and effectively for human betterment. Nothing that may happen in the institution can or should be foreign to his interests, from housekeeping to the significance of postmortem examinations.

The move toward planned academic training, under the supervision of persons who have had successful experience in that particular field, should be extended more generally to preparation for a career as hospital administrator. The attitude of the other members of the hospital organization toward the administrator would be more co-operative if that individual were well qualified to direct and co-ordinate their activities. Intensive study of the duties of hospital administration under competent instructors, therefore, should be required as preparation for such a career, followed by periods of apprenticeship under supervision. Governing boards of hospitals should consider themselves obligated to select for the important post of hospital administrator only persons who have had thorough training and apprenticeship in this field.

Physical Plants. Some increase in new construction and rehabilitation of existing plants is evident over the previous year, but in general, hospitals have found that with proper maintenance their present space is adequate for the time being. In a few instances, plans have been drawn for buildings to replace some which have become too old to justify modernization, but lack of funds is preventing further action.

To make the hospital surroundings as attractive and comfortable as possible for the patient, the modern institution keeps itself fully informed of the new items of equipment and furnishings which are constantly being developed by manufacturers. Many hospitals have installed air conditioning equipment in certain parts of the physical plant, especially operating and delivery rooms, nurseries and private rooms. It would be impossible to exaggerate the benefit conferred upon the patient by the installation of such equipment, for it has not only added comfort but has contributed to the welfare of those seriously ill. Undoubtedly there will be a considerable extension of air conditioning of hospitals in the future, and already it is reported that a few hospitals are completely air conditioned or contemplate such installation when finances are available.

Better lighting, heating, cooking, and refrigerating equipment have also contributed to the efficiency of hospital service, and modernization along these lines is going forward rapidly. Constant improvement is being made in special equipment and supplies, and hospitals have benefited greatly in the selection of these through the use of the list of Approved Medical, Surgical, and Hospital Equipment, Instruments, and Supplies, as published by the American College of Surgeons in the YEAR BOOK and the Approval Number of the BULLETIN.

Medical Staff Organization. Organization of the medical staff of a hospital tends not to restrict but to increase the usefulness of the individual member. Through this means, and this means only, can the hospital control the character of its medical and surgical services. Organization makes concentrated effort far more effective in the aggregate than the simple sum of individual contributions. It gives the hospital unity and promotes a progressive spirit. It enhances the quality of the scientific work performed.

Since the governing board of a hospital must delegate to legally qualified physicians an important share of its responsibility in caring for the patient, it is entitled to use every care in selecting the members of its medical staff, and to insist that they conform with measures designed to increase their usefulness to the institution. Less control and direction are possible in a hospital of the open type than in one of the closed type, but, even in the former, careful selection and organization will stimulate co-operation and better control.

Courtesy privileges are frequently too liberally granted to doctors in the open type of hospital. Hospitals may perform a noteworthy public service by refusing the use of their facilities to all but competent and reputable physicians and surgeons. Unfortunately, there is often carelessness in this respect, and although membership upon the regular medical staff may be restricted to properly qualified practitioners, courtesy privileges are extended without a great deal of discrimination. This is particularly the case in the various specialties in surgery as well as in obstetrics. Laxness in enforcing reasonable precautions in extending courtesy privileges was noted by field representatives of the College when making the 1937 hospital survey.

Recent surveys have disclosed that occasionally physicians are permitted to practice in some hospitals without even being required to undergo the formality of appointment to the courtesy staff. It is a condition for approval by the College that every physician and surgeon working in a hospital should belong to one of the divisions of the medical staff, such as honorary, consulting, active, associate, or courtesy.

The by-laws of the medical staff generally include a pledge or resolution against the practice of fee splitting. Each member of the medical staff, by signing the by-laws or a separate form which contains this pledge, commits himself to refrain from a practice which has had the most pernicious effect upon hospitals and the medical profession. This practice the American College of Surgeons unreservedly condemns, and will not include on its Approved List any hospital which tolerates it.

Hospitals are rapidly standardizing their practices along lines recommended by the College in making appointments to their medical staff and in organizing it. A standard application form is in fairly general use. An increasing number of hospitals are appointing a qualifications committee of the medical staff to review the credentials of applicants and submit recommendations. Appointments to the medical staff by the governing board are on an annual basis in a growing number of hospitals, and this facilitates the readjustment of the various staff groups and departments at regular intervals, as indicated by new appointments, promotions, transfers, and dismissals. Yearly appointments to the medical staff stimulate closer adherence to the established policies with the result that the best co-operation and service possible are assured.

Departmentalization is included as a part of the organization of the medical staff in all but the smaller hospitals. Subdivisions of the major departments such as medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, and eye, ear, nose, and throat, may be carried out depending upon the size of the hospital and the specialized abilities of its medical staff members. Each department should have a competent chief or head.

Approved hospitals are still encountering difficulties with applicants for entry to the hospital who represent various cults and irregular theories of practice, and whose training has been obtained in unrecognized schools of medicine. To retain approval by the College, hospitals should adhere strictly to Clause II of the Minimum Standard, which reads as follows:

That membership upon the medical staff be restricted to physicians and surgeons who are (a) graduates of medicine of acceptable medical schools, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, in good standing, and legally licensed to practice in their respective states or provinces; (b) competent in their respective fields; and (c) worthy in character and in matters of professional ethics; that in this latter connection the practice of the division of fees, under any guise whatsoever, be prohibited.

A truly co-operative and progressive professional spirit in hospital service can be achieved only by constant effort to promote understanding among the various groups. This has been greatly furthered by organization of the medical staff, which operates to improve the relationship of the staff to the governing board as well as to the administrative personnel. In many hospitals representatives of the medical staff and of the governing board are selected to form a joint conference committee or council whose function it is to convene regularly for the close study of problems of mutual interest.

Medical Staff Conferences. Before Hospital Standardization was started medical staff conferences were uncommon, and in most hospitals they were not held at all. When the holding of these conferences at least once each month was made a condition for approval by the American College of Surgeons, no doubt in some quarters it was considered an irksome stipulation consuming valuable time. However, the medical staff conference has fully justified itself, and in some hospitals, especially the larger ones, it is now a regular weekly event.

The participants in the medical staff conference have learned that by submitting their problems to the group, their patients have the benefit of the combined wisdom of many. Analysis of end-results has come to be considered a thoroughly necessary scientific procedure, as only by this means can further knowledge be derived from experience. The management of each case can be studied in the light of ultimate developments, and the symptoms, diagnosis, and various aspects of the treatment can be subjected to a minute analysis to which many minds contribute.

In the large departmentalized hospital, separate staff conferences are desirable for each clinical department, in addition to the general conferences. The pursuance of practical knowledge in the specialties is promoted by study and discussion of clinical records in each department. The correlation between them and the general field of medicine and surgery, however, should be constantly emphasized, and the general conference is one of the best means of accomplishing this objective. The cases selected for study in the conference should include some from the specialized departments in order that the general practitioner may broaden his knowledge of those fields.

Any physician or surgeon can extend his knowledge by attending clinics and meetings and reading medical journals, but in the more intimate circle of his associates in the hospital in which he works, he gains the deeper insight that follows first-hand contact with his patient. What he learns from his fellow staff members in the conference is virtually equivalent to an extension of his own personal experience. He is also given the satisfaction of imparting to them his ideas and findings.

The medical staff conference is assurance to the patient that the institution is functioning as a unit in caring for him. Formerly his personal physician had practically the sole responsibility and the hospital merely carried out his instructions. Now, since the hospital selects, organizes, and governs its medical staff according to definite policies, rules, and regulations, and the work of each staff member is subjected to close scrutiny by all of his associates, the responsibility is broadened, with the hospital continuing to play its part.

The scientific spirit of the hospital may be greatly stimulated by medical staff conferences which are well planned and enthusiastically conducted. They may constitute the most effective type of postgraduate study. While it is imperative that deaths, unimproved cases, infections, complications, and other work which is not progressing satisfactorily be thoroughly reviewed and analyzed, it is also desirable that forward-looking research activities be encouraged, and discussions directed beyond the accepted technique of the day to possible improvement indicated by new methods. The pathologist, radiologist, and others should participate and present information on new developments in their respective fields. Open-mindedness and a zeal for scientific inquiry may be stimulated through the medical staff conference, and no other qualities are so vital in bettering the service to the patient,

Medical Records. Medical records need to be continually stressed because even after standardized methods of providing and preserving them have been adopted, they can degenerate into mere statistics if a routine attitude is taken toward them. The physician may permit his interest in them to wane and let the interne or some other attendant assume the responsibility for them. More important than the filing of the record and its availability for use, is the painstaking entry of the details of each patient's history. Only the physician who is thoroughly acquainted with the patient and who has a good background of training and experience can write a record which contains the really relevant detail and which reflects accurately the onset and progress of the ailment or injury, response to treatment, and other data.

The physician who makes it a practice to give conscientious attention to medical records finds that he benefits by being forced to concentrate better upon the cause and effect aspects of each case. It helps to put his work into the realm of objective science when he must reconsider his method of management in the light of information gained from operation, autopsy, or other eventuality. The medical record may be used as an instrument of self appraisal before it is released for consideration by the staff.

Hospitals in general have come to recognize the desirability of keeping accurate and complete medical records, and have established good physical facilities for this purpose with competent personnel in charge. The medical records librarian usually performs her part of the task well. It is in the source of the information and the final use made of these records that basis for criticism still exists. If the physician co-operates by filling in the data carefully, the first ground for complaint is removed, but his effort and that of the records librarian in preserving it are wasted if there is not a thorough study both at the time and later when further problems in the care of the patient may arise. The use factor is fundamental. Medical records should provide the basic subject matter for the medical staff conferences and should constitute the ground upon which the effectiveness of the entire hospital organization in serving the patient is judged.

Clinical Laboratory. Somewhat nearer fulfillment than last year is the aim, "an accredited pathologist for every approved hospital." The laboratory service in hospitals becomes constantly more important. Recognizing this, most hospitals have provided good physical facilities and equipment, or in the case of the smaller hospitals, have a working arrangement with a nearby acceptable laboratory. In the selection of personnel they are being aided by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists which has set standards of training for pathologists and laboratory technicians. Only those technicians who are registered should be employed in the hospital laboratory. Better laboratory service is assured if hospitals make use of this dependable means now provided for ascertaining the qualifications of pathologists and technicians.

The pathologist is more and more frequently called upon to make examinations which are an aid to diagnosis and therapy. He is also responsible for seeing that examination is made and report rendered on all tissue removed at every operation. This presupposes a gross examination and report, and in addition, a microscopical examination of all tissues, when deemed advisable by the pathologist for further elucidation or confirmation of the diagnosis. His assistance is also required in autopsies, the rate of which should be at least 15 to 20 per cent of all mortalities in a given hospital.

The pathologist has a great deal to contribute to the medical staff conferences. It is also desirable that clinicopathologic conferences be held by the medical staff, with the pathologist playing the leading rôle, in order to study surgical pathology and postmortem material.

X-ray Department. The growing indispensability of providing x-ray and radium therapy equipment and placing it under competent medical supervision, is forcing even the smallest hospitals to make some adequate provision for this type of service. Where it is impractical to employ a full time radiologist, a sharing arrangement with other institutions is often feasible. Sometimes a member of the medical staff may train himself to interpret the x-ray findings and, with the assistance of a consulting radiologist, supervise the department.

The installation of therapeutic units and an adequate supply of radium have been found desirable in a great many approved hospitals, especially since the establishment of cancer clinics has been stimulated by the recommendations of the American College of Surgeons. A thoroughly competent director and technical staff are required where deep x-ray therapy or radium therapy are undertaken.

It is a condition for approval by the College that the person in charge of the x-ray department be a graduate of an acceptable medical school, licensed, ethical, in good standing, professionally competent, and specially trained in radiology. Naturally, with such a background, the director is fully qualified to participate in the staff conference on the same basis as the other members of the medical staff, and his contributions to the discussions may often be most illuminating.

Hospitals are protected against unskilled technicians if they adopt the standards formulated by the American Registry of Radiological Technicians of the Radiological Society of North America. Rapid development in this field has broadened the scope of the technician's duties and responsibilities, and the limitation of employment to those who are registered is a necessary safeguard.

Medical Department. In the medical division of the hospital, progress in medical science plays an important rôle. The medical department of the hospital in its functioning is closely related to the various laboratory, x-ray, nursing, dietary, and other services. This department has been encouraged to take advantage of every new development in scientific procedure and technical equipment. Consequently, it presents one of the most favorable aspects of the hospital, usually being well organized, highly specialized, and properly correlated with other departments.

In the larger hospitals it is becoming customary to form special departments in which patients suffering from the more common diseases are treated. The subdivisions of medicine which usually govern departmentalization are: gastro-intestinal diseases; diseases of metabolism; diseases of the heart; diseases of the lungs; diseases of the endocrine glands; nervous and mental diseases; and communicable diseases.

Laboratory, x-ray, nursing, dietary, and other services should be under expert supervision and thoroughly equipped to furnish every possible aid in diagnosis, treatment, and care. It is most desirable that the internist be frequently consulted by the general surgeon and the surgical specialist in order that as complete a knowledge as possible of the condition of the patient may be gained before operation is attempted. This practice should be encouraged in all hospitals.

Surgical Department. Commendable zeal has been shown in the endeavor to keep the facilities and equipment of the surgical department up to the very latest standards. Air conditioning and better lighting have been especially effective in facilitating the work of the surgeon. Sterilizing procedures have been improved with the aid of the research work of engineers and manufacturers of equipment. Surgical technique is subject to as many changes and improvements as are the physical factors in the operating room. Committees are frequently appointed to evaluate technique and procedures, and revision of practices often follows their recommendations.

The choice of assistants at operations is often given insufficient consideration. Nurses should not be permitted to act as first assistants. Neither should the referring physician be allowed to administer the anesthetic or assist at the operation unless he is qualified, as it is not in the best interests of the patient for him to do so. Sometimes such assistance is used to furnish a subterfuge for fee splitting. The operating surgeon should realize that assistance at operations furnishes the only opportunity for the recent medical graduate to acquire practical experience, and this, with other considerations involving the welfare of the patient, obligates the hospital to allow only qualified graduates of medicine to act as first assistants at surgical operations.

The necessity of having to evaluate constantly the work of members of the surgical staff, and to investigate thoroughly all applicants who seek to do surgery, probably furnishes the major problem of the surgical staff and hospital administration at the present time. Defenses must constantly be set up and maintained against incompetent surgery. Many of these may have value aside from this object, in that they furnish the hospital valuable records on diagnoses, postoperative results, consultations, conferences, pathological findings, and autopsies. They also operate to raise the general standard of the work performed by submitting it to a closer analysis.

Graduate Training for Surgery. The primary object of the American College of Surgeons since it was founded has been the elevation of the practice of surgery. All activities of the College are closely allied with this purpose, among them the subject of graduate training for surgery which has received continued consideration during the past seven years by committees appointed by the Board of Regents to study the problem. The field representatives of the College have investigated the facilities available for graduate training in various hospitals of the United States and Canada.

During the 1937 Hospital Standardization survey, special attention was directed to the subject of opportunities for graduate training for surgery, not only in teaching hospitals but also in the larger non-teaching institutions. A considerable amount of valuable information has been assembled.

The recent change in requirements for fellowship in the College makes it incumbent on all who will have graduated from an approved medical school after January 1, 1938, and who desire to apply for fellowship in the American College of Surgeons, to have had at least three years' training in an acceptable hospital or hospitals. Two years of this training must be in general surgery or the surgical specialty in which the applicant wishes to qualify. This constitutes basic training in the eight years or more following graduation, prior to the time the applicant is eligible for consideration for fellowship.

With increasing frequency the College is asked for information on graduate training for surgery, and in view of the universal demand for better preparation for the practice of surgery, the College must be in possession of such information as will be helpful to Fellows, prospective Fellows, and Junior Candidates.

Fracture Service. Probably in no type of case has response to improved methods of management been so evident as in fractures. The Committee on Fractures of the American College of Surgeons, with a view to assuring that all patients receive the benefits of the new practices, developed the Standard for Minimum Equipment for Fracture Treatment in Hospitals, to which all hospitals are urged to adhere.

The physical requirements have been quite generally adopted, but there still exists inadequate appreciation of the need for proper supervision. The service or ward patients are likely to be better handled than the pay or private patients because the former are usually directly under the control of surgeons specially qualified for the care of fractures, whereas the latter are under the care of private physicians who may not always be thoroughly informed on the latest procedures.

The hospital should insist that all fractures be placed under the supervision of a carefully selected member or committee of the surgical staff qualified in fracture work. This does not constitute infringement upon the professional relations between the physician and his patient, but aids them both by assuring more scientific care.

Traumatic Surgery. With an increasing proportion of cases coming under the traumatic classification, the modern hospital is forced to be prepared for instant concentration of its facilities and personnel upon emergency service. A well organized emergency or accident department is practically a necessity nowadays. Quick and expert handling and transportation of the patient are often decisive factors in saving life or minimizing the ill effects of the injury.

Recognizing this, most hospitals are complying with the Minimum Standard for Medical Services in Industry set by the American College of Surgeons. The standard stipulates that adequate diagnostic and therapeutic facilities must be available, that only surgeons who have proved their competence in the field of traumatic surgery be permitted to manage such cases, that accurate and complete medical records be kept on each traumatic case, and that a committee be appointed which shall be responsible for the supervision of traumatic surgery.

Obstetrical Department. Since, in hospitals with an open medical staff, privileges in the obstetrical department are usually extended to a large courtesy staff, it is most imperative that close and constant supervision be exercised over all the obstetrical work. Where any complication arises, immediate consultation should be had with a member of the obstetrical staff, that is, one recognized as an obstetrical specialist. Laxity on the part of hospitals in admitting outside practitioners not qualified to do obstetrics, and failure to supervise them, are no doubt responsible for many of the obstetrical morbidities and mortalities.

Practically each survey reveals more general adoption of the recommendations of the American College of Surgeons for the improvement of obstetrical service, and most gratifying progress has been manifested in the care of obstetrical patients in general hospitals. The American College of Surgeons has promulgated the Minimum Standard for Obstetrical Departments in Hospitals, and this involves accommodations with special emphasis on segregation, isolation of infected patients, facilities for diagnosis and treatment, administration, supervision, medical records, consultations, morbidity standard, medical staff conferences, and education of internes and nurses. Room for improvement is found in every one of these phases, but chiefly in the practices with respect to supervision, consultations, and obstetrical records, as revealed in the 1937 survey.

Major obstetrical procedures should never be carried out without consultation excepting when emergency forces action of this kind or when the physician in charge is a recognized obstetrician. Obstetrical records should be complete according to the accepted standard. They should include the history of pregnancy and not merely a record of the condition of the patient while in the hospital. They should also include pelvic measurements and indications for operative interference when such is done. Obstetrical records should be thoroughly reviewed and analyzed at departmental or general medical staff conferences and special study given to morbidities and mortalities. A morbidity standard as recommended by the Committee on Maternal Welfare should be adopted and used in all hospitals.

Department of Anesthesia. Practices in administering anesthetics are constantly changing. Never was it more important that hospitals recognize anesthesia as a distinct science, to which should be devoted a well organized department supervised by trained specialists with a medical background. New kinds of anesthetics are constantly being developed, each requiring varied technique in administering, producing somewhat different effects, and having qualities which particularly adapt them to certain conditions or individuals. The field is one which requires workers who are scientifically minded and who strive to keep abreast of late developments, qualifying themselves to act as consultants to the surgeon in choosing the anesthetic to be used.

Proper follow-up of post-anesthetic cases and the keeping of complete records on end-results have been seriously neglected. Progress in the science of anesthesia can be assured only if the effects of anesthetics upon the patient, eventual as well as immediate, are closely observed, recorded, and studied.

Department of Physical Therapy. Physical therapy has proved so advantageous in cases such as fractures, diseases of metabolism, and nervous disorders that almost every general hospital would find considerable use for such a department. This form of treatment frequently hastens convalescence, shortens the average days' stay in the hospital, and improves end results. Hospitals seeking guidance in the organization and management of a modern physical therapy service are advised to observe the requirements which have been laid down by the American College of Surgeons in a Minimum Standard for Physical Therapy Departments in Hospitals and explained in detail in the Manual of Hospital Standardization.

Acquaintance with the advantages of physical therapy has also demonstrated its dangers in unskilled hands. Knowledge of physiology and anatomy is essential for the person administering the treatment, otherwise harm may result. Besides special training in this field the director should be a medical graduate. It is because of lack of insistence upon this qualification that some disrepute still clings to the practice of physical therapy.

Oxygen Therapy. More knowledge and better apparatus have greatly enlarged the scope and value of oxygen therapy. It is now realized that previously the oxygen was administered too late in the disease to be of much advantage and it was not known how concentrated a mixture should be used or how steadily or how long it should be given. However, oxygen is now administered by three well recognized methods: (a) the intranasal catheter; (b) the oxygen tent; and (c) the oxygen room. It is given before the patient has developed a serious anoxemia and it is continued until well after the anoxemia is completely controlled. The air is at the same time properly conditioned with regard to temperature, moisture, and carbon dioxide content.

Oxygen therapy is controlled by the department of medicine in the hospital. A member of the medical staff who has knowledge and experience concerning the mechanics of the apparatus in use, as well as of the scientific principles of therapy and clinical manifestations, should have supervision of this service, assisted by a sufficient number of nurses who have been specially trained in the detail of technique.

Out-patient Department. Distinct opportunity for the hospital to lead in health promotion activities is provided by the out-patient department which now functions as an integral part of the service of an increasing number of institutions. The hospital shouldering the responsibility of supplying such service is striking at the roots of disease, for, in general, the patients so served are in earlier stages than those who seek direct admittance to hospitals. The contact often gained with the families of patients provides opportunity for preventive measures where there is danger of contagion or where symptoms of diseases not yet active are observed in other members of the family.

Without any great additional expenditure for equipment, the hospital can, through the out-patient department, augment the usefulness of its diagnostic and therapeutic facilities. It is an unnecessary expense to operate an out-patient department as a separate institution, though this is still done by a few hospitals. Under such a plan duplication of personnel and equipment is entailed, and out-patients are likely to be deprived of some of the advantages that they would enjoy if the entire scientific resources of the hospital were made available to them.

Competent supervision is as essential in this department as it is for in-patients because, actually, more experience is needed for the diagnosis of pathological conditions in their early stages than when they are far advanced. It is also just as necessary that the nursing staff and non-professional personnel in the department be as highly qualified as it is in other divisions of the institution. Out-patient records should be compiled with equal care and should be subjected to the same review and analysis at medical staff conferences as hospital records, and should be an accurate index of the efficiency and competency of the department. They should be so filed that if later the patient enters the in-patient department of the institution, his out-patient record will provide a complete, accurate history as preliminary to the new medical record. In its surveys of hospitals the American College of Surgeons has found a tendency to slight records in the out-patient department and they are frequently brief and lacking in essential information. This is because there is often more work in the out-patient department than the personnel can conveniently handle at the time of the clinic.

Attention is directed to the Minimum Standard for Out-patient Departments in Hospitals which has been adopted after extensive study and application. The requirements are described in the Manual of Hospital Standardization. Particular attention is directed to the requirement that medical social workers be included in the personnel. It is most desirable in out-patient work that specially trained persons make a complete social case study of each applicant for treatment.

Autopsies. The proportion of autopsies to mortalities in hospitals generally remains lower than it should be. Some have less than the minimum 15 per cent required of institutions approved for training internes by the American Medical Association. Others, with a better conception of the benefits which may accrue to medical science and humanity through this means are successful in obtaining a high percentage, a few recording as high as 90 per cent.

The educational possibilities of the autopsy are many: the changes in body tissues produced by disease may be studied; a fuller understanding of symptoms as related to pathology may be obtained; obscure diseases may be detected; errors and omissions in diagnoses may be discovered; a better appraisal of the clinical work is assured; advancement is made in the scientific knowledge of the practicing physician, the resident, the interne, the medical student, the research worker, and in some cases, nurses in training who are permitted to see the pathological findings as a means of furthering their education.

A satisfactory incidence of autopsies in hospitals cannot be obtained without the adoption of a definite routine procedure. Interest of the medical staff in the findings from autopsies can best be maintained through the holding of clinicopathological conferences in which gross and microscopic specimens are shown and correlated with the clinical history.

Pharmacy Service. The survey of hospitals shows that drug administration is not given the consideration it deserves in many hospitals, notwithstanding the fact that the pharmaceutical service is so extensively used. To insure the safety and efficiency of the pharmacy service, the American College of Surgeons urges compliance with the Minimum Standard for Pharmacies in Hospitals which appears in the latest Manual of Hospital Standardization.

This standard stipulates, in brief, that the hospital shall have either the full time of a graduate registered pharmacist or shall receive pharmaceutical service from an approved nearby pharmacy; shall appoint a pharmacy committee composed of members from the several divisions of the medical staff, the pharmacist acting as secretary of the committee; shall maintain an adequate pharmaceutical reference library; shall use drugs, chemicals, and pharmaceutical preparations of recognized quality. The hospital shall delegate to the pharmacist supervision over the routine preparation of injectible medication and sterilization of all preparations he himself prepares, the routine manufacture of pharmaceuticals, the dispensing of drugs, chemicals, and pharmaceutical preparations, the filling and labeling of all drug containers issued to nursing units from which medication is to be administered, a semi-monthly inspection of all pharmaceutical supplies on nursing units, the maintenance of an approved stock of antidotes, the dispensing of all narcotic drugs and a perpetual inventory of them, specifications for purchase of drugs, chemicals, and pharmaceutical preparations used in the treatment of patients, specifications for purchase and storage of biologicals and all operations wherein a special knowledge of pharmacy, including a ready knowledge of weights and measures in all systems, is necessary.

Ambulance Service. Transportation of patients to and from the hospital should be considered a part of hospital service, and when it is not provided directly it should be closely supervised. The manner in which patients are handled in conveying them to the hospital, especially those who have been in accidents and have suffered fractures or other serious injuries, may have considerable bearing upon the outcome of the case. Efficient ambulance service presupposes adequate equipment, trained personnel, and the necessary emergency appliances.

The management of each hospital and a committee of the medical staff should co-operate actively with organizations conducting ambulance service in order to insure that the essential equipment is provided and that the ambulance personnel is properly trained. Whether the ambulance service is private or public in character, it should conform to a definite code of regulations.

Nursing Service. In most hospitals a conscientious attempt is being made to assure a sufficient number of properly trained and supervised nurses to provide an adequate ratio to the patients being cared for, and to furnish ample and convenient facilities and supplies for the nursing service.

In hospitals which are teaching institutions, it is extremely difficult to correlate the educational function with the practical service function in such a way that the student nurse will be assured adequate training and yet the care of the patient be of a high standard. Constant emphasis must, therefore, be placed upon supervision over all procedures assigned to student nurses. Some hospitals should not undertake teaching responsibility, since their resources and the scope of their service do not justify it, but should concentrate their efforts upon care of the patient.

Schools of nursing are often considered a liability to the hospital having less than a daily average census of 50 patients, as such hospitals do not have a sufficient range of clinical material nor can they supply the facilities to give their students a well balanced training. Graduate nursing may be found to be more economical than undergraduate, especially in the smaller hospital.

By limiting the number of students, hospitals conducting schools of nursing have been able to provide better teaching, and the nursing care has been improved by the greater proportion of graduate nurses maintained, thus stabilizing the service. Many schools, particularly in the smaller hospitals, were closed during the depression when an over-supply of nurses existed, and many of these have not been reopened.

No rigid rule can be made governing the proper ratio of nurses to patients, as this is a variable factor in different institutions. Each hospital needs to study its own nursing load and determine the factors which govern a proper ratio of nurses to patients. Recent studies in certain hospitals show that on the basis of a 48 hour week, the ratio of one graduate nurse to 3.5 patients is necessary and that the ratio of student nurses to patients is 1 to 3, but this is merely suggestive, as the ratio would vary with the physical arrangement of the hospital, extent of standardization of technique and supplies, convenience of facilities, and many other factors.

Dietary Department. Diet is no longer the incidental feature that it formerly was in hospital care. Surveys reveal greater effort constantly expended in placing food service on the same scientific basis as nursing, or drugs, or radium therapy. Much ground remains for extension of knowledge in dietetics and its application to specific cases. Great advancement has already been made since the American College of Surgeons commenced the survey of hospitals and outlined a Minimum Standard for Dietary Departments in Hospitals along the lines recommended by the American Dietetic Association.

Dietitians are now better trained and their departments are better organized, with improved facilities and equipment provided for food preparation and distribution. A competent graduate dietitian should be in charge of the dietary department of every hospital. Such a person is qualified to consult with the physician, as well as to carry out in detail the diet instructions he gives without elaboration. Co-operation between the dietitian and the laboratory worker is essential and mutually beneficial.

The dietitian is responsible for the efficient and economical administration of the food service, which involves a knowledge of the principles of purchasing. She is also a teacher, not only of student dietitians but of nurses and medical students who require ground work in dietetics and the principles of diet therapy. Her teaching function also extends to patients and to employees of the hospital, who will profit by learning proper dietary habits. This department is utilized by the progressive hospital to extend its influence in promotion of health and the prevention of disease. The dietitian is encouraged to appear before public meetings and to co-operate with schools and other agencies active in health education throughout the community.

Medical Social Service. The social viewpoint is necessary if the hospital is to fulfill its obligation to its patients and to its community. The creation of a medical social service department is a decisive step in organizing, and thus rendering effectual, efforts directed toward the integrating of medical service with other social welfare movements. Opportunity for such effort is especially great in those hospitals which have out-patient departments. A new conception of the hospital is promoted in the public consciousness when it becomes apparent that those administering it have a broader appreciation of their responsibility than is involved in the physical care of the patient alone while he is directly in their hands.

Follow-up of discharged patients is one of the important responsibilities which the medical social service department is well qualified to undertake. Having investigated, at the time of the patient's entry into the hospital, his application for treatment in the out-patient department, and his financial and social status for the guidance of the business office, and having collaborated with the physician in ascertaining facts which aid in diagnosis and treatment, the medical social service worker becomes so familiar with the needs of the case that she is superbly equipped to help the patient to care for himself properly afterward. She can also report conditions and developments promptly to the hospital and to the physician. She can discover what factors in the patient's environment may be acting against his recovery or improvement, and can often see that measures are taken to remedy them, or can help him adjust himself to these factors. Thus the efforts of the hospital to restore health to the patient which might otherwise be nullified are given more permanent value.

Surveys disclose that far too few hospitals are awake to the full possibilities of medical social service, and a great many are still making no distinct provision for it. Since social factors so seriously affect the patient's physical condition, this service should be rendered in every hospital.

The Small Hospital. In formulating the minimum requirements for hospitals, the American College of Surgeons kept the small hospital having between 25 and 50 beds constantly in mind, so that there would be no danger of excluding it because of provisions beyond its ability to adopt. Size is not necessarily an indication of superiority in hospital service. The small hospital has some advantages in the way of flexibility and closer relationships. Its disadvantages are of such a nature that with proper management they may readily be overcome. Problems of organization, specialization, and trained personnel in every department, and adequate physical equipment to handle all types of cases, are more difficult to solve than in the large hospital. The Minimum Standard for Hospitals is such, however, that with careful planning and ingenuity every requirement can be met.

The small hospital cannot have the specialized departments and facilities of the large one, but it can study its own needs, and after providing for those which are most important, arrange for supplementary services from outside sources. By co-operative planning, several small hospitals could supplement each other's facilities in such a way that the net result would be a community hospital service of a most scientific and superior quality. This might be effected with personnel as well as with equipment, through sharing the services of thoroughly trained dietitians, medical social service workers, pharmacists, anesthetists, therapists, radiologists, laboratory and x-ray technicians. The services of visiting pathologists, radiologists, and other specialists might be utilized, or members of the medical staff might train themselves for special supervisory duties. Affiliation with a larger hospital may remedy the deficiencies which the small hospital cannot otherwise overcome. However, every hospital, regardless of size, should have at least a small practical laboratory and portable x-ray unit for immediate use.

The American College of Surgeons believes that the small hospital, especially in rural areas, is doing an important service and in most instances performing it well under the circumstances. Encouragement is needed, however, and the College is ready to assist in every way it can in helping the administrators of the smaller institutions to meet the requirements for approval.

APPROVED HOSPITALS OF THE UNITED STATES, CANADA, AND OTHER COUNTRIES

The List of Approved Hospitals as of January 1, 1938, for the United States, Canada, and Other Countries follows. The asterisk (*) indicates provisional approval, or that the hospitals so designated have accepted the minimum requirements for hospitals as laid down by the American College of Surgeons and are endeavoring to carry them out, but for lack of time or other acceptable reasons have not been able to complete the details of these requirements incident to full approval. A small number of hospitals has been dropped from the Approved List this year or lowered in rating because of failure to meet the requirements. A few hospitals have not been rated pending the solution of acute problems affecting their eligibility for approval at the time of publishing this list.

MEDICAL, SURGICAL, AND HOSPITAL EQUIPMENT, INSTRUMENTS, AND SUPPLIES WHICH ARE APPROVED BY THE COLLEGE

During the past five years the American College of Surgeons has pursued its program of approving medical, surgical, and hospital equipment, instruments, and supplies. In response to the many demands of the various groups working in the hospitals which are under survey, the College has concerned itself with the fundamental and practical principle that the equipment, instrument, or article shall assure proper service to the patient and shall measure up to the claims of the manufacturer. The College adheres to the principle of basing its approval on service to the patient, believing that therein lies the basic test for all products of this nature.

The standpoints from which the articles have been considered are as follows:

1. Adaptability to medical, surgical, and hospital needs.
2. Guarantee by the manufacturer to the purchaser as to the quality of the article.
3. Claims made in descriptive literature must be supported by evidence.

Manufacturers shall be permitted to use an identifying mark on such articles as secure the approval of the College, and in advertising matter pertaining thereto in ethical media directed exclusively to the medical and surgical profession and to hospitals.

The identifying mark authorized by the College will indicate to the prospective purchaser that the article bearing the mark is good and useful, and meets the claims of the manufacturer.

Application for approval may be directed to the American College of Surgeons by the manufacturer or, in the case of an imported article, by the authorized American agent. Each application should be accompanied by literature customarily used in describing the product to a prospective purchaser.

The following is a list of medical, surgical, and hospital equipment, instruments, and supplies, approved by the American College of Surgeons:

STANDARDIZATION OF SURGICAL DRESSINGS

SURGEONS, hospital executives, and operating room supervisors have for several years manifested special interest in the standardization of surgical dressings. Many attempts have been made in this direction.

In 1920 a concern which manufactured surgical dressings entered the field. This necessitated an attempt at standardization, and the project met with a marked degree of success. About the same time another manufacturer became interested. One of these firms designed a machine by means of which gauze was marketed in shapes and sizes ready to be folded into dressings; the other firm established a fellowship at the Mellon Institute in order to determine the possibility of simplification of sizes and types. Later, these two firms united their efforts and under the supervision of the American College of Surgeons systematized research was carried on to determine the most desirable quality, size, and shape. The results were announced by the College in 1930, this publication being the first authoritative work on the subject and the first formal attempt at standardization of surgical dressings. In 1931 the Division of Simplified Practice, Bureau of Standards of the United States Department of Commerce, approved the report, thereby making the standards authoritative. At the same time a committee was appointed to make further studies, to keep in touch with changing conditions, and to make such recommendations as might become advisable from time to time. The American College of Surgeons in its first Manual of Surgical Dressings included these recommendations, as well as information relative to manufacture, sterilization, storage, and other matters pertinent to the use of surgical dressings. In 1933 a preliminary report of the committee was presented to and approved by the American Hospital Association. It is thus that the movement for standardization of surgical dressings was initiated. The work has since been carried on through the co-operative activities of the American College of Surgeons, the American Hospital Association, and the Division of Simplified Practice, Bureau of Standards of the United States Department of Commerce.

The first survey of the hospital field by the American College of Surgeons revealed the fact that approximately 5,000 different shapes and sizes of dressings were in use in the United States and Canada and that 1,500 varieties of one type were used for practically the same purpose. While standardization should never be carried to the extent of stifling individuality, such extreme exercise of the rights and desires of the individual is unnecessary and, in the face of the inevitable increase in cost, is not justifiable. Mass production in either the individual hospital or in the field in general, is impossible under such conditions.

Standardization of surgical dressings simplifies procedure, thereby increasing the efficiency of both the surgeon and the nurse. Standardization reduces cost, whether the dressings are made locally or are purchased ready-made. Lack of uniformity necessitates a variety in sizes and shapes. This results in cutting greater varieties of sizes with smaller quantities of each. Economical cutting is impossible and the wastage of gauze and labor is increased. Folding never becomes routine and this slows down manufacture.

The use of standard dressings facilitates the sponge count. Both before and after use it is infinitely easier to count sponges which are always of the same size and shape than if there is a variety of sizes and shapes. The factor of error is thereby greatly decreased.

There are many arguments in favor of a rational standardization of surgical dressings and few against it. It must not be expected that standardization will be effected immediately or that it will remain permanent. A start has been made but much has yet to be done, and even after general standards have been determined, the development and advance in surgery will make revisions necessary from time to time.

At the present time there is little or no attempt at uniformity in the terminology used when speaking of even the most commonly used dressings. A piece of gauze used to cleanse a wound is called a sponge in one hospital, a wipe in another, and a flat in still another. In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the article to which reference is made, and to favor uniformity, the following terminology, with a statement of function and definition of characteristics, is adopted in this report:

CLASS A—SPONGES

Essential characteristics:

- a. Ability to absorb the greatest quantity in the shortest time.
- b. Ease of sterilization.
- c. Freedom from loose threads.
- d. Uniformity.
- e. Softness, to prevent trauma.
- f. Freedom from foreign substances.

CLASS B—ABDOMINAL PACKS

Function: To form a non-abrasive wall which will prevent intestines and abdominal or other organs from escaping into field of operation and to maintain body temperature during exposure of viscera.

Essential characteristics:

- a. Proper quality of mesh to provide adequate protection for the tissues.
- b. Ease of sterilization.
- c. Ability to retain solution.
- d. Freedom from loose threads.
- e. Softness.
- f. Low cost in order to allow frequent changing.
- g. Fineness of texture to favor reclamation.

CLASS C—STERILE GAUZE DRESSINGS

Essential characteristics:

- a. Proper quality of mesh to provide adequate protection of wound.
- b. Ease of sterilization.
- c. Ability to retain solution.
- d. Freedom from loose threads.
- e. Softness.
- f. Such composition as to favor even dissemination of drainage.
- g. Imperviousness of the outer layer.

CLASS D—PADS

Function: To absorb blood, pus, or other fluids that drain out of the incision or wound.

Essential characteristics:

- a. Ability to absorb the greatest quantity in the shortest time.
- b. Ability to hold drainage without leakage.
- c. Ease of sterilization.
- d. Weight.
- e. Even distribution of material.

TABLE I
STANDARDIZATION OF SURGICAL DRESSINGS

	4. Grade 2 Super	3.00
	5. Grade 2 Large	1.134
	6. Grade 2 Medium	0.32

³Ply varies in different parts.

⁴All pads are filled with cotton or cellulose. Pads D-1, D-2, D-3, and D-4 also have a moisture-proof layer. Sizes of fillers and moisture-proof layers for pads D-1 to D-4 inclusive, are 16 by 12, 10 by 8, 8 by 8, and 8 by 5 inches respectively, and for filler for pads D-5 and D-6, 9¾ by 3 inches.

⁵Grade refers to cotton used: Grade 1 is long fiber cotton, commonly known as "eye" cotton; and grade 2 is medium fiber cotton such as is used for general purposes in hospitals.

CLASS E—COTTON BALLS

Function: To absorb blood, pus or other fluids during operation or dressing of wound and to afford pressure for hemorrhage.

Essential characteristics:

- a. Ability to absorb the greatest quantity in the shortest time.
- b. Ease of sterilization.
- c. Freedom from loose threads.
- d. Uniformity.
- e. Softness.
- f. Freedom from foreign substances.
- g. Weight.

CLASS F—GAUZE DRAINS SUCH AS CIGARETTE DRAINS AND TAMPONS

Function: To serve as a wick to draw blood, pus, or other fluids out of wound to a dressing at the surface, and permit of free drainage to keep the wound open through the formation of a temporary sinus.

Essential characteristics:

- a. Absorbency and capillarity necessary to draw drainage to surface.
- b. Freedom from "raw ends" or loose threads.
- c. Ease of sterilization.
- d. Softness.
- e. Smoothness.
- f. Flexibility.
- g. Medicated (petrolatum, hard and soft paraffin) in certain instances.

CLASS G—BANDAGES

Function: To hold dressings in place or to provide slight pressure or support.

Essential characteristics:

- a. Sufficient tensile strength to provide maximum required (this can be measured).
- b. Elasticity.
- c. Freedom from loose threads.
- d. Flexibility.
- e. Even wrapping.
- f. Continuity of fabric in each bandage.
- g. Possibility of sterilization if desired.

CLASS H—BINDERS

Function: To provide pressure or support and hold dressings in place.

Essential characteristics:

- a. Tensile strength sufficient to provide maximum required support (greater strength required than in gauze bandages—this can be measured).
- b. Soft and non-irritating.
- c. Elasticity, insofar as it can be secured without too great sacrifice of tensile strength.
- d. Ability to withstand repeated laundering.

A further classification of dressings for specialized uses has not been considered inasmuch as it is found that the standard dressings included in the aforementioned classes will quite satisfactorily meet all of the needs of the ordinary or special cases.

SECTIONAL MEETINGS

FIVE state and provincial sectional meetings of the American College of Surgeons were held during 1937:

Date	City	Participating States and Provinces:
February 3, 4, 5.....	Atlanta.....	Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee.
March 24, 25.....	Edmonton...	Alberta, Manitoba, Saskatchewan.
March 31, April 1, 2.	Seattle.....	Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington, British Columbia.
April 7, 8, 9.....	Denver.....	Arizona, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Western Texas, Utah, Wyoming.
May 20, 21.....	Halifax.....	New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island.

The meetings were eminently successful in every respect and created unusual interest and good will. In each of the cities where the meetings were held the committees on local arrangements performed their duties to the utmost satisfaction and perfection. These committees worked in close co-operation with the central office of the College according to a well defined plan for conducting sectional meetings.

Attendance. The attendance at all of the meetings was excellent as is shown by the number who registered; but the registration did not always indicate the actual number who were present at the various sessions. Despite the fact that the southern meeting at Atlanta came at the time of the flood disaster and that a considerable portion of the section represented in the meeting was threatened, there was a gratifying attendance. A total of 1,716 doctors was registered at the five meetings, with 475 cities represented. The total number of hospital representatives registered was 653.

Three-Day and Two-Day Meetings. The meetings held in Atlanta for the south, Seattle for the Pacific northwest, and Denver for the Rocky Mountain states, were of three days' duration, thus permitting a broadening of the clinical and scientific programs. In Edmonton and Halifax the committees on local arrangements preferred the two-day type of meeting, and this proved highly successful though there was a feeling that the three-day meeting might have been more advantageous.

Exhibits. At the Atlanta, Seattle, and Denver meetings the scientific and technical exhibits were not only extensive but interesting and instructive. The scientific exhibits were arranged by the committees on local arrangements.

Clinics. Well organized operative and non-operative clinics were arranged in approved local hospitals during the first and second mornings of the three-day meetings, and the first morning of the two-day meetings. The morning of the last day in each city was devoted chiefly to two major clinics—cancer and fracture, in which some of the visiting surgeons participated. The proper correlation of the operative and non-operative clinics made them of greater interest and value to those who were in attendance. There was an abundance of clinical material, and through the efforts of the Fellows of the College, their assistants, and the local profession generally, this part of the program was of unusually high order throughout.

Scientific Sessions. At each sectional meeting the afternoons and evenings, with the exception of the first afternoon and the last evening, were devoted to well planned scientific sessions with a program presented chiefly by the visiting surgeons. This allowed for three major scientific sessions each in general surgery and in eye, ear, nose and throat surgery during the three-day meetings, and two sessions at each of the two-day meetings. The large attendance at each scientific session attested to the interest and high quality of the papers and discussions.

Medical Motion Pictures. An interesting daily program of approved medical motion pictures demonstrating surgical diagnosis and technique was conducted at various periods during each of the meetings. These pictures were highly appreciated by the audiences and it is quite evident that there is an increasing interest in medical motion pictures which clearly demonstrate surgical technique. In a number of instances the meeting rooms, though large, were inadequate to accommodate the audiences.

Hospital Conferences. The hospital conferences embraced eight sessions during the three-day meetings and five sessions during the two-day meetings. At these sessions an effort was made to build up a program which would include all problems of administration and standardization, and which finally would have the character and the result of an intensive institute. These conferences afforded ample opportunity for the presentation of excellent papers and discussions and of splendidly arranged departmental demonstrations in local hospitals. The panel round table conferences and the demonstrations were of particular interest to all who were present and these sessions were very generously attended.

Community Health Meetings. Community Health Meetings were held during each sectional meeting, and each was attended by a large and representative audience ranging from 2,000 to 4,000. In Edmonton and Halifax, despite arrangements which were made for overflow meetings, several hundred people were turned away. Programs of particular interest to the lay public were presented by the visiting speakers. The deep appreciation of these meetings has been manifested by the numerous letters which have come subsequently to the central office, not only from lay people but from the medical profession at large and the lay press. These meetings have been of great value in stimulating appreciation of scientific medicine.

Other Meetings En Route. A group of the visiting doctors spent Monday, March 22, in Winnipeg, en route to Edmonton. In the morning a surgical clinic was held at the Winnipeg General Hospital. A luncheon at the Manitoba Club was tendered to the visiting Fellows of the College by the Fellows of the College in Winnipeg. In the evening the group was entertained at dinner at the Manitoba Club by the Surgeons' Club of Winnipeg, following which there was a large meeting of the general medical profession at the medical college. Opportunity was afforded at both the luncheon and the dinner for remarks on College activities by members of the visiting group. The reception by the Fellows in Winnipeg was an extremely cordial one.

On Monday, March 29, in Vancouver, the visiting group was entertained at a luncheon by the British Columbia Medical Association. The Fellows of the College in Vancouver entertained the visiting group at a delightful dinner at the Vancouver Club, and in the evening a program was presented by the visitors.

The Surgical Club of Tacoma was holding its annual meeting on Saturday, April 3, and the College group of speakers stopped over in Tacoma to join in the program. The visiting speakers were the guests of the club at luncheon and at dinner. In the afternoon a scientific program was presented, and in the evening a capacity audience met in a church for a public meeting which was arranged under the auspices of the Surgical Club, but the program was presented by the group of visiting speakers.

Extramural Activities. Many talks were arranged to be given by the visiting speakers before luncheon clubs, business and professional organizations, and other groups. These addresses dealt with the progress of medical science, the prevention of disease, hospital care, and special health topics which are of interest to the public. In the various cities assemblies were arranged in the senior high schools and certain of the colleges where talks of particular interest were given to those groups by the visitors. An excellent radio broadcasting program consisting of lay talks of fifteen minutes' duration was arranged in each of the five cities. All of these presentations were of special interest to the laity and had an important effect in arousing their interest in scientific medicine, prevention of disease, and the institutional care of the sick.

Annual Meeting. The annual meeting of the Fellows for the states and provinces represented in each section was held on the afternoon of the first day. At this meeting the activities of the College were briefly reviewed by Dr. George Crile, Chairman of the Board of Regents, by other Regents present, and by the Associate Directors of the College. These activities evoked much interest on the part of the Fellows.

Credentials Committee Meetings. In each city, such state and provincial credentials committee meetings were held as were geographically convenient, to consider applicants for fellowship in the College. These meetings were well attended and the members of each committee did their work diligently and thoroughly.

Speakers. The following speakers attended one, several, or all of the meetings:

MEDICAL MOTION PICTURES

WILL H. HAYS, Esq., New York, Honorary President
J. BENTLEY SQUIER, New York, Chairman
PHILEMON E. TRUESDALE, Fall River, Secretary
W. W. CHIPMAN, Montreal	BOWMAN C. CROWELL, Chicago
GEORGE CRILE, Cleveland	MALCOLM T. MACEACHERN, Chicago
CHARLES H. MAYO, Rochester

The study of medical motion pictures was undertaken by the American College of Surgeons in 1926, and the importance of this means of disseminating medical knowledge and of teaching surgery is now generally recognized.

Motion pictures present a valuable supplement to the classroom lecture, to the demonstration, or to the thesis. Every film which is produced should comply with specific fundamental requirements along the following lines:

1. Selection of the subject matter.
2. Preparation of the scenario.
3. Illustration by animation or drawings.
4. Photography.
5. Ethics.
6. Teaching value.

The Committee on Medical Motion Pictures of the American College of Surgeons desires to review medical and surgical films. Many pictures have been received, and as they are reviewed a card catalogue is being compiled for the purpose of recording detailed data concerning medical and surgical films of high quality. This digest enables the College to supply information regarding films which are available on a given subject, where they may be obtained, and whether or not they are satisfactory for the purpose desired.

Films received at the College are reviewed by a committee consisting of recognized authorities on the subject matter portrayed. Films which meet basic standards from the standpoint of professional technique, general teaching value, and photographic quality are approved by the College, and the author of the film is authorized to insert a legend which reads:

Passed by the
American College of Surgeons.

Principles which guide the College in evaluating medical motion pictures have been formulated by the Committee on Medical Motion Pictures and are given herewith.

A list of medical motion picture films which meet the basic standards of the College will be found on subsequent pages. Information regarding any of the films (including rental charges and conditions under which the films may be procured) may be secured from the individual or organization responsible for the particular film. The College itself does not maintain a film library, but is ready and willing to disseminate information pertaining to medical motion picture films.

The College recently produced a film entitled "That Man May Live," which portrays progress in the medical care of man and animals, and emphasizes the debt of man to research conducted on animals and the necessity for its continuance.

Another film which is distributed by the College is entitled "Good Hospital Care." It gives a brief outline of the growth and development of hospital standardization, and a complete demonstration of the procedure in an approved hospital in arriving at the diagnosis and rendering the best possible care to the patient.

GUIDING PRINCIPLES IN EVALUATING MEDICAL MOTION PICTURE FILMS

PROFESSIONAL STANDPOINT:

1. Subject matter.
2. Method of presentation.
3. Selection of case for the procedure indicated.
4. Relevancy of subject matter to material presented.
5. Technique.
6. Teaching value.
7. Sacrifice of efficient service to the patient to photographic quality.
8. Originality of presentation.
9. Possible better portrayal of subject matter by other existing films.
10. Elements introduced.
11. Ethics.
12. Distribution:
 - a. Profession in general.
 - b. Specialists only.
 - c. Medical students.
 - d. Hospitals.
 - e. Lay public.
13. Suggestions for improving the film.

MECHANICAL STANDPOINT:

1. Method of presentation.
2. Logical sequence.
3. Photographic quality.
4. Clearness of the operating field.
5. Illumination.
6. Terminology.
7. Legends.
8. Possibility of better portrayal of subject matter through the following methods:
 - a. Animation.
 - b. Diagrams.
 - c. Drawings.
 - d. X-rays.
9. Quality of:
 - a. Animation.
 - b. Diagrams.
 - c. Drawings.
 - d. X-rays.
10. Unnecessary duplication.
11. Condition of the film.
12. Date of production.
13. Suggestions for improving the film.

The Library of the American College of Surgeons, organized in 1921, comprises a collection of some twenty-five thousand volumes: Current textbooks, journal files, and historical works. These reference works are supplemented by a collection of more than ninety thousand reprints.

The nucleus of the Library consisted of the volumes which had comprised the library of the late Dr. John B. Murphy. To this collection have been added journal files and individual volumes from the library of the late Dr. Albert J. Ochsner; eighteenth and nineteenth century volumes in French and English from the collection of the late Dr. William McDowell Mastin of Mobile, Alabama; the comprehensive collection of the late Dr. H. W. Mills of San Bernardino, California, on the subject of ecchinococcus cysts; the extensive journal files from the library of the late Dr. Albert Vander Veer of Albany, New York; and the historical works and current monographs which Dr. H. Winnett Orr of Lincoln, Nebraska, has assembled. A collection of two hundred and fifty volumes in the field of otolaryngology has been presented by Dr. Otto Joachim of New Orleans. A gift of fifty volumes of recent journals from Dr. Lawrence L. Iseman of Chicago has likewise been added.

In addition to the outstanding gifts above mentioned, Fellows and friends of the College have contributed many valuable smaller collections and individual volumes, some consisting of treatises of historic interest and others of current reference works, all being valuable aids in the pieces of research which are being carried on in the Department.

The College Library has likewise been made a depository for manuscripts. Representative of this type of contribution is the monograph of Dr. Joseph McFarland who has made a thorough study of Dysontogenetic and Mixed Tumors of the Urogenital Region. In publishing this article it was not possible to include the charts, graphs, and analysis of cases which formed a portion of this study and the extensive bibliography (513 titles and references) upon which it was based. Dr. McFarland has, therefore, presented a complete copy of this study to the Library of the American College of Surgeons and one to the College of Physicians in Philadelphia that this material may be available to anyone studying this problem. It is hoped that other members of the profession will consider the College Library a suitable means for the preservation and distribution of similar studies.

A second collection of manuscripts has been undertaken during the past year. This includes signed papers of significance to the annals of the College. This group of manuscripts should include presidential and fellowship addresses, orations, and other addresses presented at the Clinical Congresses. It is hoped that officers and guest speakers will co-operate in the collection of this material in the archives of the College.

The College reprint collection is divided into two sections: The first, the Fellow file, includes the reprints of articles by Fellows of the College arranged alphabetically by author and is representative of the contributions each man has made to the progress of surgery. The second division also includes the publications of Fellows and friends of the College. In this section, however, the reprints are classified by subject that they may be readily accessible for loan when requests for data upon specific subjects are received. Although this loan file, the College Package Library, is extensive and representative of the best in the surgical literature, it is not complete with respect to any one subject. In order that it may be as comprehensive as possible, Fellows are urged to continue their contribution of reprints and of unbound journals, when feasible, placing the College Library upon their mailing list to receive duplicate copies of their writings as published.

The value of this collection of reference works and reprints, especially in so far as the individual surgeon located at a distance from the College is concerned, is measured by the services offered by the Department of Literary Research. This department consists of a staff of workers equipped to select reprints on medical and surgical subjects, compile bibliographies, and prepare abstracts and translations. If reprints only are desired, these are supplied without charge in Package Library form; the number of articles sent in response to each request varies depending upon the extent and availability of the articles written upon the subject. The use of this loan material lessens in considerable measure the time expended by an investigator in making his research.

His time may be conserved, likewise, by entrusting the compilation of bibliographies and translations to this department. Trained workers in each of these fields, assisted by accurate typists, compose a staff of workers equipped to care for any research problem in the sphere of medical literature. Whether the bibliography be a simple one covering only the literature of recent years and requiring the checking of references from a single heading in the indices, or more comprehensive, requiring the selection of titles listed under numerous anatomical divisions, this experienced staff can be depended upon to do the work with a minimum expenditure of time and money. The complete and accurate citations furnished by these workers, accompanied by the free loan material in the College Package Library, form an excellent basis for the surgeon's investigation. When this portion of his study has been completed, he may select from the bibliography additional articles to be abstracted or translated.

Whether he requires the abstract of an English article, or a translation or abstract from the foreign literature (including the German, French, Italian, Spanish, Rumanian, Hungarian, Russian, or Scandinavian languages), or a series of translations, the staff is equipped to care for his request. Each year, many requests for research are received, some of them being continuous surveys which have carried through the years. Whether the material is to be utilized as a background for laboratory experiments, for the study of an unusual clinical case, or to assist in reviewing an extensive series of cases in connection with the preparation of a scientific paper, the department is ready to be of service. Its purpose is to make the best in the medical and surgical literature of the world available to any member of the profession, whatever his need and wherever he may be located, and to do this expeditiously and economically.

COMMITTEE ON THE LIBRARY

At the annual meeting of the Board of Regents in 1935 a Committee on the Library was appointed. The function of this Committee is to advise and assist the Librarian in the further development of this department of the College. The present committee consists of approximately fifty members, selected because of their marked interest in books and libraries, and, in particular, in the Library of the American College of Surgeons. As representatives of the various specialties within the profession and of the widely distributed areas in which they reside, it is anticipated that these members, serving as a unit, will contribute effectively to the development of the Library.

RARE-BOOK ROOM

The beautiful room on the main floor of the College building, which served the former residents as a library, has been equipped with suitable lighting that the rare volumes which form an important part of the College collection may be properly displayed. The present collection includes volumes from the historical group presented by Dr. H. Winnett Orr of Lincoln, Nebraska, and single volumes, as well as smaller collections, presented by individual Fellows.

In this room, also, are displayed some of the case records of Fellows to whom certificates of honor and life fellowships in the College have been awarded since 1930. Fellows passing through Chicago are urged to visit the College headquarters in order to inspect and enjoy this very interesting and beautiful room.

PORTRAITS AND MEMORIALS IN THE LIBRARY

The Albert J. Ochsner Memorial Room contains the collection of photographs assembled by the late Dr. Ochsner, a founder, treasurer, and past president of the College, as well as mementos of his life and work. Portraits of Dr. and Mrs. Elijah Dewey Harmon, physician and surgeon at Fort Dearborn in 1830, and a portrait of Mrs. Maud Mellish Wilson, who has done so much for the advancement of literary and editorial standards in medicine and surgery, have been received. Mementos of historical significance—the mortar and pestle of the early physician and the medicine chest of the venturesome surgeon who accompanied the early French explorers along the Mississippi—these and other items of historical significance have been fittingly placed in the Library where it is hoped they will serve as an incentive for further gifts of a similar nature.

The Library has likewise a small but interesting collection of bookplates. To extend this collection, the librarian would be glad to receive two copies of the personal bookplate of each Fellow of the College and would also appreciate having such bookplates placed in any monographs presented to the Library. To these volumes, further, would be added the College bookplate which affords an opportunity for the signature of the donor.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS—OCTOBER 25-29, 1937

THE twenty-seventh annual session of the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons was held in Chicago during the week of October 25 to 29, 1937, with headquarters at the Stevens Hotel. The comprehensive program of operative clinics and demonstrations at fifty-three hospitals and five medical schools, planned by the surgeons of Chicago, provided a complete showing of their clinical activities in all departments of surgery and the specialties. The programs of the participating institutions were correlated so that the visiting surgeon could devote his time continuously to clinics dealing particularly with the subjects in which he was most interested. Special features of the clinical program included cancer clinics, which demonstrated the treatment of cancer by surgery, radium and x-ray; fracture clinics which presented modern methods in the treatment of fractures; and clinics in traumatic surgery which presented the newer methods of rehabilitation of the injured.

An outline of the programs which were arranged during the week and the address of the retiring president, Dr. Eugene H. Pool, may be found on subsequent pages herewith. Reports of special committees of the College are given on preceding pages. A special number of the Official Journal, SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS, to be published in February, 1938, will contain the addresses on general surgery and surgery of the eye, ear, nose and throat which were presented at the evening meetings, and the addresses given at the five afternoon symposia. Supplementary data will be included in the January, 1938, BULLETIN of the College; and abstracts of papers presented before the Hospital Conferences will also be printed in the BULLETIN.

The following surgeons from countries outside of Canada and the United States were guests at the 1937 Clinical Congress:

EUGENE P. DE BELLARD, Venezuela
INNES W. BREBNER, South Africa
ROBERT L. GIRDWOOD, South Africa

THE COLLEGE AND THE CULTURAL ASPECTS OF SURGERY

EUGENE H. POOL, M.D., New York, New York

On November 15, 1912, it was voted that an American College of Surgeons be organized. Peculiar significance, therefore, attaches itself to this meeting by reason of the fact that it is the quarter century mark in the history of this College.

The general objective of its founders was the elevation of the standard of surgery by means of the following specific measures:

1. Development of a comprehensive association to enable visiting surgeons to see surgical confrères at work and to discuss with them problems of practical surgery.
2. Enrollment of competent and ethical surgeons.
3. Opposition to the barter in patients by fee splitting.
4. Protection of the public from incompetent, dishonest, and unnecessary surgery.
5. Improvement of hospitals and teaching institutions.

Notable progress has been made toward these goals. But it has not always been smooth going. There have been stumblings and uncertainties, criticisms and contests. Yet the College has survived and now holds an important place in and exerts a salutary influence upon American surgery. Its accomplishments and activities need not be reviewed save in so far as they suggest questions of policy for the present and future.

Surgical education looms up as the most important problem at the present time. In analyzing it we find four phases:

1. The making of the man.
2. The making of the doctor—undergraduate education.
3. His training and qualifications for specialization in surgery—graduate training.
4. The final step in the making of a surgeon—postgraduate study.

Let us keep these phases in mind during our discussion.

Cutler states that "the real education of the surgeon is a postgraduate affair." But this is true only in part. It overlooks the all important period of development which I have called "the making of the man." The importance of this has been appreciated throughout the ages. To quote Horace, "A cask will long retain the flavor with which when new, it was impregnated." And Kipling epitomizes the thought in opening his autobiography: "Give me the first six years of a child's life," he says, "and you can have the rest." It is the early formative years that have the greatest influence upon character formation.

That something is wrong with our system of education is emphasized by the words of notable contemporaneous educators. Sir Alfred T. Davies says, "We have so systematized our education that it has lost its soul. Intellectual curiosity has been destroyed and independence of character has been sacrificed for cleverness." And President Butler writes, "We must get rid of the notion that education is identical with instruction and that preparation for making a living is on the same plane as preparation for life."

We shall, however, pass over these inferences and direct our thoughts to medical education with special emphasis upon the preparation and qualifications to practice surgery. Thirty-five years ago "only 20 states had any requirements of general education whatever and only 10 of these required graduation from a high school. No state demanded any college training preliminary to the medical course which in many schools at that time was only three years in length."¹

A man with such meager preparation was legally entitled to undertake major surgery. There has, however, in this brief span of years been an astonishing advance in the requirements for admission to schools and their number has been reduced from 162 to 67 approved four to six year schools. It is generally recognized that "the undergraduate course of study can only begin the education of the physician, for he must remain a student all his life" if he is properly to fulfil his obligations.

"A widespread and permanent improvement in the quality of medical service cannot be secured until graduate medical education has been developed at least to the level of excellence of the better undergraduate courses" (Rappleye).

This desideratum is being approached in certain of the specialties which have organized national boards to establish the qualifications of the individual to practice a specialty and to make public those so qualified. Such a board in surgery has been established. We may justly hope that it will do much to improve the situation. If the present plans mature the College will be in a position to give invaluable co-operation.

This scheme is in keeping with an objective long held by the College. Indirectly, it will, as time goes on, improve the professional attainments of our fellowship, for in most cases it will constitute a hurdle which the aspirant will have taken successfully before entrance into the College. But it is not proposed that the College shall in any sense abrogate its right to determine the fitness of the candidates for its own membership. Special consideration must be given to attributes difficult to ascertain by the methods so far set up by these boards, such as judgment, integrity, and personal fitness.

The American Board of Surgery representing the various surgical organizations of the country proposes to initiate or expand in numerous properly equipped hospitals the training for several years of the graduate student under intimate control and instruction. This would constitute an apprentice type of experience and should embrace the fundamental sciences of anatomy, physiology, pathology, as well as the history of surgery.

The College has gone on record as whole heartedly supporting this enterprise. A Committee appointed by the Board of Regents on the Graduate Training for Surgery reported in October, 1935. This whole question is so important and is so little understood that it seems well to summarize this report which has contributed to important developments in surgical education.

The discussion was confined to the period in the development of a surgeon between the acquisition of his medical degree and his qualification as a surgeon; this may be termed the graduate phase as distinguished from the undergraduate and postgraduate. It was felt that intensive training involving much actual experience and responsibility and further study in anatomy, physiology, and pathology as related to surgery would most satisfactorily lead to the development of qualified surgeons. The required opportunities and facilities for such training exist only in a very limited number of teaching hospitals associated with schools of medicine. It was, therefore, recommended that non-teaching hospitals with proper personnel, plant, and organization be encouraged to undertake graduate training for surgery and that the College establish a minimum standard requisite for the approval by the College of such hospitals for training surgeons.

The report was approved and the committee was authorized to co-operate with committees of other surgical organizations in the development of a program in accordance with the tenor of this report.

But even when the young man with the background and training which is prescribed by the Board of Surgery launches upon his own, he cannot be considered a perfected product.

In this broad earth of ours,
Amid the measureless grossness and the slag,
Enclosed and safe within its central heart,
Nestles the seed perfection.

—Walt Whitman

Much in years and labor are required to smelt the slag and to free the seed of perfection from its enveloping husk of measureless grossness.

Hippocrates realized this in stating poetically, "Such, in effect, as is the culture of plants, is the study of medicine. Our natural disposition is the soil; the precepts of our masters are the seed; instruction, begun from childhood, is the sowing of the seed in proper season; the place where instruction is given is the surrounding air where the plants find their nourishment; diligent study is the hand of the workman; finally, time strengthens and brings all to maturity."

Graduate study must continue throughout life. In the past, opportunity for this has been largely restricted to foreign lands.

Even centuries ago students journeyed to Bologna, Padua, and Salerno. Through Lanfranchi, the Italian influence was injected into France. It was even then taught that "no one can be a good physician who knows nothing of surgical operations, and no one can operate who does not know medicine." It was through the universities at this period that the teaching of medicine was systematized and received its stimulus toward modern efficiency and graduate opportunity. During much of the 19th century English and Scotch students went to Paris, but later to Berlin and Vienna, which offered rich hospital and laboratory facilities. Our forebears, beginning with Morton and Bard, received their inspiration largely in the mentioned centers.

But the child has grown apace and surgery in America is now on a plane so high that we are no longer dependent to an appreciable degree upon outside resources for purposes of surgical training. Indeed the tide has turned and students from afar are coming to us in progressively increasing numbers. Technical developments and influences from all sources have been garnered and culled in the clinics of our country and the simplified net results have been transmitted to the individual surgeons throughout the land. There is now no excuse for a man who has had opportunity to do a reasonable amount of surgery to do poor surgery. In his early years, however, he may well be a menace if left to his own devices uncontrolled and without supervision. A large number, moreover, will always be mediocre, merely technicians. How he can be controlled and how more men can be lifted above mediocrity are problems for this College.

What is it that makes the great surgeon? To answer this one naturally attempts to analyze the characteristics of the masters with whom he has come in contact rather than those who have been analyzed and dissected by others. The outstanding and invariable quality has been that uncommon virtue termed common sense. Bull, Peck, McBurney, Richardson, Judd, to mention a few only, had a certain something, best termed a nice judgment. This quality is a gift from God and such men would probably have been equally competent in other walks of life. Such a man rarely gets himself or his patient into avoidable trouble and rarely makes unwise decisions.

Humanity and kindliness come next, which lead such men to think primarily and dominantly of their patient's welfare. John Hunter had these qualities to a supreme degree: common sense, modesty, kindliness and charity. Crabtree states, "His works were simply announced as by John Hunter. A plain door plate, with the same name, announced his residence. Money was a secondary consideration to him. To a poor tradesman from whom he had received 20 guineas for performing a surgical operation upon his wife, he returned 19 guineas, having learned with what difficulty and extreme self-denial the husband had raised the money. 'I sent back 19 guineas, and kept the 20th,' he said, in apology for retaining even the one, 'that they might not be hurt with an idea of too great an obligation!'"

Next, resourcefulness and courage but never rashness; that is, the ability to meet without loss of nerve unexpected and serious conditions, sometimes of his own making.

Technical skill and a scientific training are a sine qua non but are inadequate without the above attributes. Technique allows skillful routine work but alone it marks the artisan, not the surgeon.

These traits cannot be taught; they are God given.

Since the College cannot altogether change the type of man, extreme care must be taken to exclude the incompetent and the malefactor and to admit only those of ability and sterling character. "Only men who have given proof of their competency should be entitled to public recognition and trust as surgeons."

Among our 12,000 members mistakes have been made. This is past history. It takes time to develop a plan of certification. This is still being developed and each year the procedure is becoming more and more efficient. I venture to predict that in a very few years the decisions of the Credentials Committees throughout the land will meet with universal approval. Let me in this connection call to your attention a recent ruling in regard to the requirements for fellowship in the College.

Applicants for fellowship whose qualifying medical degree shall have been obtained after the date of January 1, 1938, shall be required to present evidence of having completed three years of hospital service in one or more hospitals approved by the American College of Surgeons for graduate training in surgery, of which two years shall have been spent in training in surgery. In the case of graduates of medical schools which withhold the medical degree until after a fifth year of hospital internship, the date set will be January 1, 1939.

In the development of modern surgery technical aspects progressed by notable stages. Speed was at first exploited. James R. Wood effected a thigh amputation in 9 seconds.¹ Then came the anatomical era, represented by such men as Frank Hartley. Each structure was carefully and laboriously outlined by sharp dissection. Halsted's example of prolonged meticulous dissection, careful asepsis and thorough hemostasis probably made the greatest impression on the surgery of today. Technique is now relatively standardized in two schools, one, silk and slow; one, absorbable material and measurable speed. Both insist upon the essential features, careful sharp dissection, hemostasis, asepsis and the minimum of irritating foreign bodies. It is no longer the technical but the mental supremacy that makes the great surgeon. It is the head, not the hand. Besides those general qualities which we have outlined, the competent surgeon must, besides clinical experience, have knowledge of pathology, physiology, general medicine, and psychiatry. Centuries ago it was said, "Only he who in himself unites medicine and surgery is a perfect physician. The physician who knows only one branch, is like a bird with only one wing." As to psychiatry, Bard remarked over 100 years ago, "The physician who confines his attention to the body knows not the root of his art. If he knows not how to soothe the irritation of a troubled and enfeebled mind, to calm the fretfulness of impatience, to rouse the courage of the timid, and even to quiet the compunctions of an over-tender conscience, it will very much confine the efficacy of his prescriptions; and these he cannot do, without he gain the confidence, esteem and even the love of his patients."

Culture and industry and constant study are essential. Rappleye tersely and idealistically summarizes the motives of our present education. "After all," he says, "the purpose of a medical training, broadly conceived, is to prepare a cultured and educated gentleman and not merely a technician."

To return to common sense; one must treat the patient, not the disease.

Can anything be more ill advised than to tell a 75 year old clergyman, whose only pleasure is smoking, that he must give it up because a small patch of leucoplacia may develop into cancer? This was done by an eminent specialist. The patient was advised otherwise and is still smoking at the age of 85.

Or can anything be more foolish than a six hour operation for advanced carcinoma of the breast on a woman of 79? In such instances the surgeon follows a rule of thumb method and does not consider the interest of the patient. He fails to grasp the all important axiom of Hippocrates, "to do good and to do no harm."

Suggestions are heard that something should be done to meet the urge of the medical man for a participation in the surgeon's fee. In other words a compromise.

¹Bradshaw, J. H. Master Surgeons of America: James Rushmore Wood. Surg., Gynec. & Obst., 1929, 48: 441-445.

One reads, "First, the economic maladjustment in medicine makes it imperative for the man in general practice to indulge in fee splitting or else it would not be as prevalent as it is. Second, organized medicine will never get anywhere by condemning the practice but must offer something constructive in its place." There should no more be a compromise in regard to this, than there should be a compromise with the man who kidnaps a child. The professional abortionist is less objectionable, to my mind, than the man who splits fees. While he is breaking his Hippocratic oath, he at least is doing something which he conceives to be right and for the welfare of the patient.

To the fee splitter may be applied the words of Hippocrates, "So false a judgment seems to me to depend principally upon this:—that the profession of medicine is the only one that is subject to no restriction or punishment, except disgrace; now, disgrace does not wound those who live by it."

The College is taking active and aggressive measures to eliminate the fee splitter and to clean up hospitals which are nests for these vultures.

Its Judiciary Committees and the Board of Regents have been particularly active during recent years in investigating and penalizing hospitals and individuals who have been found guilty of fee splitting and other breaches of ethics. There is a Judiciary Committee for every state and province, to which all questions of personal ethics dealing with Fellows of the College are submitted for investigation and report to the Regents. The mere knowledge of the existence of such a committee, with power to investigate and make recommendation, has had a very salutary effect in regulating local situations; and the plan in operation enables the College to act intelligently in dealing with undesirable Fellows, or situations which involve candidates or institutions.

The Clinical Congresses have become so successful that the clinics are often not able to accommodate the number who wish to attend. The Sectional Meetings which are miniature Clinical Congresses, five of which are held each year, will probably relieve this embarrassing situation.

Probably no activity of the College has been more effective and more productive of results than hospital standardization. It is distinctly an educational project and has affected profoundly the members of the hospital staffs. If the plans of the Board of Surgery materialize, such standardization will be an essential link in the chain.

We have discussed the five points which were enumerated as the purposes of the founders of this College. At this quarter century mark are there not other objectives to which the energies and resources of the College might be directed?

The historical aspects of surgery call for clear definition and statement. The College, through its Fellows and as an organization, should bring its influence to bear upon the young aspirants in surgery. It is a fault common to many organizations of "higher learning" that they more largely affect those who have "arrived" than those who are "on the way." The student in surgery, undergraduate as well as graduate, should be taught the history as well as the techniques, et cetera, of surgical practice. The College, by means of fellowships, prizes and awards, might well encourage the pursuit of the cultural aspects of surgery among the younger men.

The College is qualified to serve in the crystallization and guardianship of the highest and best traditions in surgery, which call for a continuous reiteration and restatement of the ideals of surgery and of the surgeon. In this commercial age it is especially important that conscious efforts be made to encourage ideals, develop character and support the highest professional standards. I have read the addresses of our former presidents and am much impressed not only by the number of distinguished men who have occupied this office but by the high ideals expressed by them as to the functions and future of this College. To be included in the list is an honor for which I thank you. I realize how inadequately I have filled the office. One is bound to make comparison with such a one as our late and much lamented President, Robert Greenough, who labored for the College with such sound and impartial judgment that he will ever live in the history of the College as a shining inspiration.

CLASS OF 1937

GEORGE CRILE, M.D., Chairman, Board of Regents: On behalf of the Board of Regents of the American College of Surgeons, I have the honor to present for fellowship in the College initiates as follows:

United States.....	487	India.....	2
Canada.....	24	Iran.....	1
Africa.....	1	Japan.....	1
Argentina.....	1	Mexico.....	1
China.....	2	Siam.....	1
Egypt.....	1	Syria.....	1
England.....	1	Venezuela.....	1
Total.....	525

There were 6,778 applications on file January 1, 1937. Of these, 1,409 were already approved by their State or Provincial Committees on Credentials.

During the year 1,367 were presented to State and Provincial Committees on Credentials. Of these 615, or 44.9%, were recommended. Of the total recommended for fellowship before and since January 1, 1937 (1,934), our careful sifting process has admitted to fellowship only 525, or 27%, constituting the initiates who are here present. Of the total 6,778 applications on file January 1, 1937, the 525 accepted initiates represent only 7.7% approved, or one in every 14 applicants.

Mr. President, inasmuch as the initiates herewith presented have fulfilled all of the requirements for admission and have affirmed the Fellowship Pledge of the American College of Surgeons, on authority of the Board of Regents of the College I take great pleasure in presenting them for fellowship.

PRESIDENT BESLEY: By and with the authority vested in me by the Fellows of the American College of Surgeons, I admit you to fellowship in the College with all of the rights and privileges pertaining thereto.

PRESENTATION OF HONORARY FELLOW

REGENT JOHN R. FRASER: Mr. President, on recommendation of the Board of Regents, may I present for Honorary Fellowship in the American College of Surgeons Mr. John Percy Lockhart-Mummery, M.B., B.Ch., F.R.C.S.(Eng.), London, England. Postgraduate Lecturer and Emeritus Surgeon, St. Mark's Hospital; Honorary Surgeon, King Edward VII's Hospital for Officers; Member, Association of Surgeons of Great Britain; Chairman of Executive Committee and Honorary Secretary, British Empire Cancer Campaign.

PRESIDENT BESLEY: By and with the authority vested in me by the Fellows of the American College of Surgeons, I admit you, Mr. John Percy Lockhart-Mummery, to Honorary Fellowship in the College, and to all of the rights, privileges, and distinctions pertaining thereto; and in testimony thereof, I present to you the diploma, bearing the seal of the College and the inscription of its proper officers. Let the candidate be invested with the hood appropriate to the Honorary Fellowship.

MEDICAL RECORDS HONOR LIST AND PRIZE AWARD CLASS OF 1937

ALLEN B. KANAVEL, M.D.: The Editorial Board of SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS is so heartily in sympathy with the program of the College and its demands that all patients should receive careful study, as evidenced by adequate records, that in 1930 it asked of the Board of Regents the privilege of presenting an annual prize in the form of a life fellowship in the American College of Surgeons for the most acceptable set of medical records presented by the candidates during the preceding year. The prize winners of the last seven years have come from Louisiana, Texas, Montana, West Virginia, Michigan, Alberta, and Michigan respectively. The prize consists of five hundred dollars, invested in the name of the successful candidate for life dues in the American College of Surgeons, and is accompanied by an appropriately engraved certificate of appreciation on behalf of the donor, SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS.

On behalf of the Journal, I transmit to you, Mr. President, this prize with certificates for the honor men.

PRESIDENT BESLEY: That fairness to the candidates may be assured, the College has been most careful to surround the choice with every safeguard. Of all the medical records submitted during the year, 27 medical records, outstanding because of their evidence of careful study of the patient, have been selected. These were examined by the full Committee of the College on History Reviews with the name of the surgeon and his address eliminated so that an unbiased choice might be insured. Six sets out of the 27 have been selected as the best, and the authors of these medical records placed on an honor list. May I ask each honor man to come to the platform as his name is read:

SIDNEY ROSENBERG, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

EDWIN M. JAMESON, Saranac Lake, New York

MARION W. COLEMAN, Dayton, Ohio

HAROLD CORNELIUS VORIS, Chicago, Illinois

SAMUEL G. MAJOR, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

On behalf of the College, I extend to each of you the congratulations of the Board of Regents upon the excellence of your medical records. This recognition of your work is an expression by the College of its belief that scientific investigation, careful records, and critical analysis of medical records elevates the standard of surgery and insures to patients the most efficient care. It is our hope that this expression of commendation may serve to stimulate others to emulate your example, advance the frontiers of surgical knowledge, and benefit those entrusted to their care.

On behalf of SURGERY, GYNECOLOGY AND OBSTETRICS and the American College of Surgeons, I present a certificate of honor to each of you. To you, Dr. Samuel G. Major, has been awarded the first prize, which I herewith transmit. I congratulate you.

CONVOCATIONS

THE first convocation of the College was held in Chicago on November 13, 1913. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Sir Rickman Godlee, Bt., K.C.V.O., LL.D., F.R.C.S., President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. Fellowships were conferred upon 1,059 initiates. Sir Rickman presented to the College the following greetings from the Royal College of Surgeons:

"We, the Council of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, have heard with much interest of the approaching inauguration of the American College of Surgeons. We hereby convey to it our hearty good wishes, and express the hope that it may have a successful career and fill a position beneficial alike to the Profession and to the Community.

"We cannot forget the important advances in the Science and Art of Surgery, achieved by many distinguished Surgeons in the Continent of America during the past, and are proud to have enrolled upon our list of Honorary Fellows the names of some of the most active workers in these fields at the present day.

"In accepting the invitation for our President to take part in the opening Ceremony, we desire to show how we appreciate the intention of the American College to strengthen the bonds that already unite the Medical Profession amongst English-speaking peoples. It is a sentiment which always meets with a cordial response in this country, and it is one which this College will endeavor to support by all the means in its power.

"In witness whereof we have caused the Common Seal of the College to be hereunto affixed this 9th day of October, 1913. President RICKMAN J. GODLEE FREDERIC EVE."

The second convocation was held in Philadelphia on June 22, 1914. Fellowships were conferred upon 1,065 initiates. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Dr. James G. Mumford of Clifton Springs, New York.

The third convocation was held in Washington, D. C., on November 16, 1914. Fellowships were conferred upon 646 initiates. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Dr. Edward H. Bradford, Dean of Harvard Medical School.

The fourth convocation was held in Boston on October 29, 1915. Fellowships were conferred upon 484 initiates. The Fellowship Address was delivered by President E. J. James of the University of Illinois.

The fifth convocation was held in Philadelphia on October 27, 1916. The Fellowship Address was delivered by President John H. Finley of the University of the State of New York, and fellowships were conferred upon 228 initiates.

The sixth convocation was held in Chicago on October 26, 1917. Fellowships were conferred upon 313 initiates, 37 of these being in the regular service of the United States Army and 25 in the regular service of the United States Navy. The occasion was a great military gathering, hundreds of medical officers being present on leave. The Fellowship Address, entitled "What Is the War About?" was delivered by Sir Berkeley Moynihan, K.C.M.G., F.R.C.S., Colonel in the Royal Army Medical Corps.

The seventh convocation of the College was scheduled to be held in New York on the evening of October 25, 1918. On October 12, because of the prevalence of influenza throughout Canada and the United States, the Regents considered it imperative to cancel the meeting.

In the meantime the surgeons from England, France, and Italy who had accepted the invitation of the College to take part in the Clinical Congress program had sailed for New York. These surgeons were Sir Thomas Myles, C.B., F.R.C.S., Dublin, Ireland, Honorary Surgeon to His Majesty King George, Consulting Surgeon, Irish Command, Member, Board of Consultants, British War Office, and Senior Surgeon, Richmond Hospital, Dublin; Lieutenant Colonel Raffaele Bastianelli, F.R.C.S., Italian Army Medical Corps, Rome, Italy, Associate Professor of Clinical Surgery, Royal University, and Surgeon-in-Chief, First Pavilion, Hospital Policlinico Umberto I; Major Pierre Duval, French Army Medical Corps, Paris, France, Consulting Surgeon to Seventh Army, Honorary Professor, Faculty of Medicine, Paris, and Surgeon to hospitals of Paris; Colonel George Ernest Gask, C.M.G., D.S.O., F.R.C.S., London, England, Consulting Surgeon, British Expeditionary Forces, Joint Lecturer on Surgery, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, University of London, and Surgeon-in-Charge of Out-Patients, St. Bartholomew's Hospital; Major George Grey Turner, F.R.C.S., Royal Army Medical Corps, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, Lecturer on Surgery, University of Durham, and Honorary Assistant Surgeon, Royal Infirmary, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; and Major Adrien L. P. Piollet and Major Henri Beclere, both of the French Army Medical Corps. Lieutenant Colonel George E. Brewer of New York, at the time in service in France, came with these guests as the official representative of the Medical Corps with the American Expeditionary Forces.

That the value of the messages which these surgeons brought from the allied lines at the front might not be lost as a result of the canceled meeting, the College arranged visits to as many of the surgical centers as possible. These visits included Washington, where the foreign guests were greeted by President Woodrow Wilson; Camp Greenleaf, Georgia, where approximately 1,500 doctors were in training; Minneapolis, Rochester, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and New York.

The seventh convocation was held in New York on October 24, 1919, when 325 initiates from the preceding year were formally admitted to fellowship together with 213 new initiates. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Sir Anthony Bowlby, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., F.R.C.S. of London, Senior Vice President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

The eighth convocation was held in Montreal on October 15, 1920, this being the first convocation to be held in the Dominion of Canada. Fellowships were conferred upon 691 initiates. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Sir William Taylor of Dublin, Ireland.

At the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 11, 1920, the first John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Sir Berkeley Moynihan, K.C.M.G., C.B. of Leeds, England. At the same meeting the Great Mace, described on page 170, was presented to the American College of Surgeons by the Consulting Surgeons of the British Armies in the World War.

The ninth convocation was held in Philadelphia on October 28, 1921. Fellowships were conferred upon 724 initiates. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Sir Harold Stiles, K.B.E., of Edinburgh, Scotland. An interesting feature of the convocation was the ceremony incident to the conferring of Honorary Fellowships in the Royal College of Ireland upon eight distinguished American surgeons.

The second John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Dr. William J. Mayo at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 24.

The tenth convocation of the College was held in Boston on October 27, 1922. Fellowships were conferred upon 756 initiates. Of these initiates, 661 were from the United States, 63 from Canada, 17 from Cuba, 13 from South America, 1 from the Dominican Republic, and 1 from China. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Professor Raffaele Bastianelli, F.R.C.S. (Eng.) Hon., of Rome, Italy.

The third John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Professor Bastianelli at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 23.

The eleventh convocation of the College was held in Chicago on October 26, 1923. Fellowships were conferred upon 531 initiates. Of these initiates, 453 were from the United States, 29 from Canada, 2 from the Canal Zone, 1 from the Republic of Panama, 11 from Cuba, 28 from South America, 4 from China, 1 from England, 1 from India, and 1 from South Africa. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Sir William I. de Courcy Wheeler, President of the Royal College of Surgeons, Dublin, Ireland.

The fourth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Dr. George Crile of Cleveland, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 23.

The twelfth convocation of the College was held in New York City on October 24, 1924. Fellowships were conferred upon 561 initiates. Of these initiates, 481 were from the United States, 18 from Canada, 1 from Alaska, 6 from Puerto Rico, 2 from Cuba, 2 from the Dominican Republic, 4 from China, 1 from Central India, 1 from the Republic of Panama, 14 from Central America, 5 from South America, 16 from Australia, 9 from New Zealand, and 1 from the Fiji Islands. The Fellowship Address was delivered by W. W. Chipman, Professor of Gynecology and Obstetrics, McGill University Faculty of Medicine.

The fifth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Mr. Norman D. Royle, M.B., Ch.M., and Mr. John I. Hunter, M.D., Ch.M., Sydney, Australia, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 20.

The thirteenth convocation of the College was held in Philadelphia on October 30, 1925. Fellowships were conferred upon 533 initiates. Of these initiates, 453 were from the United States, 9 from Canada, 1 from Australia, 3 from New Zealand, 2 from China, 1 from England, 1 from Ireland, 1 from Iran (Persia), 5 from Central America, 51 from South America, 2 from Cuba, 2 from the Dominican Republic, 1 from Mexico, and 1 from Puerto Rico. The Fellowship Address was delivered by The Right Hon. Lord Dawson of Penn, London, England, G.C.V.O., K.C.M.G., C.B., M.D., London, Physician-in-Ordinary to His Majesty the King.

The sixth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, Bt., M.S., F.R.C.S., of London, England, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 26.

The fourteenth convocation of the College was held in Montreal on October 29, 1926. Fellowships were conferred upon 448 initiates. Of these initiates, 421 were from the United States, 19 from Canada, 1 from China, 1 from Korea, 1 from New Zealand, 1 from Brazil, 1 from Cuba, and 3 from Guatemala. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Professor Sir Ewen J. Maclean, M.D., F.R.C.P., London, F.R.S., Edinburgh.

The seventh John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Archibald Young, Regius Professor of Surgery, University of Glasgow, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 25.

The fifteenth convocation of the College was held in Detroit on October 7, 1927. Fellowships were conferred upon 597 initiates. Of these initiates, 583 were from the United States, 8 from Canada, 3 from Cuba, 1 from the Virgin Islands, 1 from the Republic of Colombia, and 1 from Turkey. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Clarence Cook Little, A.B., LL.D., S.D., President of the University of Michigan.

The eighth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Sir John Bland-Sutton, Bt., of London, England, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 3.

The sixteenth convocation of the College was held in Boston on October 12, 1928. Fellowships were conferred upon 673 initiates. Of these initiates, 643 were from the United States, 11 from Canada, 1 from Australia, 1 from Bermuda, 4 from Brazil, 1 from China, 1 from Jamaica, 6 from Mexico, 2 from Newfoundland, 1 from Siam, 1 from Wales, and 1 from Argentina. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Dr. William J. Mayo, Rochester, Minnesota.

The ninth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Professor Vittorio Putti of Bologna, Italy, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 8.

The seventeenth convocation of the College was held in Chicago on October 18, 1929. Fellowships were conferred upon 669 initiates. Of these initiates, 642 were from the United States, 11 from Canada, 1 from Australia, 1 from France, 7 from Hawaii,

1 from India, 1 from Japan, 1 from Iran (Persia), 2 from South America, 1 from Siam and 1 from Puerto Rico. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Glenn Frank, Litt.D., LL.D., President of the University of Wisconsin.

The tenth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by D. P. D. Wilkie, M.D., F.R.C.S., of Edinburgh, Scotland, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 14.

The eighteenth convocation of the College was held in Philadelphia on October 13, 1930. Fellowships were conferred upon 654 initiates. Of these initiates 630 were from the United States, 20 from Canada, 2 from Hawaii, 1 from Mexico, and 1 from South America. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Dr. George Crile, Cleveland, Ohio.

The eleventh John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Professor George Grey Turner of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 13.

The nineteenth convocation of the College was held in New York on October 16, 1931. Fellowships were conferred upon 642 initiates. Of these initiates 619 were from the United States, 7 from Canada, 4 from Hawaii, 1 from the Philippine Islands, 1 from Alaska, 1 from Australia, 1 from China, 1 from England, 1 from Guatemala, 1 from India, 2 from Mexico, 1 from Panama, and 2 from Siam. The Fellowship Address was delivered by James R. Angell, LL.D., Ph.D., President of Yale University.

The twelfth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Arthur H. Burgess, LL.D. (Hon.), M.Sc., M.B., Ch.B. (Manch.), F.R.C.S. (Eng.), L.R.C.P. (Lond.), of Manchester, England, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 12.

The twentieth convocation of the College was held in St. Louis on October 21, 1932. Fellowships were conferred upon 633 initiates. Of these initiates 623 were from the United States, 2 from Canada, 1 from Alaska, 1 from Australia, 1 from Costa Rica, 1 from Cuba, 1 from Korea, 1 from Iran (Persia), 1 from Puerto Rico, and 1 from the Republic of Panama. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Robert A. Millikan, Ph.D., Pasadena, California.

The thirteenth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Sir William I. deC. Wheeler, M.S., F.R.C.S.I., London, England, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 17.

The twenty-first convocation of the College was held in Chicago on October 13, 1933. Fellowships were conferred upon 623 initiates. Of these initiates 597 were from the United States, 17 from Canada, 3 from China, 1 from Honduras, 1 from England, 1 from New Zealand, 1 from Iran (Persia), and 2 from Syria. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Robert Maynard Hutchins, A.M., LL.D., President of the University of Chicago.

The fourteenth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Dr. Loyal Davis, Chicago, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 9.

The twenty-second convocation of the College was held in Boston on October 19, 1934. Fellowships were conferred upon 590 initiates. Of these initiates 563 were from the United States, 4 from Puerto Rico, 12 from Canada, 1 from Nicaragua, 2 from China, 2 from Chosen, 1 from Bahama Islands, 1 from England, 2 from India, 1 from Syria, and 1 from Turkey. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Lotus D. Coffman, Ph.D., LL.D., President of the University of Minnesota.

The fifteenth John B. Murphy Oration on Surgery was delivered by Dr. Donald C. Balfour, Rochester, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 15.

The twenty-third convocation of the College was held in San Francisco on November 1, 1935. Fellowships were conferred upon 572 initiates. Of these initiates 553 were from the United States, 1 from Hawaii, 9 from Canada, 1 from Japan, 2 from China, 3 from Mexico, 2 from India, 1 from Syria, and 1 from Uruguay. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Robert Gordon Sproul, B.S., LL.D., President of the University of California. The first Annual Oration on Surgery of the American College of Surgeons, entitled "The American College of Surgeons—An Educational Institution; A Tribute to Franklin H. Martin," was delivered by Dr. George Crile, Cleveland, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 28.

The twenty-fourth convocation of the College was held in Philadelphia on October 23, 1936. Fellowships were conferred upon 520 initiates. Of these initiates 489 were from the United States, 1 from Hawaii, 11 from Canada, 3 from Puerto Rico, 1 from Africa, 1 from Argentina, 1 from Brazil, 3 from China, 1 from Chosen, 1 from Colombia, 1 from Cuba, 1 from Guatemala, 3 from Mexico, 1 from the Philippine Islands, 1 from the Republic of Panama, and 1 from Siam. The Fellowship Address was delivered by Judge Harold M. Stephens, Associate Justice, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The second Annual Oration on Surgery of the American College of Surgeons, entitled "The Formation and Treatment of Calculi in the Biliary Ducts and Gall Bladder," was delivered by Sir James Walton, M.S., F.R.C.S., K.C.V.O., London, England, at the presidential meeting of the Clinical Congress, held October 19.

The twenty-fifth convocation of the College was held in Chicago on October 25, 1937. Fellowships were conferred upon 525 initiates. Of these initiates 487 were from the United States, 24 from Canada, 1 from Africa, 1 from Argentina, 2 from China, 1 from Egypt, 1 from England, 2 from India, 1 from Iran, 1 from Japan, 1 from Mexico, 1 from Siam, 1 from Syria, and 1 from Venezuela. The third Annual Oration on Surgery of the American College of Surgeons, entitled "The Surgeon as a Biologist," was delivered by Mr. John Percy Lockhart-Mummery, M.B., B.Ch., F.R.C.S., London, England, at the presidential meeting and convocation, held on October 25.

ACADEMIC GOWN

The gown adopted by the Board of Regents to be worn by the Fellows at the convocations consists of a body of navy blue mohair faced with scarlet velvet. The mortar-board cap is of the same blue material, with a scarlet tassel.

THE GREAT MACE

PRESENTED TO THE AMERICAN COLLEGE OF SURGEONS
BY THE CONSULTING SURGEONS OF THE BRITISH ARMIES

THE Great Mace has been designed so as to tell in a symbolic way of the close union between British and American Surgery, and of the ties which unite Great Britain to Canada and to the United States of America. It retains the traditional shape and proportions of the Civic Mace of the seventeenth century, and is of hand-wrought chiseled and repoussé of silver gilt. It was made by Omar Ramsden, who embodied in his design some suggestions of the donors.

THE CROWN-SHAPED FINIAL is formed of six rich scroll buttresses upholding the "Sacred Flame of Science" issuing from a mortar of antique pattern, the model of which was recently found on the field of battle near Salonika. These buttresses spring from a cresting composed of alternating Maple leaves and American Eagles intertwined with the Serpents of Æsculapius, while the position usually occupied by a band of jewels in a monarchical crown is filled with the words "The American College of Surgeons."

THE BODY OR HEAD is divided into six panels by the Winged Caduceus, being an ornamental rendering of the badge of the United States Army Medical Corps. The panels set forth the following "Achievements at Arms" in delicate and finely detailed repoussé work:

1. The full Blazon of the United States of America.
2. The Dominion of Canada.
3. The Royal College of Surgeons of England.
4. The Badge of the Royal Army Medical Corps.
5. The Shields of Arms of John Hunter and Lord Lister.
6. A Cartouche bearing the words "Philip Syng Physick 1768-1837, Father of American Surgery."

The lower portion of the Head is decorated with a symbolic band of water indicating the ocean which both unites and separates America and the Mother Country. The latter is symbolized by the British Lion Brackets of highly chiseled work which support the head and terminate the upper part of the staff. The talons of the lion's feet grip the hammered decoration of the upper knop, which consists of a design of American and Canadian Maple seed-pods and heart-shaped spaces. This hammered work is protected by boldly projecting, solid jewel-like bosses of chiseled work.

THE STAFF is decorated with a free design of the national floral emblems of the United Kingdom—The Rose, the Thistle, the Shamrock, and the Leek. Intertwined among these are a number of ribbon scrolls, each one of which bears the name of one of the donors.

THE FOOT bears, as decoration, the root form from which the above spring and a series of six small shields which may be used for possible future arms of inscriptions. The extreme bottom knop is fluted with leaves of Isatis tinctoria.

The various parts are held together, in the traditional manner, by a rod of British Oak, cut from a tree grown at Wytham, Berks. The extreme length is 3 feet 11¼ inches, and the weight of silver is 140 ounces troy.

THE DEDICATORY INSCRIPTION engraved on the plate under the Crown sets forth that the Mace is a gift

"From the Consulting Surgeons of the British Armies to the American College of Surgeons, in memory of mutual work and good-fellowship in the Great War, 1914-1918."
